Cohasset Water Problems Ease With Reconditioned Standpipe

By Judith Epstein

The townspeople were getting nervous about the water. But they can relax now.

Edwin Pratt, Superintendent of the Water Department, said that "unforeseen, unexpected circumstances" hindered the project to drain, clean and paint the water standpipe on Bear Hill. The snags in the system were finally ironed out and drainage began this week.

Pratt began his explanation of the entanglements associated with the drainage with a brief overview of the dual purposes of the standpipe.

The water in the tank, Pratt said, is a constant fluctuating check on the expansion within the system and usually provides adequate water pressure to homes when the tank is full. Water comes to this tank from all sources of supply, largely Lilly Pond, and is essential for fire protection and use in any other emergency.

The standpipe was in dire need of cleaning because the inside epoxy coating was peeling. Pratt stressed that this lining is non-toxic and when it disintegrates, it merely drops to the bottom of the tank. The cleaning and scraping are preventative measures to curtail further erosion and rusting of the walls of the tank.

"We can do the job easier now than in the spring when there would be ice in the top of the tank," Pratt said. "We can't let it go any longer. It would cost twice as much next year." The project cost is

New Years At The Greenhouse

By Joanne Young

Sixty couples ushered in the New Year at a festive party held at the Greenhouse Restaurant in Cohasset.

A champagne supper at midnight, served on the first floor, was a buffet of coq au vin, seafood newburg, roast beef, ham, potato and tossed salad, assorted relishes and breads.

During the evening the guests enjoyed an open bar and a constant flow of hot hors d'oeuvres. The barmaids were cleverly attired in costumes of black tights, high heels, black satin tails and red ruffled shirts with black bow ties.

There was disco dancing in the Gazebo room, with the latest records mixed with the oldies but goodies which everyone could dance to. Michael Ellis was the disc jockey and had a popular selection of music. Mike is an enterprising ninth grade student at Cohasset High School and provides music for private parties around town.

Cohasset In '79, A Look Ahead

The new year always tempts us to formulate resolutions, bright hopes and promises. Sometimes positive thinking pays off;however, all too often it does not.

So, rather than trap the town officials in the inevitable white lies of false resolutions, I instead asked the people who run the town simply what it was they thought would or wanted to see happen in 1979. Here are some of the replies:

Arthur Clark, Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, says there will be some weighty decisions for townspeople to make at the annual Town Meeting. They will concern the new fire station, the renovation or construction of a new town hall and the possibility of a municipal garage. Clark sneaked in a resolution for a sweeter disposition.

Lester Hiltz, Civil Defense Director, feels that 1979 Cohasset concerns will include disputes over property taxes and disposal problems. Hiltz is in favor of a regional resource recovery program.

Treasurer/Tax Collector Gordon Flint would also like to see a newly constructed Town Hall. "We need a modern facility for both the taxpayer and administrator." Flint expressed regrets that Santa forgot to bring him a new electric typewriter.

Building Inspector/Zoning Officer James Litchfield wants more cooperation with builders over zoning bylaws. He reminded townspeople that Cohasset will be working under a new building code as of March 1. Personally, he plans to respond to a widespread request — a better Dale Carnegie approach. Said Litchfield in a diplomatic start, "With my new secretary I should have no problems."

Edwin Pratt, Superintendent of the Water Department, foresees "one of the finest water systems in the area — in both quantity and quality."

Planning to retire in 1979 is Police Chief Randolph Feola. Stress planning. Feola thinks things will get harder, "There is less money to do things. Budgets cost too much. It is difficult to give services." On press coverage, Feola feels that in the future all wrongdoing should be settled in the district courts, not in the press.

William Signorelli, Town Accountant,hopes to hold the tax rate for fiscal 1980; that is, to hold the present tax rate. "I think this would be most welcomed by the taxpayers. I think it's very possible." Also foremost in Signorelli's wants for the new year is the construction of a new town hall.

New Year's Eve At The Greenhouse

white tuxedo trimmed with brown velvet lapels, bow tie and cummerbund, and a ruffled shirt. His wife, Dorothy, was chic in a wine satin gown with a matching long coat. The most dazzling couple was Janet and Bill Ditman. Janet wore a white serge tuxedo with satin lapels, a black sequinned bow tie, and topped her outfit with a fedora. Bill was resplendent in a blue ruffled shirt, a grey tuxedo with black velvet lapels and a black velvet vest.

Satin was the most popular fabric and Linda Cuffman wore a white satin tunic. Bruce Cameron wore a taupe tux trimmed with brown velvet and Lois had on a magnificent tiered gown of floral pleated chiffon. The bottom layer could be detached to make it into a street length cocktail dress. Jane Ellis wore plum satin and Libby Wood was in a striking aqua velvet pantsuit with a silver sequin and pearl neckline.

Bennett Driscoll had on a traditional tuxedo and Betty was in a brown satin charmeuse. Bobbi Cox glittered in a black and silver metallic fabric gown. Claire Gavin was in a black silk crepe de chine sheath with red spaghetti straps and a multi-colored border. Don Kennedy's wife wore a luxurious peach georgette gown tiered with delicate beige lace ruffles. Jake Powers was very sporty in his Hatherly Country Club blazer. Bruce Cameron took pictures of the couples as they arrived at the Greenhouse, so they would have a permanent momento of the occasion.

NEW YEAR'S celebration is marked; at the Green House Restaurant by festive group while the "formally" attired gals behind the bar keep the cheer flowing.

Many of the party-goers made New Year's Eve resolutions, some traditional, others original. Mysteriously, Mary Kennedy made a resolution "never to do that again," but Claire Gavin vowed "to do it again". Bob Raffa's was to "stay healthy in the new year", and Ginny Delaney decided to "have more family discussions rather than communicating on an emotional level." Don Kennedy, of a third generation Cohasset family, wanted to "live in Cohasset a few more years."

Andrew Foster declared "I have no resolutions - I'm perfect in every way." Dr. Pozatek's wife decided to "be nice to my in-laws" and Jerry and Regina Schultz would "not have any more babies in 1979." Marily Fessler, fresh from the latest Patriot's game, resolved to "give up going to Patriot's games (until next year)" while her husband Dick is "going to give up elderberry wine." Ginny Johnson is "going to get organized" and Wayne Barcomb will "try to stay warm this winter."

Cohasset Water Problems Begin To Ease

Pratt explained that now is the best time of year for the seven to 10 day scraping and painting project because summer is the period of highest demand. However, he added, the seasonal potential for house fires that might and have occurred, especially the outbreaks on Jerusalem Road, have placed the Water Department "in a precarious position."

About three weeks ago, trial runs were started in draining the two million gallon storage tank for the first time in 14 years. Water pressure lowered, especially in the Hillside area of town, residents complained of discoloration and mains broke on South Main and Margin Streets as a result.

The Water Treatment Plant

The release of vast amounts of water, which end up draining by way of two fire lines into Lilly Pond, originally caused an excess of pressure in the lower elevations, hence the breaks in the mains. The telemeter, which records the height of the water in the tank, broke down also, so the plant had no way of monitoring water level. In addition to these problems, each of which took days to pacify, the engineers for the treatment plant, SEA Consultants Inc., had to be contacted to provide needed hydraulic information.

There are still some difficulties with pressure and discoloration, Pratt said. Discoloration is attributed in part to the current lack of pressure in places throughout the system, but also occurs with the changing of the water flow when the new treatment plant became operation last May.

Discoloration occurs from the accumulation of sediments at the bottom of mains which are byproducts of the water residents are using anyway, Pratt said, and is only aesthetically unpleasant.

"We've had a discoloration problem for years. The old plant was run far beyond its capacity," Pratt explained, but also noted that the Water Department has never had a citation from the state. "The mains in this system have to be rebuilt. They have deteriorated over the years."

The hillside area will probably still experience lower water pressure, Pratt said, even though the plant is being run 24 hours a day to maintain an adequate working pressure at Reservoir Road, Old Pasture Road and Pond Street. Conversely, simulating this pressure may exert too much on the system at sea level.

"We are relying on Scituate to take our expansion on their standpipes," Pratt said and indicated that Hingham would also assist in an overflow emergency.

Apart from the drainage project, residents have been concerned about the water mains which have been removed on the Atlantic Avenue Causeway to facilitate construction causing two "dead-ends" within the system.

"It isn't a good situation," Pratt said, "but it isn't a completely unheard of situation connected with a construction job." He explained that there are hydrants close to both sides of the Causeway which could be connected by a fire hose in an emergency.

So, while the water system in Cohasset is in a temporarily tenuous position, it is still functioning adequately.

The town was not remiss in supplying enough water to the Dec. 18 Jerusalem Road fire. The water problems wouldn't have made any difference in the fire, Pratt said. Just as mutual aid from the surrounding towns assists in the system's overflow so they automatically responded to the fire. "Chief Piepenbrink had as much water as he needed," Pratt said.

"We are in a transition period between the old and new," Pratt said. "People will have some inconveniences until all the problems are solved."

Cohasset has the nucleus of a new water system, the water treatment plant and, before long, the standpipe will be as good as new, too.

Selectmen May Release Feola Minutes

Last week Selectmen indicated they may release the executive session minutes concerning the case of Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr.

Feola was suspended for five days without pay by his father, Police Chief Randolph Feola, for "poor judgement" in connection with allegations of motor vehicle violations.

Selectmen held at least two executive sessions to discuss the case, once with Chief Feola present. Police reports of the Feola incident were also brought before the Selectmen. All the information may be made public if the minutes are approved by the Selectmen.

There was some confusion at last week's meeting as to when exactly the executive sessions were held. Apparently the executive session minutes that were available had not been typed for the Selectmen's perusal. Selectmen therefore decided to defer a decision to release the information until this week when they would obtain an opinion from Town Counsel on what they are obligated to release.

Town Counsel Blake Thaxter had not handed down a definitive opinion on the matter as of late last week. Selectmen, however, said they were in favor of releasing whatever communications enter their office.

School Costs

School administrators and educators in general should take another look — a closer look — at the relationship between class size and scholastic achievement. One basic question should be addressed:

What students benefit the most from smaller classes? Certainly ALL students do not.

Several months ago the Educational Research Service of Arlington, Va., made a survey based on extensive research. This report did not get the attention it deserved.

The report clearly showed that teachers and administrators are often on the wrong wave length when they reach conclusions about class size.

The ERS survey suggests that primary grades benefit most from small classes in the teaching of reading and mathematics. The report further suggests that within the middle range [25 to 39 pupils], class size seems to have little effect on learning above the primary grades. The survey concluded that a variety of factors, apart from mere class size, determine the benefits of lowering class size.

These factors include not only the grade level of students, but also their abilities. For example, pupils with inferior abilities benefit more from smaller class size than those with average abilities. Other factors are subject matter, techniques used by teachers, and the availability of sophisticated kinds of instructional material.

What is the bottom line? the ERS survey strongly suggests that school officials should get away from rigid numerical standards and move toward more complex guidelines to establish class size. School officials, we repeat, should concern themselves more with the basic and supervening question: Which type of students might benefit the most from smaller classes?

The problem locally differs from that in other Massachusetts communities where there is declining enrollment. In many communities class size is an undisguised economic issue. Some town and school officials see declining enrollments as an opportunity to reduce the number of teachers without adversely affecting the academic program by increasing class size. But that is not precisely the way teachers and administrators see the problem.

Teachers, especially, see the whole thrust as a threat to their jobs. They argue from the contention that declining enrollments give school systems a rare opportunity to reduce class size, thereby improving the educational program.

But note carefully. Whatever economic motivations on either side color the debate, both administrators and teachers base their arguments on the rigid notion of a direct relationship between class size and scholastic achievement, even when this a scholastic achievement, even when this is a faulty assumption.

Thus they are guilty of a costly oversimplification. As we have pointed out, small class size is desirable in the primary grades for certain subjects taught. Above the primary grades that advantage is lost, and any arguments to prove the contrary will raise the tax rate.

Local $ Sought For Harbor Dredging

Selectmen voted last week to seek an appropriation at Town Meeting to cover the town's share in completing a dredging project in Cohasset Harbor.

The Department of the Army Corps of Engineers have indicated that there are six separate areas within the harbor in six-foot anchorage that are above the project depth. Contractors would be unable to remove these shoals with dredging equipment.

To determine if the remaining material contains ledge rock it will be necessary to obtain borings. If the suspect areas contain ledge rocks, drilling and blasting will be required, with disposal of material at Boston Harbor Lightship offshore dump site.

After a settlement of claims by the original dredging contractor (Halloran Construction Co.), there remains approximately $15,700 of unobligated contributed funds which could be applied to the removal of the remaining material.

Local cost sharing for the project amounts to 44 per cent of the cost of completion. The current estiamte for completion is approximately $130,000. Thus, the additional funds needed will be $41,500.

The January thaw (actually the Dec 31st thaw(gave John Sturman a chance to read the Sunday paper at Sandy Beach. (Derr)

Cohasset Hockey Team Beats Cassidy

Cohasset's hockey team balanced its record at 1-1 last week by defeating Coyle Cassidy, 4-3.

Over the first two periods, the Skippers outshot Coyle 28-7 only to trail 2-0 after one period.

But in the second period, Cohasset rallied with four goals while blanking the opposition.

Larry Evans got the first Skipper goal assisted by Tim Smith. Joe Durkin got the tying goal assisted by Dom Campedelli and Andy Pottenger.

It was Evans again with the go-ahead marker on a feed from Durkin and Tim Smith got the icer assisted by Evans and Mike Nedrow.

Time O'Connell turned in some key saves staving off Coyle until giving up a goal with only eight seconds left.

Cohasset High Wins 2 Out Of 3 In Whirlwind Schedule

By Steve MacQuarrie

When the National Basketball Association decided to add another professional team, they might consider this year's Cohasset High squad. No, the Skippers aren't quite that good, but they certainly can compete with the pros in a whirlwind schedule. Despite a sadistic schedule which had them playing 3 games in 44 hours last week, the Skippers were talented and persistent enough to win two of them — over Chatham, 63-55, and over Blackstone-Millvile, 77-50. In fact, they came within a few minutes of a three game sweep before bowing to highly regarded Nauset, 72-65.

The Chatham win on Thursday night and the Nauset loss on Friday night came in the Cape Cod Invitational Tournament. The opening game was largely decided in the second quarter when senior Brian Keating and junior Mark Goff outscored Chatham 17-10 to send the Skippers into the locker room with a 35-18 half-time lead. Keating finished up as the game's high scorer with 28 points, while Goff had 12.

In the tournament finale, host Nauset took an early lead and held it until late in the third period when Goff and co-captain Matt Salerno led a Skipper surge that lifted Cohasset into a 51-49 lead at the end of three quarters. But when 6'3" Keating and 6'5" Paul Farren were dismissed for incurring five fouls, the game was lost as well. "We just couldn't compete with both our big men out," said Coach John LeVangie. Nevertheless, LeVangie termed the game "probably our best of the Year. In fact, it was one of the finest high school games I've ever seen — few turnovers, high shooting percentage, just a well-played basketball game."

LeVangie's discouragement at losing should be tempered by the fact that Nauset was ranked in the top 10 among Eastern Massachusetts small schools in pre-season polls. Goff and Salerno were Cohasset's high scorers in defeat, with 18 and 17 points, respectively.

After spending Thursday night on the Cape, the Skippers returned to Cohasset and dragged themselves into Sullivan gym for the Saturday game with Blackstone-Millville. They had one good quarter of basketball left and they spent it immediately. Co-captain Paul Farren led by example, scoring Cohasset's first 10 points and igniting a five minute scoring streak in which the Skippers outscored the Chargers, 20-0. At the end of the quarter, Cohasset's lead was 26-6. LeVangie was able to rest his starters to open the second period and for much of the game.

Farren used his height to good advantage over the smaller Blackstone-Millville players, finishing with 25 points and 20 rebounds in just 20 minutes of playing time. Blackstone-Millville got as close as 12 points once, but an 11-0 Cohasset streak at the end of the third quarter secured the game for the Skippers.

Despite the score, Cohasset played sloppily against their weakest opponent thus far. But that's hardly surprising in the third game in 44 hours. After the game, LeVangie echoed that feeling and added, "I could use a rest, too."

The Cohasset coach will get his wish as his team is idle until Friday night when the Skippers match their 5-2 record against Hull.

Selectmen Dismiss Ainslie Case

Selectmen voted 2-0 last week to absolve Auxiliary Officer Lawrence Ainslie, Jr., of the charges brought against him in a recent hearing.

Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray moved to take no action against Ainslie who had been charged with unauthorized use of police files and the police log, improper dress, unauthorized use of a police radio and failure to make himself available for assignment. Chairman Arhtur Clark voted in favor of the motion, while Selectman Henry Ainslie abstained in the decision on Ainslie, his nephew.

Lawrence Ainslie was present for the decision. After the vote, Murray warned him, "If the director (of Civil Defense) has any problems with you, then I will have to do a lot of serious consideration to make that kind of motion again."

Murray said later that she made the motion in part because "things were not presented through the proper channels." She also indicated leniency toward the charge of unauthorized use of a police radio. "We're all human and apt to forget to bring something back that we said we would," Murray said. She also noted that Ainslie had put in a long night at both a house fire and car accident — factors which she felt understandably delayed the return of the radio.

Sgt. John Rhodes of the Police Department submitted a letter to Selectmen reiterating his stance that he was "merely sustaining a fact" in substantiating the charges brought against Ainslie by Lee Adnrews, Captain of the Auxiliary Police Force.

Rhodes stated, "I do not now nor had I before any intentions of making a recommendation as to a course of action against Ainslie."

According to all parties involved, the case is closed.

Class II Car License Sought

Selectmen took under advisement last week a request from Robert McElaney of Hingham to sell used cars at the Village Service Station at 16 Depot Court.

Co-owners of the station said their principal business contains three service bays and one aisle for pumping gas. They also own the lot adjacent to the service station and wish to park a maximum of five cars to be sold there.

The lot can hold seven cars, McElaney said, and is used regularly for parking by people who work in the Village.

Selectmen will make a decision on the request this week after inspecting the property.

Sharing a common desire to see the remodeling or preferably an altogether new town hall is Town Clerk Charles Marks. "I'd also like to see more people turn out for Town Meeting. We don't get a good percentage of the voters anymore."

Postmaster Gerard Keating looks to 1979 with much excitement for the experiment E-COM, Electronic Computer Originated Mail, to be used initially for businesses. "A strong effort will be made to increase efficiency to avoid any further rate increases in the near future. All of the postal employees of the Cohasset Post Office join in sending our sincere best wishes to both our customers and your fine newspaper for much success and happiness in the New Year."

State Representative and Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray wishes happiness and very good health for everyone. "We've got to get the government off our backs, control our own municipalities and somehow reduce taxes."

Harry Ritter, Harbor Master, wants to see the boat tax made more equitable. He also wants a more flexible attitude from the Conservation Commission on wetland protection, particularly for the salt marshes on Bailey's Creek.

Fewer fires, continued cooperation among the towns, and a new fire station on Route 3A are hoped for by Charles Piepenbrink, Chief of the Fire Department.

Superintendent of Schools John Maloney wishes to maintain the quality of education in the Cohasset public school system with a zero increase budget. He would also like clarification of state reimbursements to local school system and fully funded state mandated school programs.

The Mariner wants to thank you all for the thoughts, speculations and prophesies. Nobody can see beyond the moment, but we certainly hope that your comments for the new year come true.

By Judith Epstein

around town

A first child, a daughter, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Nardo, Jr. of Main Street. The baby's name is Andrea Lee and her grandparents are Mrs. Vincent Nardo, Sr. of Cohasset and Mrs. Francis O'Neil of Hingham.

We welcome all newcomers to Cohasset in the New Year and wish you many years of happiness in our town. One item you may find indispensable is the Rotary Club telephone directory and buyer's guide. It's a great help in finding local services and new neighbors. 1979 is the 33rd year that the Rotary Club has sponsored its memorial scholarship and loan fund. Over $50,000 in grants have been made to Cohasset High School graduates to help finance their higher education. Others have been assisted with interest-free voluntary repayment loans totaling more than $25,000. These programs are financed by the directory, which may be obtained at the Rotary building offices on Elm St.

A luncheon was recently held at the Pleasant Street home of Mrs. Frederic Wood to plan the Thayer Academy Parents Club annual fashion show, which will be held in March. Co-Chairman of the evening is Mrs. Howard Coughlin, and other committee members are: Mr. Edward Douglas, Mrs. Joseph Klier of Old Coach, Mrs. Frederick Thayer, Jr. and Mrs. Terrence White of Jerusalem Rd., and Mrs. Donald Wright. The show will be "An Evening With Fiandaca," and wine, cheese, dessert and coffee will be served.

Ten-month-old Chloe Johanna Chittick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S.W. Chittick of South Main Street was christened at the Unitarian-Universalist Church on the Common.

At the Winter Ball 1978, held at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel, Alice McVeigh, daughter of Mrs. S.H. McVeigh of Atlantic Avenue, was a member of the receiving line. Also attending was the Bleakie family, Howard, Max, Michael and Gail, who dined at the Somerset Club before the dance; Mrs. Bleakie attended a dinner party hosted by Dean Edmonds at the Ritz Carlton. Ned Guild was among the escorts at the Winter Ball.

Dan and Marcia Ladrigan of Chief Justice Cushing Highway and their son Scott, who attended the Joseph Osgood School, are living on their ketch "Sea Trek," a 50-foot gaff-rigger, in St. George, Bermuda Harbour. Scott is being tutored by his parents during their nine-month sea journey, which will also take them to the Bahamas, St. Maarten and Antigua. The "Sea Trek" has an auxiliary diesel engine and sleeps nine. Tom White crewed on the trip to Bermuda. The Ladrigans plan to return to Cohasset in June, when they will take charter parties to sea.

Dramatic Club winter play, "Room Service" were recently held at Town Hall. The Mark Brothers starred in the movie version of this show in the forties. Rehearsals will begin this month and the play dates are Feb. 15, 16 and 17. All persons interested in working on the play as stage manager, secretary or props may call Ron Massa, the president of the Club, at 383-0490.

Deborah Lincoln Thaxter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Blake Thaxter of South Main Street, was graduated with honors from Smith College and recently passed the Mass. Bar. Miss Thaxter selected Northeastern Law School because of its unique work-study program and spent one work break in Florida compiling legislation to support the migrant workers, and another as clerk in the office of a Washington, D.C. woman district court judge. While in law school, Miss Thaxter was head of the Moot Court, which is Northeastern's equivalent of Law Review, the journal of current legal theories and historical analysis. She also appeared on "Mass Reactions," a Boston TV show in which she sat on a panel with a professor and two judges to discuss the court systems in the state. She is currently associated with the Boston law firm of Hausserman, Davidson and Shattuck and is married to Chauncey Depew Steele, III.

Carzis Holds Sixth Christmas Dinner For Seniors

By Joanne Young

For the sixth consecutive year, John Carzis, owner of Hugo's Lighthouse, has hosted the Christmas Day Dinner for 500 senior citizens.

The Catholic Charities group arrived by bus at Hugo's, a Cohasset landmark, and enjoyed dinner and festivities. Auxiliary Bishop Hart of the Boston Diocese attended the dinner and gave the Benediction. Msgr. Eugene McNamara, head of the Bureau and Judge John Fox were present as they have been in past years. The Boston Mayor's Council on the Aging paid for the bus trip and the drivers volunteered their services. The rest of the day, as always, was underwritten by Mr. Carzis. The whole production is a labor of love by many Cohasset townspeople.

The joy of giving was in evidence in the James Lagrotteria family: Greg, Jim, Tom, Mary, Annemarie, Johnny and Christine. Mr. and Mrs. John Durkis and their children Patti, Marita and her friend Seanna O'Leary, Laura and Joe worked in the kitchen with John Bennett, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Austin O'Toole and their twins Lisa and Lynn, and Clover and Scott were busy in the kitchen and serving in the diningroom was Robert O'Hare.

The Benjamin Curleys and their family, Linda and Jimmy were among the first to arrive and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Gilmore were joined by his mother Mrs. Helen Gilmore of Greenwich, Conn. Mr. and Mrs. Clark Chatterton served dinner along with their children Kim and Troy. Mrs. Frank Chatterton, whose husband was the late rector of the Second Congregational Church, was serving with Anita Bernstein and her son Philip.

Ann Pompeo and her children Jeanine, Karen, Laura and Holly also served dinner with Lawrence Figueiredo, an employee of Hugo's and John and Doris Golden with their children Karen and Cari. Janet Ditmar and Julie and Joy also worked in the diningroom with Mary Leavitt and Edward Breen.

The dishwashing crew was ably directed by Rocco Laugelle with assistance from Ed Mulvey, president of the Pilgrim Bank, Dick Mulligan, Charles and Rose Pape and Jack Burke. From Hingham came James Magner and his son Richard and daughter Sister Mary Magner SSJ of Newton. Steven Hirsh, Steven Teixeria, manager of Kimball's and George Fleming arrived from Cape Cod.

Sheldon Sladen transported Santa Claus in his boat "Beachcomber." This year low tide forced a town landing arrival, but Harry Ritter, the Harbormaster, who was the jovial Santa, was as comfortable on land as at sea.

A Hugo's Tradition

The dinner menu was chicken soup Plimouth, roast stuffed native turkey with chestnut dressing and giblet gravy; whole cranberry sauce, candied sweet potatoes, whipped potatoes, butternut squash, toasted almonds, June peas and fresh mushrooms. Dessert was pumpkin pecan pie and beverage.

The 500 guests went home full of good cheer, good food and good will toward all the volunteers who made a happy Christmas Day possible. Each guest was presented with a scroll and a gift with the best wishes of John Carzis, who could not be present this year because of recent surgery; but he called Joanne Winters, his function manger and asked her to extend his message to the invited guests.

It read, "Ladies and Gentlemen: On behalf of the management and all the fine people who voluntarily came here to serve you, we extend to you a hearty welcome with our sincerest best wishes for a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. May we also express our thanks to you and say that nothing could have made our Christmas happier than you wonderful people who have come to be with us today."

After the guests departed, the volunteers were served Christmas dinner and all agreed the day shared was one to remember with the words of John Carzis, "May peace be your gift at Christmas and your treasure throughout the New Year." Cohasset is very proud of its loving and sharing neighbors. A very Happy New Year to John Carzis and his generous-hearted staff for sharing the true spirit of Christmas.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Sooner or later — mostly sooner — the young person who is "batching" it, (or whatever it's called when a girl has her first apartment), becomes aware of a basic truth — that it's cheaper and they'll eat better if they learn how to cook. All too tempting is the convenient frozen dinner or a sub from the corner deli. But seven nights later, there's a big chunk gone out of the food budget. How much better to approach the kitchen armed with a cookbook such as the 'Fannie Farmer Boston Cooking School Cookbook.' A Sunday afternoon spent preparing a few dishes for the coming weeks saves both time and money. Into the freezer go the leftovers. Like money in the bank, they'll come in handy some other day. Texas Hash may be made in an electric skillet or a casserole. Chop:

1 onion
3 stalks celery

Melt in skillet:

1 T butter

Add onion and celery and cook until soft. Add:

1½ lbs. chopped beef

Cook and stir til brown. Add:

1 c. cooked rice
1 c. canned tomatoes

Cook and stir over low heat 15 min. Season to taste with Worcestershire, Tabasco or chili sauce. Serve 4.

Sixteen pairs of little hands worked busily to prepare the cookies and breads for the fellowship hour which followed the Family Christmas Service at North Community Church. All were elementary school age enrolled in the Cooking Class taught by Ellie and Dick Hoehn of the Sunday School staff. What they didn't eat went into the freezer for all to enjoy after the Pageant Class performed in a church hall decorated by the Christmas Art Class. After studying in the Bible about the staff of life and learning what breads are native to foreign lands, the parish house kitchen came alive with the fragrance of such loaves as this Apricot Bread, a recipe from that wonderful book 'Coffees with a Flair' prepared by the North River Arts Society.

2/3 c. dried apricots
1⅓ c. milk, scalded
2/3 c. grapenuts
1 egg, well beaten
3 T melted butter, cooled
2 c. sifted flour
2/3 c. packed light brown sugar
2½ tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt

Cook apricots only half as long as directed on package. Drain, cool and cut in pieces. Pour scalded milk over cereal, add apricots and cool. Stir in egg and shortening. Mix dry ingredients and add to cereal. Stir only enough to dampen flour. Pour into greased 8 x 4 x 3" pan. Bake for 1 hour, or til cake tester comes out clean. Cool in pan 10 min., then cool thoroughly before wrapping. Bread slices better the second day and freezes nicely. If you have no one around with whom to share your loaf, freeze half for later.

Men have such a nice way of simplifying things. Thoreau was right when he wrote: "simplify, simplify," for it saves those precious commodities, time and energy. Bob Emerson rescued his wife, Sue, from a round of the meat markets looking for a special cut of meat by merely picking up the phone. He suggests that a call to your local butcher describing the cut of meat you need will find it ready and waiting when you arrive to pick it up. That's the pleasant experience they had when preparing for a recent dinner party, but all you'll need for this old-fashioned English supper dish is a pound of sausage from your butcher. Called 'Bubble and Squeak,' it's easy, cheap and tasty; what more could you ask?

1 lb. cooked sausage meat
2 c. cooked, chopped cabbage

Pour over top 2 cups of cream sauce. Sprinkle with bread crumbs. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 min. Serves 4.

Knock.

Almost 2000 years ago a meek and lowly prophet made a promise to the people of Israel.

He said, "Knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

It seemed like a simple promise. And yet down through the centuries people from every corner of the earth have discovered that within those eight words is an awesome power.

A power that can transform a life into something new.

A power that can lift men, women and children above the conflicts they face each day.

A power that can give an everlasting, inner peace.

It's the power to reach God through His only son, Jesus Christ. And it's freely given to anyone who knocks.

For you it can mean new direction. A fresh and unique way of handling the situations that life presents. A security you've never known before. A rock to stand on.

All you've got to do is give God a chance. And you can do that by attending The John Wesley White Crusade.

Forget what you think you know about crusades. This one will be different.

Because John Wesley White and his team will touch your heart with contemporary music and penetrating comments on the world today. All for free.

Many of your questions about the life of Jesus, the Bible, and how to bring God's power into your life will be answered in a moving way.

And there may come that one inspiring moment. That moment you'll relive every day. That unforgettable moment when God first touches your life. Once He does, you'll never be the same... because once is forever.

Fifth Grade Teacher And Music Classes Cut

School Board Reduces Staff

By Judith Epstein

The School Committee voted last week to further reduce the teaching staff after considering the personnel section of the proposed 1979/1980 zero increase budget.

A fifth grade teacher was unanimously voted to be cut from the Deer Hill School, a reduction from six to five teachers, as moved by Committee member Patricia Walsh. Walsh said that the present fourth grade enrollment of 129 students managed with five teachers, and that next year, as the fifth grade, should be able to do the same.

Supt. John Maloney refuted this rationale, "The Deer Hill had been experiencing an immigration pattern. I suggest that we maintain six teachers because of this factor." Maloney exp[illegible] new enrollments could cause increases of 11 to 18 students.

Committee member Frank England said the integration factor may have been true some years ago but he didn't see any evidence of it continuing. Walsh also commented that she knew of two families with many children that were moving out of town.

Also unanimously voted, as moved by Walsh, was the further one-fifth reduction of a vocal music teacher. The position is to be divided between both the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood schools as decided by the administration.

Walsh defended this motion by a comparison of the time allotted students for

More Water Complaints Come In

Selectmen heard water complaints last week from Janet Figueiredo and Margo Aikens, residents of North Main Street, concerning discoloration and lack of hot water.

Mrs. Figueiredo claimed that the chemicals and sediments in town water have continually clogged the coils of the "tankless" element of her oil burner which heats her hot water. She said her oil company, ALCO, informed her that 15 new coils have been installed recently to other customers in town.

Both residents claimed that they have experienced aworsening of the hot water problem in the last two months and desired explanations. They noted that they were on the end of a water main on North Main Street and could understand problems with pressure or even discoloration. The hot water deficiency drove them to the Selectmen's office only after receiving three unsatisfactory answers from the three water commissioners, they said.

Selectmen Mary Jeanette Murray expressed annoyance at the number of reasons given the press and residents for water difficulties. She and Clark voted to request from the Water Department an explanation in writing concerning the origins of the problems.

Clark later acknowledged that "sedi-

Selectman Release Reports On Feola Case

Selectmen Tuesday released the executive session minutes and police reports concerning incidents involving Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr., on the morning of Oct. 14, 1978.

The minutes included the Nov. 29 account of the Selectmen's executive session meeting with Police Chief Randolph Feola. During this session, which concerned the allegations that Patrolman Feola had been involved in a high speed chase through Scituate, Chief Feola defended his son. He stated that Feola, Jr., was not inebriated as reported, was unobserved driving a Pontiac Firebird in Scituate, and therefore found no case against him.

Selectmen told Chief Feola they wanted to see reports from all the officers involved in the case. Sgt. Richard Barrow, shift supervisor and officer most directly involved, had submitted a three-page report to the Chief on Nov. 1. This report and three others written by Patrolmen Clifton Jones, Richard Churchill and David Pomarico substantiating Barrow's remarks were later submitted to Selectmen. (Copies of the Nov. 29 executive session minutes and Sgt. Barrow's report appear inside.)

At the Nov. 29 meeting, Chief Feola said that there was animosity in the Department toward him and his son and that he would also submit a report explaining this discord. This report was apparently never written as it was not among the reports released from Selectmen.

Selectmen, at a Dec. 6 executive session, decided that a hearing would be held on the matter, although actual minutes of the session weren't available as the recording secretary had gone home at the close of open session at 10:15 p.m.

A paragraph at the bottom of the regular meeting minutes indicated that at 10:30 p.m. Selectmen voted to

A Mother's Musical Magic

By Nina Belsan

Of the many sounds that tease our senses during the holiday season, music is the most pervasive.

Musak accompanies us down the aisles of department stores as we shop and around our desks as we work. Our car radios relay the message that there's no place like home for the holidays and that good will toward men is still on the top ten. "Sleigh bells ring" and we can't help but listen.

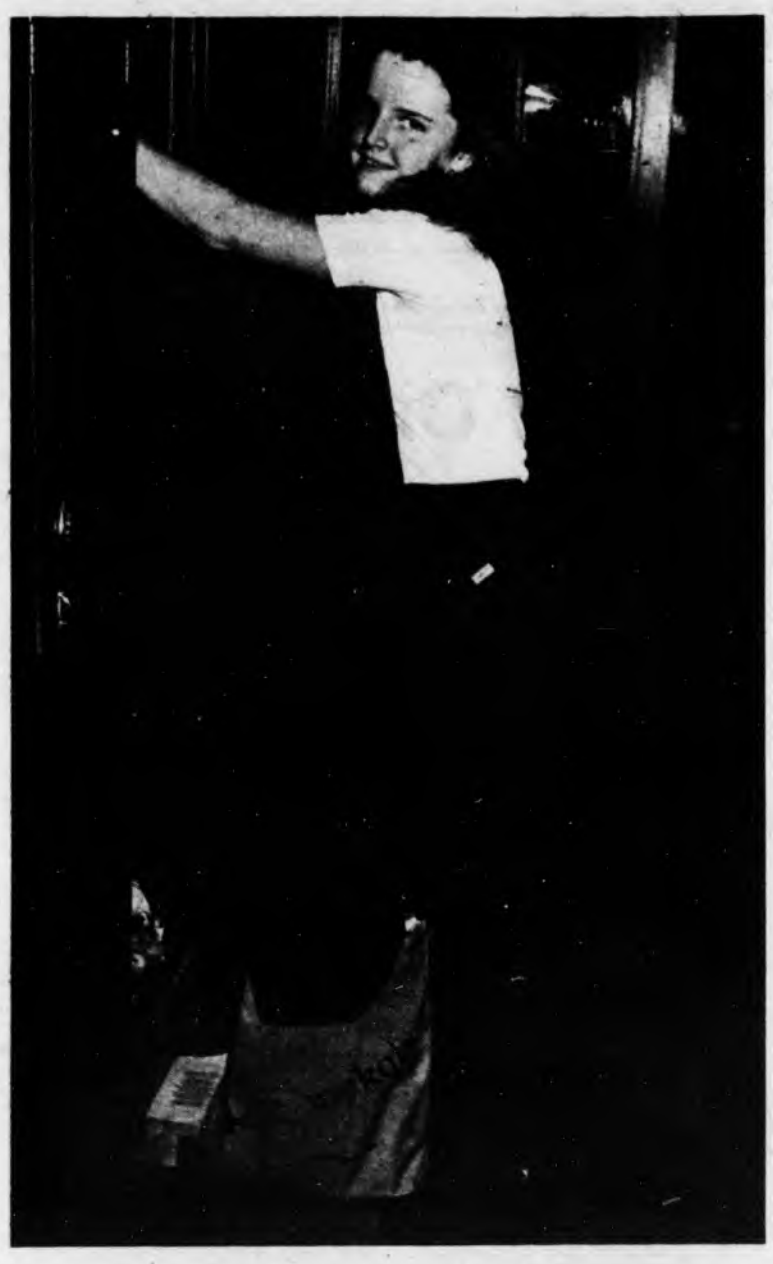
But there is one kind of music some of us associate with the holidays that is not pleasant; it does not convey peace on earth and quite frankly all but destroyed my holiday joy. That kind of music arrived on the scene when the college kid came home, bringing with him those tapes I thought had found new ears to deafen.

His own stereo is at school but his sister has her own now, a present from Santa who was silly enough to think that the Electric Light Orchestra couldn't strike twice in the same place.

Unfortunately, there is no possible way a turkey can be stuffed to the strains of Pink Floyd. Moreover, the stuffer becomes so inflamed with the violence of the music, that she brutalizes the stuffee. The frenetic music disposes hand and mind to follow suit and the result is too much salt in the mashed potatoes and not enough cinnamon in the apple pie.

The aboriginal cadences overcome the cook, affecting not only her psychomotor parts but her speech as well. So that, when asked why dinner isn't ready she'll reply "Tough," with missing a beat.

Rhythm is the only constant in the music that mesmerizes today's youth. Meaning and melody are incidental to the overpowering beat that pervades the college dorms and the homes of the nation. But the tempo they find perfect to study by is too fast to stuff a turkey by, too fast to type by, too fast to paint a ceiling by and too fast to thread a needle by. In short, it's not good for much of anything except to frazzle nerves by.



The inherent characteristics of rock and roll which by all rights should be called rack and maul (as in torture), are bad enough but become worse when the volume is turned to crescendo and the plaster on the newly painted ceiling starts to crack. Their hearing, perfect in the sixth grade, deteriorates by the eighth, so that they "can't hear the music" unless it breaks the crystal on the dining room table.

During this difficult time, those ancient hipsters, the parents, have little recourse but to rock and roll with the punches of soft, hard, country, acid and punk, hoping that the stereo will break in the process.

There is, however, another solutio.. to the musical catastrophe that assails some households during the holidays. Beethoven and Bach may not be on the top ten but some of us still have their records.

To be kind, we start with an hour of soft Strauss and ease into country Dvorak. By the time we finish with acid Wagner and punk Bartok, they have the nervous twitches and we have dinner on time and the satisfaction that some music hath charms to prove the average feast tastes better when cooked in the classical manner. . .with the stuffing in the bird and the pumpkin in the pie.

The library hopes you will be present to hear what Healy has to say and to discuss with him this extremely important institution in our democratic society.

Zoning Changes

Zoning Officer James Litchfield has submitted a letter to the Planning Board recommending revisions of the zoning bylaws.

More Water Complaints

ment is a big problem" and that it is possible for chemicals in the water to get cooked into the inside of heater coils. Clark, as a plumber and ex-water commissioner, explained that any one or a combination of reasons could cause townspeople to lose their hot water.

"People don't understand the fundamentals of plumbing," Clark said. The temperature in a boiler has to be 180 degrees and the temperate and metering valves have to be working correctly, he said of some of the factors involved in the proper functioning of a hot water heating system.

Other reasons given for recent troubles were the cleaning and draining of the town's water standpipe and the fact that the Scituate line connecting the two systems had to be opened to take excess flow.

The necessity to flush the water mains in the antiquated system and the reversal of flows from the installation of the new water treatment plant last spring were also given as reasons for discoloration and presence of sediments in the water.

Murray said at last week's meeting that she had been told eight years ago by Edwin Pratt, Superintendent of the Water Department, that the pipes in the system were to be replaced over a period of years.

Pratt responded this week to the brouhaha, "I can show you that the majority of people have nothing wrong with their water." He said he had 2000 accounts who were perfectly happy with their water and the rest were "a loud majority." Of the problems facing the residents on North Main Street he had no comment.

Pratt explained that the treatment plant monopolized the Department's time and money for the past 10 years and explains why new pipelines have not been installed in the system. The system will need some flushing when the Scituate valve is shut off after the standpipe cleaning project is completed. He predicted that by next Tuesday morning water will start filling the tank again and that normal pressure will return.

Collins On CCC Board

The Cohasset Community Center Board of Directors has approved the nomination of Peter Collins to its board.

In other business, Jim Drysdale, chairman of the bowling committee, reported that contracts have been given out for work for the refurbishing of the bowling alley. Work to be done will include a new ceiling, overhauling the pin-setters and refinishing the alleys.

Judy Volungis, program director announced that the Winter Program Schedule is ready to go to the press and will be released shortly.

Muddied Waters

It would be reassuring to declare the confusion over in the case of Patrolman Randolph Feola Jr.

Unfortunately, there is little evidence that any such reassurance is justified. With the release this week of police reports and executive session minutes on the Feola case, one might have assumed the mysteries of two weeks ago would now be solved. A naive assumption, hindsight tells us. The waters in the Feola case still run muddy.

For those of you who may have been abroad over the past two weeks, Patrolman Feola was suspended for five days by his father, Chief Randolph Feola, for using what was called poor judgement in a motor vehicle violation on the morning of Oct. 14. The details of that incident and the part involving Ptl. Feola are outlined in a report from Sgt. Richard Barrows that appears elsewhere in this week's Mariner.

Okay, so much for the preliminaries. Now it is time to move on to the questions...

1. It would not be hyperbole to suggest that Sgt. Barrow's report, outlining charges of a high speed chase, driving under the influence and driving the wrong way on a street, was most damaging to Ptl. Feola. Why then were no charges made, particularly when Sgt. Barrows was told by Chief Feola to lock up Ptl. Feola if he "was doing anything wrong?"

2. Since Sgt. Barrows made no charges, why were none forthcoming from the Chief? Why especially when, according to the Barrows report, he was at the scene on Elm Street where Ptl. Feola was reported driving on the wrong side of the street?

3. Why are there reports on the incident from Sgt. Barrows and others on duty at the time and none from the Chief? According to the Nov. 29 minutes of a Selectmen's executive session, Chief Feola agreed to issue a report of his own "that would show there was animosity toward both he and Officer Feola Jr. by certain members of the Police Dept.?"

4. What animosity?

5. The recorded minutes of the Nov. 29 executive session, though sketchy, were made available. The minutes of a Dec. 6 executive session on the same subject weren't made available because they don't exist. Why not? If the secretary had to leave, as has been explained, why weren't the minutes kept by one of the Selectmen?

6. Why was a hearing on the subject called by Selectmen then so abruptly canceled?

7. Why do so many unanswered questions lead to a whitewash of the entire affair?

The Feolas, along with other members of the Police Department, and Selectmen are annoyed with all the splashy attention this case has received. The public is annoyed as well but for quite different reasons, we suspect, and that brings us to this final observation.

Had all parties been more forthright from the start,this entire quackery could have been avoided. Ptl. Feola claims to have been maligned in print. He has, but that's in part because the entire affair developed so many tangled webs.

He should have been charged from day one and allowed to plead his case in court. Otherwise the case should have been dropped cold. If a suspension were merited, it should have been issued by Selectmen — the town's chief executives — and not by the accused's father.

This is all hindsight, of course, but it offers some solid lessons. And if it has to happen again, let it be handled without the bungling that marked this sorry business.

Changes For Town Hall

Commentary

By Gilbert Tower

Prior to about the year 1855 the Academy Building stood where the present Town Hall is now. The Town Hall has now existed for about 135 years. The academy was moved across the field to Beach St. where it was converted into a residence.

In the new building the Town Hall, for town meetings, was on the second floor, where it was reached by a broad flight of stairs from the lobby. In the first floor was the High School which succeeded the Academy.

The High School continued to occupy the first floor for about 43 years, until 1898 when the Osgood School was built.

The Cohasset Free Public Library then moved into the first floor where it continued for about 25 years, until the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Building was built. Cohasset was growing and Mr. Edward Stevens was employed to help the Selectmen as Town Accountant.

He had to have a room to work in near the Selectmen's Room, but the second floor was Town Hall. At the same time the Dramatic Club was very active. They induced the town to make the first floor an auditorium with a stage, a scenery space above the stage, dressing rooms below the stage and storage of scenery in the basement.

To make these building changes, George F. Newton, Cohasset architect, removed the second floor and put in a steel structure to support a new second floor. There are now steel trusses enclosed within the plaster partitions of the second floor, resulting in rooms for town officials. It would be impractical to remove those steel trusses and floor beams, so that the second floor will have to remain unchanged, about the way it is. It has been reported that Mr. DeCicco, State Building Inspector, mentioned that the town would get into no end of difficulty if it tried to make changes in the present building.

It has occurred to the writer that the situation is similar to adressmaker's job of making over an old dress. It can be successfully made over once, or twice, but after that the wisdom of making it over again has been used up. The time has come for a new dress, or a new building.

Our Town Hall building has now served the town well for about 135 years. No one could have expected it to do any better than that. Depreciation in value and obsolescence have been at work so that not much money value remains.

The Town Hall Building Committee in its report to the Selectmen missed the point of what it wanted to accomplish. It continues to use the second floor for town officials. Instead of that the intention was to move the town officials down to the ground level where they would be most accessible to elderly people and citizens wishing to confer with Selectmen, and to pay their taxes to the collector. What is contemplated now is a small one story building without basement to be located at the southeast side of the Town Hall Parking Lot.

It would provide a new room for the Selectmen and spaces adjoining for town accountants, Collector and Treasurer, Town Clerk, Assessors, Building Inspector and computer. They would be a team for the administration of town business. The rear wall could be temporary for future expansion.

It is proposed that the present Town Hall Building be continued unchanged. The rooms on the second floor will serve for town committees, including the Planning Board. It will do no harm to let the long stairways remain. Committee members have managed to climb them for years and can continue to do so. The first floor can continue to be used for hearings and by the Dramatic Club.

Another saving can be made in the cost of the fire-proof vault for current town records. The Town Clerk needs considerable space for maps and plans. With automatic sprinklers the whole new building will be immune to fire. One room can provide more ample space than a vault.

The next thing needed from the architect is a layout plan for the new Selectmen's room and spaces for officials, the scale to be 1/2" or 3/4", also an estimate of cost for the new building. It is visualized that it could be something like the Cohasset Post Office, or the A & P and arranged something like the Cohasset Savings Bank. The cost would be moderate and it would not hurt the town. Valuation is increasing and will continue to increase. Let's build something new that the town will be proud of and will be an inspiration to town officials who will work in it. Few buildings will permit competititve bids. On the other hand, the cost of changing the present building would probably turn up into a lot of money.

The proposed new building will not change the appearance of the common to any very noticeable degree. On the other hand it would probably be an improvement to the street because it would partly fill in a vacant space between the Town Hall building and the residence beyond the parking lot.

It could be colonial in style, consistent with the other buildings around the common. As one thinks further about the proposal the more sure one becomes that a new building will be the answer to the problem, letting the present Town Hall building continue unchanged to be used as previously mentioned.

PROJECTIONS WANTED

The Capital Budget Committee wants a description from Selectmen of capital outlay projects which would exceed $5,000 over the next five years.

DEFICIT ANTICIPATED

Town Accountant William Signorelli anticipated a deficiency of approximately $5,000 through the end of the fiscal year in the Police Department overtime account.

DECISION ANNOUNCED

A decision from the American Arbitration Asssociation denied a grievance by Sgt. Richard Barrow of the Police Department concerning what he claimed to be the improper posting of a shift change within the force. Both the Police Association and the town will divide the Arbitrator's Bill of $775.

PLANS HEARD

Attorney David Sweeney introduced John Pictour of Scituate to Selectmen to inform them of his client's plans to open a car rental business on Rte. 3A. Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray advised Pictour to consult the Board of Health concerning the property's septic system. Pictour indicated that he plans to apply for a special permit from the Board of Appeals to operate his business in the residentially-zoned area.

PERMIT GRANTED

The Board of Appeals granted a special permit to Wayne and Jane Robbins of North Main Street for a 25-car parking facility at the Robbins' Garage. The permit was granted to eliminate congestion on their property. Wrecked and derelict vehicles will be removed from the premises.

LICENSE DENIED

Selectmen voted against granting a used-car dealer's license at the Village Service Station on Depot Court. The license was denied because the adjacent lot to be used for parking the vehicles was deemed too small and because a used car business there violated zoning bylaws.

REAPPOINTMENT

Selectmen have reappointed Nathaniel Bates as the representative from Cohasset to the Metropolitan Area Planning Council.

School Board Reduces Staff

music periods in neighboring school systems and the conclusion that Cohasset gave considerably more time. She felt that the music staff had not been correspondingly reduced with declining enrollments. Aside from vocal music, she said, students at Deer Hill can elect instrumental music and band.

England made a similar motion to split an art teacher between the two elementary schools, but that vote was defeated, 4-1. England also suggested several strategies to cut art staff; elementary school teachers could take on the teaching of both music and art and high school personnel could be shared with the lower grades.

Maloney responded by pointing out the difficulty of scheduling "a three and four track program" at the high school which would be further complicated by travel time a teacher would need to go back and forth between schools.

"If we are able to offer culturally good classes, we have to have the teachers available in the schedule when the students are. It is not feasible for good instrumental purposes."

The necessity of art programs in the lower grades was outlined by guidance counselor Jack O'Leary who said that motor and perceptual skills and difficulties were often picked up and remedied in art classes. Maloney added, "Art awareness and creativity has to start in the elementary school, not secondary school."

Another motion by Walsh to reduce second grade staff from four to three was defeated by a 4-1 vote. The motion was not well taken by both members of the Committee and administrators present at the meeting. Committee member Jack Langmaid, Deer Hill principal Kenneth Eckberg and Joseph Osgood principal Jack Creamer all referred to research that had substantiated the importance of a low pupil-teacher ratio in Grades 1 and 2. Walsh said she knew the motion would not pass, but considering the dropping enrollments in the lower grades, staff reduction at the second grade should at least be consciously acknowledged.

Several comments were made that the budget was not really zero budgeted because $21,000 had to be additionally allocated to cover salary increases for non-union employees and heat, electricity and high school maintenance costs.

Business Manager John Raftery indicated that the latest staff reductions will save approximately $16,000, now leaving the budget $5,400 over the zero increase goal.

You may forget his face, but you'll never forget what he had to say.

His name is John Wesley White. And if you bumped into him tomorrow afternoon, you'd probably think of him as an average guy.

He's a quiet, unassuming man. And yet, when he stands before a crowd, the words that flow from his mouth move people to new heights of inspiration.

Thousands have listened to him speak. And thousands of lives have been affected by what he had to say.

But he'd be the first to tell you that the power that transforms people does not belong to him.

As electrifying as it is, it's not his style of speaking that brings new meaning to the lives of his listeners.

In fact, it's nothing he does on his own. Because John Wesley White long ago gave himself to God...so God could speak to others through him.

He's a vessel, a channel through which the power of God can touch your life.

It happens everywhere he appears. With a beautiful blend of lively music and enlightening talk, John and his team bring people to a true understanding of how God can work in their lives. All for free.

And as thousands are discovering today, that understanding can give you a fresh and unique way of handling the situations you face.

It can give you real, lasting fulfillment, and the deep inner peace that everyone seeks.

Come to the crusade, every night or any night, and you may experience that one unforgettable moment when God first touches your life.

Once it happens, you'll never be the same... because once is forever.

Once Is Forever.

The Feola Case

The Report From Police Sgt. Barrow

(The following report to Chief of Police Randolph Feola was submitted by Cohasset Police Sgt. Richard Barrow. Ed.)

On October 14, 1978 while on 12 midnight to 8 a.m., as Shift Supervisor and on motor patrol in car 17 in Precinct 1, I received a radio transmission at about 6:05 a.m., at this time I was on Border Street in the Cove section of town. The transmission was from headquarters and was as follows — Scituate Police Department in pursuit of a bronze colored Firebird Pontiac headed north on Rte. 3A at a high rate of speed.

I then headed towards town via Border Street to Elm Street then Brook Street to South Main Street to North Main Street, making observation of this area for the above described vehicle. When I reached North Main Street, I received another transmission at about 6:08 a.m. that Scituate car 423 had lost vehicle in area of Lower King Street.

At about 6:15 a.m., I received another call from headquarters that Scituate car 423 reports motor vehicle he was chasing is now in square, at this time my location was on Elm Street near Flemings Hardware Store. I observed the Scituate car coming out of Brook Street onto Elm, I stopped and Officer Coltin in car 423 advised me that the car was parked at the Texaco Gas Station.

I proceeded to the above location and observed a bronze Firebird Trans Am Pontiac, Mass. reg. number 9446, known to me as the property of Andrew C. Paton, 364 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, parked on the property of Texaco Co. on South Main Street. I pulled up in front of this car and the Scituate car 423 pulled up with his head lights on the operator. I got out of the cruiser and at this time the Pontiac was percolating and I could smell the motor to indicate to me the car had been driven at very high speeds, a very short time ago.

I went to the operator's side of this car and found the person sitting behind the wheel, Randolph A. Feola, Jr. In the passenger side was Robert A. Paton, 364 Jerusalem Rd., Cohasset, date of birth 7-19-61 (age 17). The Scituate officer, Richard Colton, also got out of his cruiser and walked over to the Pontiac, he observed the operator to be Feola, Jr. Feola stated to me that he had been there for the past 10 or 15 minutes.

I then informed him that I had checked that area seconds after receiving the radio transmission and the car was not there. Officer Colten then got back in his cruiser in disgust and left headed up South Main St. towards Scituate. A few seconds later I received a radio call from headquarters. Officer Colton requested I meet him at our headquarters. I went to the station and talked with Officer Colten. He, at this time, related to me in the presence of Officers Jones, Pomarico and Churchill that he was traveling about 110 mph and the above car just left him.

A few minutes later Robert Paton came into the station and was asked for his license and registration by Officer Colton, he refused and left with Feola operating the Pontiac. I then requested Patrolmen Jones and Pomarico in car 14 to have Randolph A. Feola Jr. to come to the station that Officer Colton, Scit. P.D. wanted to talk with him. At about 6:25 a.m. I called the Chief regarding the above and requested his presence at the station re. above, he said he would be right down.

At about 6:35 a.m. Feola Jr. came in, he at this time stated to Officer Colten and I that he was the operator of the Pontiac in question, and said he was not on Rte. 3A. At this time I could see Feola Jr. was under the influence of intoxicating liquor, strong odor of alcohol coming from his breath, unsteady on his feet, slurred speech. I then went to the pat on car rear of the station and at this time Robert was in the passenger side of vehicle, I observed a bottle half full of Heineken Beer on top of the console. I returned it to the station. I could smell an odor of alcohol coming from Robert Paton's breath.

At about 6:40 a.m. Chief Feola came into the station, he was informed of what had gone on from 6:05 a.m. to now. At this time Randy Jr. pointed to each of us individually and stated he was not afraid of any of us and he was going to go out and get in the car and if we wanted him that we could go after him. His father at this time stated to him that he would be locked up. Chief then took Randy Jr. and Officer Colton into his office. At about 6:55 Officer Colton left the station and returned to his patrol.

At about 7 a.m. Randy Jr. left the station and walked to the Texaco Station where his van was parked. Shortly thereafter, Officers Jones and Pomarico resumed patrol.

They had just left the station when they radioed the station that the van owned and being operated by Feola Jr. was headed toward the cove on Elm St. near Flemings Hardware on the wrong side of the street, this transmission was heard by the Chief and he stated he would go to the scene and take care of same. The Chief picked up his son and the van remained there for some time.

I have ordered full reports from the following Officers — Clifton B. Jones, David Pomarico and Richard S. Churchill, all Officers on duty at the time.

The Executive Session Minutes

Executive Session: November 29, 1978, 9:08 p.m.

Present: Board of Selectmen, Chief Randolph A. Feola.

The Board of Selectmen went into Executive Session.

Chief Feola was present and the Board questioned him regarding allegations that Officer Randolph Feola, Jr. had been involved in a high speed chase by a Scituate officer and regarding his behavior at the Police Station.

Chief Feola told us that he had received a telephone call at approximately 6:30 a.m. from Sgt. Barrows about Officer Feola, Jr. and he gave Barrows orders over the phone to lock up Officer Feola, Jr. if he was doing anything wrong.

Barrows did not do this. Chief Feola said Officer Feola, Jr. claimed he had not been on Rte. 3A where the chase was supposed to have occurred, but had driven the car belonging to a juvenile on South Main Street.

Chief Feola said that in his opinion Officer Feola, Jr. was not under the influence of liquor, and further there were no witnesses to Officer Feola, Jr. driving the car, and that was the reason why Officer Barrows had not arrested Officer Feola, Jr. as he had no case against him. Chief Feola said he planned to punish Officer Feola, Jr. by taking away three days with pay for meretorious service in solving a rape case in which he had spent much of his own time breaking the case that led to the solving of other rape cases.

Selectman Ainslie questioned whether he as Chief had the right to give time off with pay.

The Board of Selectmen told the Chief that they wanted a full report from all the officers involved in the case.

The Chief agreed to get these reports and would also give a report of his own that would show there was animosity toward both him and Off. Feola, Jr. by certain members of the Police Department.

The Board of Selectmen adjourned the Executive session and resumed the open meeting and then adjourned the open meeting.

Selectman Release Reports On Feola Case

return to open session; at that time it was voted to hold a hearing concerning Patrolman Feola Jr.

Patrolman Feola subsequently requested a suspension with pay of which he served three days pending the results of the hearing. That hearing, however, was cancelled as Chief Feola handed down a five day suspension without pay to his son as a punishment for the alleged violations.

FEOLA'S STATEMENT

Patrolman Feola responded with a statement Tuesday morning, shortly after the release of information from the Selectmen's office.

"I can assure you that I plan to pursue every means within my power to not only stop this foolishness and expose the reasons and people behind it but also to be cleared, at least legally, of all I've been accused.

"I have been persecuted, prosecuted, tried, found guilty, punished and made the subject of ridiculous cartoons without being able to say one single word in my own defense. At least Joe McCarthy held trials before a person was crucified in the press.

"I have nothing further to say and all further proceedings will be in front of a judge. That should eliminate closed telephone sessions and give the press a fair chance to start out with what is really said and then they can mangle it on the way from the court to the printing press."

And Now Comes Exam Time

CHS News

By Jocelyn Kennedy

It's January. Mid-terms are approaching. Most students are ecstatic— four months behind them. Others are disappointed — five months are lying in wait ahead. The weather adds that degree of discomfort. The trees provide little scenery. Yet, the sun still shines and children come in from the chilly outdoors with rosy cheeks and windblown hair. Christmas has ended and everyone is now settling back in their warm houses-in short-life goes on.

However, there is one group of people who are becoming increasingly nervous, restless, and worried. Applications, essays, interviews, fees, and long trips are in the process. So much to be accomplished in so little time.

These people are the Seniors. They are preparing for college. For many, the fall of 1979 will be a tremendous change, an unknown step. Sure, there's reassurance, everyone has been through it. Yet, the question is "WILL I BE ACCEPTED?"

A Senior's year, although thought of by many as a fun-filled, easy going, joy-ride-certainly is not. There are many major steps to be taken, and a variety of obligations. There's the planning of the yearbook, the organizing of the prom-and most importantly, college preparation.

There are those who send off their material promptly, intending to be accepted on an early decision program. These people must submit all their recommendations, a complete portfolio, by various deadlines in November. A few of '79's lucky Seniors accepted on the early decision program are: Arthur Glasfeld (Carleton), Jonathan Foell (Brown), Linda LaBreque and Diane Maloney (Ithace), David Gunville (Stonehill), and Barbara Taylor (Endicott). Many others are still waiting for their "Early acceptance" letters. Others mourn over deferrals. Hope remains, however, as these deferral applications are considered again for regular admission.

The rest of the Seniors decided to apply by the latest deadline, February or thereabouts. Final acceptances from the colleges arrive somewhere between March and April. So; the low, serious discussions continue. Panic escapes; "It's January, all my applications aren't in yet!" Slowly, the days creep by-time continues, concentration is low in the classrooms.

There's still the class play to think about-will the yearbook ever become organized? CHS seniors bite their lips, tap their fingers, furrow their brows-for something that seems so unimportant to many college acceptance is by far the uppermost thought in every 12th grade head at this very moment.

Skippers Pull Out Squeaky 62-60 Win Over Hull

By Steve MacQuarrie

They didn't look too impressive doing it and it took them a pair of overtime periods to do it, but Cohasset was just strong enough to eke out a 62 - 60 win over a surprising Hull team last Friday night.

The Skippers were plagued by their poorest shooting performance of the year, as they got plenty of opportunities to shoot over and inside Hull's 2-3 zone defense.

They were equally inaccurate from the foul line, converting only 45 per cent of their charity attempts while Hull was sinking 75 per cent of theirs. The Skippers did manage a 23 -21 halftime lead, but then needed a 15 point second half performance from co-captain Paul Farren and a last minute basket from Brian Keating just to tie the score at 50 and send the game into overtime.

In the first overtime, the Skippers shot off to an early lead, but a Hull hoop in the dying seconds made it 58 - 58, requiring a second 3 minute session. Here Farren opened the scoring to give Cohasset another lead, and co-captain Matt Salerne put the game away as he bullseyed 2 free throws after stealing a Hull pass.

The Pirates' junior center Brian Donahue bedeviled the Skippers all night, finishing as the game's high scorer with 33 points. The textbooks claim that a more equitable distribution of points. should prevail and with four players in double figures - Farren (19), Keating (16), Mark Goff (12) and Salerno (10) - Cohasset proved the point.

The win pushed the team's record to 6 - 2 and Cohasset Coach John LeVangie, who is, ironically, a guidance counselor at Hull High in his other life, is beginning to think about qualifying for the state tournament, a feat which has been accomplished only once before (1972), at least so far as anyone around CHS can remember. The Skippers need to win 8 of their remaining 12 games, or finish second in the South Shore League to qualify. With four players - Keating, Farren, Goff and Salerno - averaging in double figures along with senior guard John Hawley to get them the ball, and a strong bench, the chances are good.

Next home game is against Norwell tomorrow (Friday) night.

Hull Dunks Girls Quintet

Hull handed Cohasset's girls basketball team a 50-27 win last week.

Jodi Sandblom led Skipper scorers with seven points and 12 rebounds before retiring on fouls.

The Skippers record fell below .500 to 2-3.

Skipper Six Chills Duxbury, Chilled By Holbrook

Double Hat tricks by Joe Durkin and Tim Smith propelled Cohasset's hockey team to a 9-5 victory last week over Duxbury.

The Skippers continued to get off the mark slowly, a factor of which Coach Ed McDermott is concerned.

In the pre-season Cohasset had to fight back from a 5-1 deficit to tie 6-6 They again had to fight from a 4-1 deficit last week after two periods with a five goal third period effort.

Duxbury led 2-0 before Durkin got the first of his three goals.

Duxbury then moved to a 4-1 lead.

In the second period, Durkin connected again, and Doug Dillon scored to pull within 4-3.

Durkin was turned back on a penalty shot but compensated with the tying goal on a feed from Dillon and Smith in the same period.

Larry Evans got Cohasset's first lead goal in the third period, but Duxbury tied it at 5-5.

Cohasset then lit the lamp four times — three by Smith in the period and the last by Andy Pottenger to pull it out.

Holbrook Game

Nothing is forever.

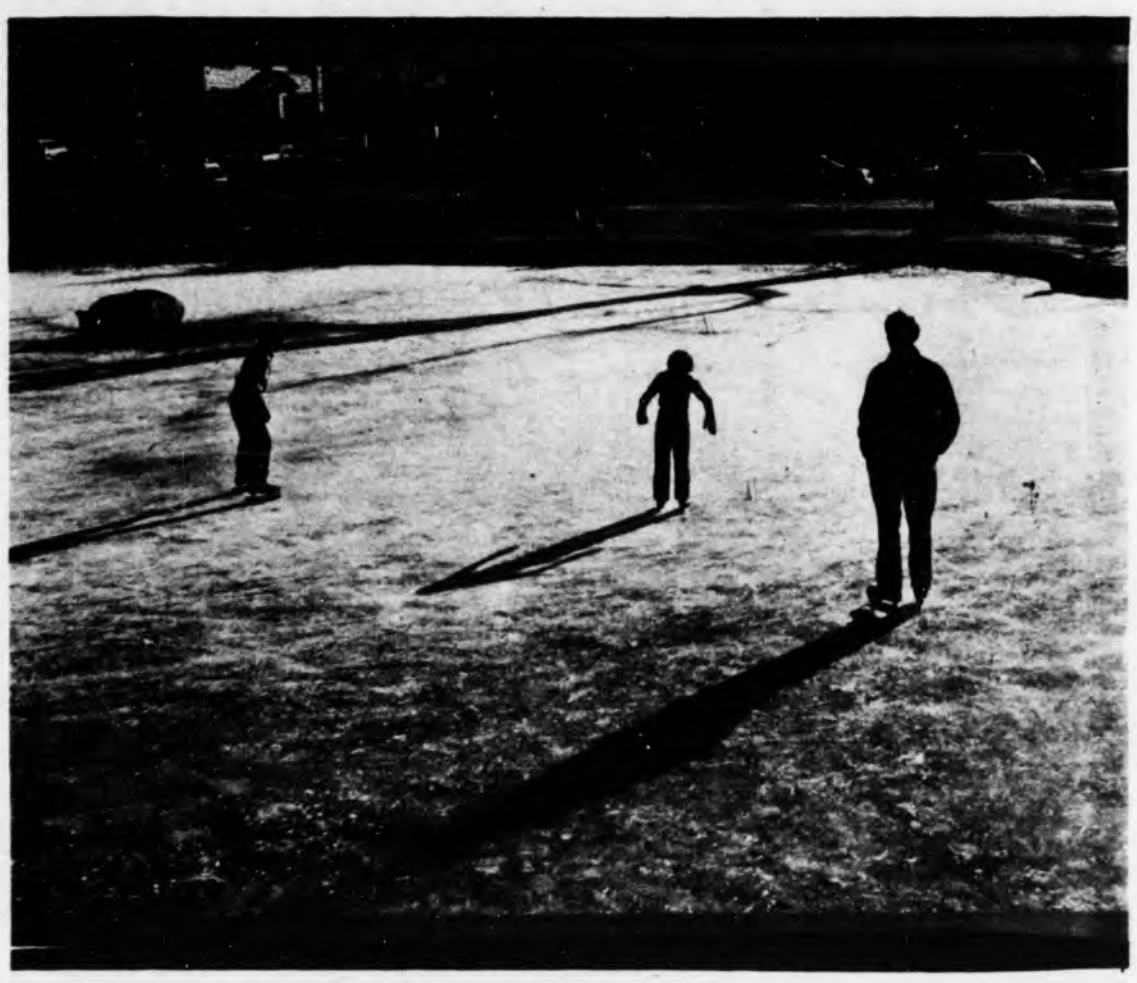
Well, certainly not in hockey, although with the Montreal Canadiens, how can you tell?

In school ice ranks, though, it's a truism, and Cohasset hockey team's undefeated South Shore League parade was rudely interrupted last week by Holbrook which continued its own depredations in the clan, 8-4.

The game was marked by penalties — 20 infractions — by an epidemic of injuries and less than par performances by both teams.

But when the smog cleared, the Bulldogs were able to depart for home base with a 4-1-1 record and Cohasset licked its wounds over its first defeat in the clan competition.

Joe Durkin put the Skippers in front for the only time at 2:50 of the first period when he scored on assists by Richie Young and Tim Smith.



But from there on it was all Holbrook as the Bulldogs seized a 4-1 lead and never were headed at the pass or anywhere else.

At one point in the third period, Holbrook led by as many as six goals.

Durkin upped his goal production for the game to two, and Phil Drago and Andy Pettinger had one each. Tim Smith had two assists in the Skipper cause.

Holbrook's Mike Sweeney had to be taken to South Shore Hospital after incurring a severe bone bruise in the late going. He was later discharged from the hospital.

Holbrook outshot the Skippers, 33-24.

Sen. Buckley Slates FAA Meeting

At least tentatively, there will be a meeting among officials of area towns, Federal Aeronautic Administration (FAA) representatives and possibly Massport officials as well at Norwell Town Hall, probably the evening of Thursday, Jan. 25 on flight patterns at Logan Airport.

Charles Sweeney, liason officer for State Senator Anna Buckley of Brockton, who under redistricting, now represents Norwell succeeding Senator Allan McKinnon, is making arrangements for the meeting.

Purpose of the meeting is to consider environmental assessments in noise factors on the communities stemming from flight pattern changes which have been undergoing tests for several weeks resulting in complaints by residents of a number of area communities.

Selectmen only three weeks ago directed their concerns to Beacon Hill resulting in Senator Buckley's action.

Executive Secretary David Hughes pointed out that the FAA has recommended going to Massport within a 30-day hearing period to seek relief.

McKinnon On Cushing School Board

Senator Allan McKinnon recently was chosen as a member of the Board of Directors of the Cardinal Cushing School and Training Center in Hanover.

Senator McKinnon described the Cardinal Cushing Center as "one of the best and most effective schools in the country because of the exceptional concern, generosity and dedication of all those associated with the school."

A New Kind Of 'Bowl' Game

By Lois Martin

Home Repair may prove to be a sport worthy of inclusion in New Year's Day bowl games.

I submit this provocative thought based on recent experience. Few wives, I among them, can bear to see a husband sprawled on a couch in front of the television New Year's Day. Most of us choose to write thank-you notes instead of whooping it up for some college team throughout the day.

We naturally assume our husbands would appreciate an option, too. It was in this spirit Jan. 1 that I chose to mention the drip from the faucet in the upstairs bathtub. Knowing how busy he was during the earlier holiday, I ignored the dratted dribbling flow. But New Year's Day each drop of water seemed to pound on the tub below.

PATCHES

I knew he'd want to do something about it. The Rose Bowl Tournament of Roses Parade looked fine in passing, but it was interminable, in spite of Michael Landon's brilliant smile and bright chatter with a bevy of beauties.

The compliant old boy headed up to take a look at the offending faucet. With him went the equipment for the sport - his tool chest, enough wrenches to justify an entire 'Tidey' Bowl if need be. Within minutes he was seen flying down the stairs to shut off the water. The drip had evolved into a broken off faucet - the cold water one.

Quick to respond, he arranged other household faucets in such a manner as to avoid expansion, which he later said would have avoided a rush of water inspired by the still-on hot water tank. I didn't understand. But then I don't know my football bowls either. Still as the pretty people described endless flower floats in Pasadena, my favorite plumber sought to avoid a float in Marshfield.

I donned my comfortable robe, sprawled on my bed to have a re-glance at the paper and turned down the television just as Joe Paterno and the boys roared onto the football field in the Superdome. Seconds later roaring began in our arena in response to a flood of water that ran through the living room ceiling to the piano keyboard below.

The plumber demanded to know WHO had turned off the faucet left on to prevent the falls. Well, what's a wife for if not to tend the little things a busy man forgets, like turning off running water? My goodness, let a little water run and you'd think the Patriots plane was hijacked.

As we spread papers, buckets, sopping towels throughout the house, Bear Bryant showed Penn State who was boss and the rhinestone vested junior petite cheerleaders jumped up and down unceasingly.

The water rush abated in our bowl: peace was established and residents were told they could use the shower if they stood way back in the tub and turned on the cold water faucet with pliers, propped handily on the hamper nearby.

The necessary stuff that would prevent leaking had yet to be applied...Because when I went into the kitchen, I noticed water leaking under the sink. Michigan State and Southern California were about to go at it. And at home our water bowl game also shifted with the tool chest moving from the bathroom to the kitchen.

That particular problem apparently stemmed from a large hole in an adjoining pipe under the sink. Thus, when the dishwasher sent forth its used water, the pipe did the same into the kitchen.

A new alarm was issued. Don't turn on or off the faucets, even with pliers. Signs were made to this effect, in an effort to restrain heedless people and forestall yet another debate about whose fault it was when water poured into the cellar from the kitchen.

As night fell, so did beleaguered football players and hobbyist plumbers. While few stayed up for the final lugging off the field on shoulders, our head wrenchman headed for the far end of the shower, plumb tuckered out.

A bowl day'll do that to you. I know that. You don't have to hit me over the head with a bag of bolts to make an impression. That's why when I noticed the doorknob on the hall closet wouldn't turn, I didn't mention it. The way things were going we'd have ended up with no doors.

Besides I can save that for another time. Probably by Super Bowl Day he'll be casting about for a change from plumbing.

If Santa brought you a five-pound box of cream-filled chocolates, a size 44 cardigan or a voluminous, tent-like dress, now is the time to start dutifully counting calories. With the last crumb of your Christmas cookies merely a pleasing memory, this can be the start of a year culminating in a sleigh full of bikinis and size five gowns.

That's how it was for Phyllis Pineo Warren. Ten years of marriage and two baby girls later, the pounds were multiplying and, not liking either the way she looked or felt, off she went to a Diet Workshop.

PHYLLIS PINEO WARREN ... of Seaview Ave., Marshfield, one of six master instructors in U.S. with Diet Workshop, Inc.

Now, four years later and 45 lbs. lighter, Phyll says "I felt better and looked 10 years younger." That's not the end of the story, for the transformation has resulted in a whole new life for the young Marshfield native. Phyll is one of six master instructors in the U.S. and her work with Diet Workshop finds her lecturing all over the country. Here is a recipe she brought back from her recent trip to Texas. Mock Lobster Pizza Surprise contains six oz. cooked protein, 1 limited vegetable allowance and unlimited vegetables.

3 T lemon juice
1 tsp. salt
1 4 oz. can mushrooms, drained
1 med. size tomato, thinly sliced
2 slices of onion, chopped
1 tsp. Parmesan cheese
Dash of oregano

Broil halibut. Dip fish into mixture of lemon juice and salt. Layer mushrooms, tomato, onion and cheese on top of fish. Sprinkle with oregano. Place under broiler for 3 min. more.

For those on the South Shore wishing to enroll in one of Phyll's Diet Workshop classes, her scheduled meetings are held in Marshfield Mondays at 8 p.m. at the Methodist Church and Tuesdays 9 to 11 a.m. You can join at any time. In Hingham Phyllis is at the Community Center Wednesdays from 8 to 9 p.m.

After weighing in, talk centers around the benefits of a well-balanced diet, exercise and behavior modification. Phyll says it's a battle, but "people's personalities change as well. They become more outgoing, more confident and take pride in their appearance." These Yogurt Pops aren't too hard to take either. Children often need to reduce and these are marvelous snacks.

1 c. plain yogurt
4 T frozen orange juice concentrate

Mix yogurt with frozen juice. Fill paper cups 2/3 c. full and push wooden sticks into middle of each cup. Freeze.

Pizza, Heavenly Banana Pie, Almond Pudding, Hollandaise Sauce, Spaghetti — that's dieting? The Diet Workshop Recipe Book in its second printing is compiled of recipes that teach one how to cook for the entire family so that all may enjoy nutricious, delicious food. Call Phyll at her Seaview Avenue home if you would like a copy of this plastic-covered, looseleaf book which has recipes such as this Veal Almost Marsala.

16 oz. veal cut for scallopini
1/2 lemon, very thinly sliced
1/2 c. water
1 env. vegetable bouillon
1 tsp. sherry flavoring
Dried fresh parsley
1 tsp. grated Parmesan cheese

Pound veal until very thin. Brown in PAM sprayed pan. Remove to plate. In pan combine water, bouillon and flavoring. Bring to boil. Reduce heat. Add veal. Top with lemon slices. Simmer covered for 5 min. Add parsley and grated cheese.

Poetry Hour

The series of monthly poetry readings and concerts begun in the fall at the Hingham Public Library will continue this winter on three Sunday afternoons from 3 to 5 p.m.

On Jan. 14, Ellen Rainville will perform traditional ballads on the dulcimer. On Feb. 18, Catherine Davis, Helene Davis and Thad Davis will read their own poetry; and on March 18, poets Ron Schreiber and Richard Shaner will read from their work.

Rumors Of Parental Complaints Were Just Rumors

School Board Chips Away At The Budget

By Judith Epstein

The School Committee this week voted 5-1 to cut a $1,500 appropriation for a new mini-computer in the Math Department's portion of the proposed zero budget. Otherwise there was no action on the budget.

There were rumors in the days preceeding the meeting that a teacher-parent turnout would be heavy for the continuing budget discussions, and, in fact, at one point there were 30 people in attendance. However, when the budget's turn on the agenda came up and when two votes stalemated over the manner in which to address the budget, the crowd dwindled.

Committee member Jack Langmaid stated that backup sheets detailing the departmental spending at the Jr./Sr. High School were necessary for proper scrutiny of the budget. This point, which Langmaid moved as a requirement, resulted in a stalemated vote which initially thwarted the Committee's ability to proceed with consideration of the budget.

A second stalemated voted on whether to address the Jr./Sr. High School portion of the budget, angered Chairman Doris Golden. "Now we're just playing games, we're acting like children," she said. She suggested that since the Committee didn't care to discuss the budget, they should go home and "grow up."

A philosophical disagreement between Langmaid and Supt. John Maloney ensued when Langmaid suggested that the Math Department could survive without a new mini-computer and other video equipment. Maloney countered with the argument that students shouldn't be deprived of the technology available to them through the use of video equipment.

ARTS AND CRAFTS also are a part of the school scene. Brian Bonnar puts the finishing touches on bird feeder in Junior High wood-working shop. Gino Froio, center, works on mosaic design in art class at the High School. And Kathy Branagan irons a piece of dyed material in Junior High Art Class. (Derr photos)

'A Dream Come True'

The Aaron River Reservoir Is Brimming

The Aaron River reservoir is brimming.

Edwin Pratt, Superintendent of the Water Department, looked out over the man-made lake which is the culmination of the construction of an impervious earth dam, a natural watershed draining approximately eight square miles and a control structure restraining water flow into Scituate.

"This is a 12 year dream come true," Pratt said of the reservoir built to augment Cohasset's water supply.

Bound Brook, one of the waterways which feeds Lilly Ponds from the reservoir, looks like a glassy road leading between the trees. Water feeds freely downstream into the town's main water supply at Lilly Pond from the reservoir which has become fully functional this week.

The fortunate and timely heavy rainfall of the past month — 8¾ inches, according to Pratt — has filled the basin in under three weeks. The underdrain or water bypass that was employed by workers to keep the site dry while construction was underway was closed Dec. 19. That the reservoir filled so soon is unbelievable, Pratt said.

For Cohasset residents who have been plagued for years with summer water bans and insufficient water supply, the reservoir is indeed a beautiful vision. The 325 million gallons of water now in sparking ice-blue panoramic abundance, covering 155 acres nestled among the trees of Wampatuck State Park, will insure a supply of three million gallons of water per day after processing at the new treatment plant.

The achievements of over a decade's labor, appropriations and cooperative management have finally come to fruition in the fulfilled promise of a more-than-adequate water supply. There is enough water, in fact, to serve the community until Cohasset's maximum population growth, with perhaps some left over to sell to neighboring towns.

These accomplishments have, however, been juxtaposed with an antiquated distributing system. The results have been complaints from residents about discoloration and lack of water pressure, factors which Pratt feels unduly maligns

Health Service, League Forte

By Joanne Young

The Social Service League of Cohasset, Inc. is our community health service, a voluntary, non-profit organization which offers skilled nursing through Linda Sharpe and other therapeutic services and confidential counselling by social worker Carolyn Housman.

The distinctive purple house on 83 South Main St., offers a well child clinic for ages 2 weeks to 6 years, a keep well program for senior citizens, a shuttle bus and meals on wheels. Cohasset doctors and professionally qualified local residents serve on the advisory board.

THE HISTORY

The Social Service League was founded in 1911 and the minutes of the first meeting read:

"A meeting of the ladies of Cohasset interested in forming a Society for Charitable purposes was held in the Lower Town Hall. Miss Alice Arthur was chosen Temporary Chairman. After a few words explaining the reason for the meeting she called for a nominating committee. This nominating committee consisted of Mrs. Bessie Tower, Mrs. Burt Bristol, Mrs. RussellTower, Mrs. Frederick Pratt and Miss Edith M. Bates. The following officers were elected. Mrs. Oliver Howe, Pres. Mrs. Evan Wentworth, Vice Pres. Mrs. Howard Bartow, Sect'y. Miss Sarah Fox, Treas. Mrs. Howe took the Chair and explained some of the work it hoped to accomplish. It

Harbor Committee Seeks $5,000 For Study

The Harbor Study Committee will ask for a $5,000 appropriation at Town Meeting as the local cost for a harbor study.

Both Committee Chairman Charles Fink and Harbormaster Harry Ritter expressed the need for a harbor improvement plan and a harbor fund that would be available to use in conjunction with state money.

"We need money from the town and Coastal Zone Management (CZM)," Fink said. He indicated that the town must appropriate $5,000 or 20 per cent as its portion of the study before CZM will provide the other 80 per cent.

The study, he explained, would not include a geological survey beneath the surface of the water. It would examine the best way to use the harbor in recreational and commercial interests.

Ritter told Selectmen that Cohasset was at a disadvantage in not having a "drop-in" fund or money immediately available to provide matching funds for state and federal programs that the harbor can use.

Fink said that an exact plan for the harbor study has not been drawn up yet, but that the Committee intends to use 30 free hours of enginering donated by CZM to help in mapping out a plan. This plan will then need the blessing of the Selectmen and the town's share of the cost before making out the application to CZM.

"No town can do a thing until CZM has a finger in the pie," Ritter said. "Work with them and work through them. Scituate, Marshfield and Plymouth have taken advantage of this program, we should get our share." Ritter warned that if application wasn't made soon other harbors up and down the coast would use up funds.

Selectmen gave the go ahead to have a plan of the study drawn up.

Another issue that Fink aired was whether the harbor was in need of dredging. Harbor dredging seeks local money in yet another article in the Town Meeting warrant. Funds of approximately $15,700 are now available to the town which could be applied to the removal of areas of suspected ledge rock. The town must agree to pay the additional funds of $41,500 which would amount to the 44 per cent matching fund the town needs.

These films are part of the Civilization TV program and are introduced and narrated by Kenneth Clark. The Art Center is pleased to offer this opportunity to view and comment on a highly regarded program.

the Water Department.

This week, at least the problem of water pressure should start to be alleviated. The standpipe has been drained, cleaned and painted and when refilled will not only act as a needed cushion for pressure within the system but also will dispense water free of sediment.

Pratt said the effects of the old system is the cause of the problems. A good water supply had to be made available to the town first, he explained, there would be no sense in installing new pipes with no water to flow through them. Most of the pipes in use today were installed with the original system in 1896 — a time when most bathrooms were situated in backyards — parts of the system can in no way handle the pressure of modern plumbing.

Come spring, with a boost from the treatment plant and all this available water, the pipes will get a flushing. Also, within the next year, a study of long range improvements in the distribution system will be conducted, Pratt said.

Another springtime plan is open house at the treatment plant which is guaranteed to educate and impress its visitors. A look at the crystal clarity of the "finished water" in a test-tube may elucidate the fact that water being pumped to homes is of the finest quality.

According to Pratt, people will have to be patient — some residents will not receive perfectly clear water for some time, but this condition should only be temporary or spasmodic. The new distribution system has yet to come. The dam, reservoir and treatment plant are here and working.

School Board Chips Away

"It is in vogue now, it is to them what books were to us. We're in a computer world."

Committee member Frank England questioned Math Department head Charles Davis, "I wonder if we're going hog-wild on this audio/video thing. What's the reason for buying this mini-computer instead of using the old Wang computer?"

David responded, "I could eliminate the computer and the readout and new textbooks. But you have to rely on the integrity of the person writing the budget."

Maloney attempted to direct the Committee back to the overall statistics of expenditure comparisons for instructional support items over the past three years. "We can argue $50 in one department and $75 in another all night long. This is the bottom line," he said of the $150,265 proposed sum total of all items excluding salaries which is down from this year's $163,993.

However, another debate over the affects of the use of computers and calculators on school children took place. England claimed that technological aids are making it easier on students and they are losing the ability to think. Committee member Pat Walsh attested that her ninth grade daughter didn't know how to find square roots any longer because she had become so reliant on a calculator. Davis maintained that the use of such equipment did not imply laziness, but rather that it avoided computational anxiety so that students could get on to the more important concepts behind mathematics.

The discussion was closed when the Committee voted to obtain more backup information on the High School's budget. On Jan. 22 there will be a budget only Committee meeting.

McKinnon's Fall

State Sen. Allan McKinnon (D-Norfolk & Plymouth) has been eliminated from the leadership of the Massachusetts Senate and that is an unfortunate blow for him and the people he represents.

Since arriving in the Senate eight years ago, McKinnon has established himself as an able, hard-working senator whose efforts give dignity to the word "politician." He is a man of unquestioned integrity.

His rise in the Senate, while not meteoric, has been impressive. He had been a committee chairman and last year was appointed assistant majority leader (called majority whip) by former Senate President Kevin Harrington.

With that appointment from Harrington, McKinnon became part of the leadership team and seemed destined to rise from the whip position to majority leader to Senate president.

Majority leaders and Senate presidents in state legislatures are not to be dismissed. Anyone holding the latter post should be considered among the two or three most powerful people in state government, capable of exerting enormous influence. McKinnon would have used that influence well.

The rule in politics is to assume nothing, and we probably should have observed it more closely last year when McKinnon became a part of the leadership. The assumption, hindsight tells us, was far too presumptuous, even for a man such as Allan McKinnon.

He fell from the pyramid this month when William Bulger, the new Senate president, named a new team and eliminated McKinnon's name from the list. Instead, McKinnon received another committee chairmanship which, although important, may fairly be considered a sop under the circumstances.

Aside from hurting McKinnon's own personal fortunes, Bulger, in choosing less able legislators as his lieutenants, revived an unfortunate tradition of leaving the entire South Shore out of the leadership of both branches of the state legislature.

It has been years, perhaps more than a generation, since any legislator from the South Shore has held a leadership position in either the Massachusetts House or Senate and that is important. Those who hold the reins of government, no matter how broad their outlook, always worry about their own constituents first.

With the exception of McKinnon's brief reign as assistant majority leader, the South Shore hasn't been a special concern to anyone in the legislative leadership, and now with Bulger's new team in force, it won't be for years to come. It means less clout in a place where clout counts for a great deal.

McKinnon is still a good man who will continue to exert a positive influence on Beacon Hill. He may even one day return to the leadership. But not for the foreseeable future and that is unfortunate, particularly since his loss is our loss as well.

TM VOTE NIXED

Town Counsel Blake Thaxter has ruled the vote at the recent special town meeting to appropriate $65,000 from free cash to install a water main on Route 3A was illegal. The Water Department can't accept money from town funds unless it is a loan to be paid back.

PRINTING BIDS

Five bids for printing 2600 copies of the town report and 3000 copies of the town meeting warrant were opened last week. Selectmen took the bids under advisement so Town Accountant William Signorelli could review them.

Cohasset...Nice To Visit Better To Stay

SERENE SCENE — It's panoramas like this which lure folks to Cohasset and also keeps them here, as one who knows relates in accompanying epic. (Greg Derr photo)

And The Choice Of Moving Was Easy

By Karin Bartow

Moving to Cohasset was the easiest thing I've ever done.

You can't be too careful when choosing a place to live. And, buying a house, for most of us, is a permanent thing. Considering all the factors that have to be weighed — costs, taxes, location, schools, municipal services, transportation, upkeep of neighborhoods and the town — deciding wasn't as hard as thought it would be.

First of all, Cohasset is a beautiful town. You really can't find fault with the way it looks — anywhere. Even the dump, which is just a dump, but observe the setting. Cohasset is an old town with history, tradition, town characters and heros. It has beaches, coastline, a harbor, rocky inlets, marshes, woodlands, a village green, and quaint and charming neighborhoods. A critical eye sees that people here take pride in their homes and town.

It became apparent early on that there are never many houses for sale in Cohasset. That makes it harder to find what you want, when you want it. It also indicates that people stay put and that's a good sign they're satisfied residents. (It means as well that mortgage money is tight and houses are expensive!)

My son's nursery school teacher told me when she and her husband went out to see a house, they always took their checkbook! Our real estate agent said that we would be handicapped as so many properties sell by word-of-mouth and never get listed. Somehow we got lucky; I guess it was meant to be!

Something "has to feel right" (or so it is with me), all the fastidious checking and investigating doesn't matter. A lot of what made Cohasset "feel right" had to do with the townspeople who said things like, "You're going to like it here...great place to raise kids...a nice, friendly town... welcome!"

Cohasset is a nice town to live in. You don't feel new here for long. People always ask, "How do you like it here?" They want to know what you think of their town, and invariably, they'll let you know what they like best (no one's confessed any complaints!)

Curiously, folks also want you to know how long they've been here and unless they're genuine townies, the longer the better. My sense is that the absolute, greatest status symbol in town (if you need one), is to have lived here a long time; or your whole life; or better yet, to trace your ancestry back to the earliest settlers.

I met a woman who has lived here all her married life and, like me, grew up somewhere else. She exclaimed, "You're an outlander, like me!" Pure Yankee tradition weeds the townies from the outlanders; or the locals from the new folks. There may be a difference, but they all live together harmoniously.

A friend once remarked to me, "If you buy an older house, chances are people will say, 'Oh, you live in so-and-so's house'. It's never your house!" When I was explaining to a woman where I live and she didn't recognize the previous owner's name, she asked me to go back a little further. I took it back 100 years and she not only knew the name, the children, grandchildren, but she used to play in the house! I consider that kind of walking history an asset to any town!

Cohasset folks are friendly, but hard to know, maybe. Friendliness is pretty common in a small town; the 'hard to know' is probably Yankee-New England; and the maybe is the uncertainty of newness. I was cautioned by one longtime resident to "be careful what you say; it can always come back at you!" My Mother told me that when I was a kid, but it didn't bother me to be reminded that self-censorship is a good thing.

There's a lot of diversity among the people here and in the range of community, school, recreational, and social activities. For a small town, that's important, and it would be sad if Cohasset ever became too homogeneous. Although I'm getting used to it, I'm still surprised to see people I know! After you've lived in big cities, small cities even, the fact that you run into familar faces here all the time, takes getting used to in a pleasant sort of way.

We used to spend so much of our time "getting away" from where we lived. A lot of energy and resources went into that exercise. Now it's pure pleasure to stay put on weekends and holidays. Having year-round recreation (I'm not a downhill skier!) in your home town is one of the things we like best about Cohasset.

Friends of ours wrote in a 'thank-you-for-dinner-in-your-new-house' note: "Your house is great...the kind of place to establish a dynasty in." If ruling the roost qualifies us for a dynasty, then I hope we establish one here. At least, perhaps, we can put down some family roots. Who knows, maybe if we stay long enough, people may even get to know the gray house with the front porch on Sohier Street as the Bartow's house!

Wealth Of Health Service, League Forte

was voted that each of the 7 churches represented should send five persons from their membership to form an executive committee. The subject of a name for this organization was then considered. It was voted that the membership fee be 25 cents.

From this beginning the Social Service League grew and by the third meeting of the Board, a name was chosen and committees formed which included Visiting Nurse, Supply, Baby Care, and later, in the schools, a Cooking, Sewing and a School Gardens committee.

By August, five months later, the idea of sales to obtain money was presented. It would be a sale of children's clothing and "contributions of old or new garments was desired." The money ultimately realized from the sale was $17.60 and was "sufficient to last until after the holiday" (or one month). This was the start of the Consignment Shop, now located in Cushing Plaza, which is still the major source of League revenue.

March 31, 1914, saw the first preventive medicine program with the notation: "Mrs. Dean James told us of the Better Baby Contest and asked whether it might not be advantageous to Cohasset to engage in this work. Mrs. James told of the many examnationswhich were given to each child and of how much help these were to the mothers who were thus shown just when a child was not progressing and what to do to aid it to grow in the right direction."

In 1915, an interest in politics was evidenced by the entry: "Mrs. Howe told of a meeting of the Mass. Board of Charities, which she attended where the subject under discussion was the most interesting one of the Mother's Pension Bill." By 1918 prenatal care was added to the services of the League under the capable guidance of Miss Weir, who provided instruction to the prospective mother.

"Not only the death rate is lowered," reported Miss Weir "but almost as important though harder to compute is the amount of discomfort, misery and suffering the little ones are saved from, by intelligent care on the part of their mother, not to mention the many disabilities for life that are acquired in infancy through neglect and ignorance on the part of the young mother."

Mary Fleming, one of the original volunteers of the Service League, well remembers Miss Weir riding through town on her bicycle, a petite and capable figure with flaming red hair.

The Quarterly report in 1918 records: "Early this month the sum we asked for the purchase of a Ford Run-About for the use of our nurse (Miss Weir) was appropriated without a dissenting voice. The Selectmen are about to get a car from the local dealer who will give us the use of a touring car without extra charge until such time as he can provide the Run-About which kind is hard to get at present.

It seems best, after due investigation, to get a self-starting appliance of some kind, also have the car insured and make arrangements for keeping it in a garage. The self-starter may cost in the neighborhood of $100. but this should be an outlay which your committee deems wise and proper as Miss Weir should be spared the physical exertion of cranking up the car.

The automobile was bought from our local dealer and Miss Weir has finished her necessary number of lessons and is able to run the car alone. The bicycle which our nurse has used for a number of years should now in the opinion of our committee be sold."

Miss Weir became indispensable to the League, which had considerable consternation handling her illness. It was noted: "Miss Weir unfortunately contracted German Measles and therefore was unable for two weeks to fill her post. However, she notified all the physicians by telephone and they were very considerate with waiting for her to get back to work. Miss Weir waited on herself and kept in communication with your chairman, so that she was the chief sufferer in the whole matter."

The Log of Diseases, kept since the founding of the League, is a graphic record of childhood epidemics, recounting whooping cough in 1915, measles in 1916, scarlet fever in 1922, mumps in 1923 and chicken pox in 1926.

The infamous influenza outbreak of 1918 recorded 264 cases and six deaths, no doubt due to the quality of care in Cohasset. The first evidence of tuberculosis is noted in 1931. During these difficult times the faithful Doctors Fernald, Hinchcliffe, Badger and Schott kept vigil. The intensity of these epidemics and the concern of the Social Service League in preventing disease can be gauged by the following entry:

"Our committee has also endeavored after laboring under the disadvantage incident to the change of nurses to have our nurse assist in the work of stamping out the unduly prevalent and highly communicative trouble in the heads of the school children. The mothers of the children must learn to realize that the evil is one that is absolutely avoidable and their good will is a matter of first importance in obtaining this desirable end." And "Mrs. Bates will be very glad to receive linen and we should like some heavy blankets and rugs for convalescents to lie on the floor in."

At the annual meeting in April of 1920, the subject of a talk by Miss Sibyl Halmer of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union in Boston was "Thrift" which she defined as "the efficient use of income and good management in the business of living."

The Social Service League of Cohasset, with its proud record of service to the community, has always been guided by noble ideals, recorded many years ago and faithfully followed today.

Now Comes Exam Time

CHS News

The week of January 23-26 is the end of the first semester at CHS which means it is the week of Midterms. The system of giving these tests at CHS is in its third year and still it receives mixed reactions from the students.

Midterms cover all material taught in the classroom from the September immediately preceding the tests to the day before the tests are given. The grade on this midyear exam will weigh as heavily as a term of school. This means that a two hour test is as important as two-and-one-half months of school.

It is true that the adverse reactions of the students toward the midyears are because the results are valued so heavily when the final mark in a class is being determined. The majority of CHS students feel that the midyear exams are a good idea as a preparation for the ones that must be taken in college, but that too much importance is placed on one test.

On the other hand, many former CHS students who are now in college feel that having midterms in high school made the college ones a little easier as certain patterns of studying were established for these large exams which could be used later on.

The fact remains that despite some student unrest the midterms will still take place. This year they will be on Jan. 23, 24, 25, and 26. The exam schedule is arranged so that a student takes no more than two exams a day which can make the studying a little more spread out and therefore a little easier. To every CHS student who is taking these midyears, "Good luck and study hard" for these exams are too important to blow.

Beat Holbrook . . . And Odds

Skipper Five Like Truman, Braves, Cong

By Steve MacQuarrie

What does Cohasset High basketball have in common with Harry Truman, the 1914 Boston Braves and the Viet Cong?

One common denominator is that all four won when the odds were against them. The Skippers joined this ecletic aggregation with a stunning 66 - 55 win over favored Holbrook last Tuesday. Cohasset then raised its record to 8 - 2 with an easy 100 - 64 win over Norwell on Friday.

Holbrook entered the game with some impressive credentials — undefeated, first place in the South Shore League, and ranked seventh among approximately 80 Eastern Massachusetts Division II schools — and an ego to match. The Skippers were impressed by neither the credentials nor the ego. "The kids are taking winning in stride," said Coach John LeVangie after the game. "They know their capabilities and they expect to win games."

LeVangie had scouted Holbrook earlier and that endeavor produced some notable results. Having determined that guard Peter Economeau was the key to the Holbrook offense, LeVangie assigned senior Brian Keating to defend against him. Though offense has been his hallmark to date, Keating turned in an excellent defensive job, limiting Economeau to just 8 points, well below his 20 per game average.

But despite Keating's waltzing around the floor after Economeau like Fred Astaire with Ginger Rogers, Cohasset still trailed 32 - 26 at the half. Here LeVangie elected to add an extra big man — Rich Tebbets — to his lineup to take advantage of Holbrook's having only one player comparable in size. The Skippers quickly erased the deficit and then, led by the 6'4" Tebbetts' 11 fourth quarter points, ran circles around Holbrook, outscoring them 24 - 11 in the last period.

Tebbetts was high scorer for either side with 17, while co-captain Paul Farren notched 14, guard John Hawley had 12, and Keating added 11 to his defensive masterpiece.

LeVangie had special praise for Howley, calling his game "The best he's had for us in 2 years. Ordinarily his assignment is to pass the ball and step the opposition's fast break, and he's excellent at it. Tonight we got all that from John and some offense, too."

Despite the fact that Cohasset wrapped up the Norwell game midway through the third quarter, its most exciting moment came in the closing seconds as the Skipper substitutes struggled to push the total over the hundred mark. And just to make it interesting, they waited until the game was over to do it. A Bill Taylor foul shot after time had expired set off pandemonium in Sullivan gym and created the final score of 100 - 64.

A third quarter barrage in which a Cohasset quintet of Tom Higgins, Matt Salerno, Howley, Farren and Keating shot a blistering 78 per cent from the floor and outscored the Clippers 33 - 8 cemented this win and a piece of first place in the South Shore League. Salerno and hard-working sophomore guard Bill Kurtz topped the scoring with 16 points apiece, despite the fact that each played only half the game. Keating added 15 on a fancy assortment of inside moves, fast breaks and tip-ins.

Century Score CHS Record

Cohasset's High School basketball varsity smashed a school scoring record pouring in 100 points to inundate Norwell, 100-64, last week.

Icemen Chill Abington, Fall To Sharon

Goalie Tim O'Connell turned in a sparkling effort, and Cohasset's hockey team repulsed Abington, 4-2, last week.

Abington had its chances, including a clean breakway on O'Connell who made a spectacular save to thwart the attempt.

"He's played real good hockey for us," said Cohasset Coach Ed McDermott of his goalie. "We gave him some more help in our end, but he did it alone on the breakway."

Cohasset took the lead at 8:48 of the first period when Doug Dillon fed Phil Drago for a goal.

Abington evened the mark at 11:23 of the same period.

Then even with a man edge on three occasions, Abington still couldn't make its power play pay off.

At 2:12 of the second period, Joe Durkin found the range for the Skippers' second marker, and Larry Evans whizzed in a slapshot on a solo dash at 6:58 to let Cohasset move to a 3-1 lead.

Abington moved within a goal at 2:20 of the third period whereupon Evans got an insurance goal in the same period.

Dom Campedelli had three assists, and in addition to Matt Brown on Defense, Dillon and Tim Smith as penalty killers, drew plaudits from their coach.

Cohasset improved its record to 2-1 in the South Shore League and 3-4 overall while Abington dropped to 1-1-2 in the SSL and 4-3-2 overall.

Playing out of its league class, Cohasset's hockey team dropped a 6-2 decision to Hingham last week, but only when the Harbormen came from behind with five last period goals.

Coach Ed McDermott noted his 2-4 club suffered three of four losses to non-league teams — Falmouth, Barnstable and Hingham, and he feels playing the stronger opponents will benefit his club.

Hingham is the Old Colony League leader and ranked 12th in Eastern Mass. in addition to boasting the two four scorers in the Old Colony League and in Tony Messina the third highest scorer in EMass.

Cohasset got on the board with two second period goals by Doug Dillon and Richie Young. Young assisted on Dillon's goal and Joe Durkin on Young's.

CHS Girls Comeback Shades Holbrook, 49-44

Cohasset girls hoopsters surged in the final period for a comeback win over Holbrook, 49-44, last week.

Holbrook led at intermission 26-25, and clung to a three-point edge after three periods.

But Cohasset went to a full-court press, and Diane Maloney found a hot hand to lead a rally that pulled out the decision. Maloney led the scoring with 19 points backed by 14 from Ellen McCarthy, who also hauled in 13 rebounds and Jody Sandblom who had 13 rebounds and six points.

Cohasset evened its record at 3-3.

Behind a balanced scoring attack, Coach Bill Gerety's NHS girls basketball team pinned a 67-42 loss on Cohasset last week.

Between them, Lisa Blanc and Amy Dempsey poured in 25 points for the Clippers sixth win of the season.

Blanc finished as high scorer with 13 points but only one more than Dempsey compiled while Pam O'Reilly, Jane Mackin and Mary Connolly each had eight points in the Norwell attack.

Cohasset high scorer was Kate Salerno, who hooped 10 points.

The Clippers now stand 6-1 in the South Shore League whereas Cohasset's record dipped to 3-4.

Gymnasts Just Top Norwell

Cohasset's gymnastic team took a close meet from Norwell last week, 74.95-74.65.

Karen Ekberg took a first, second and third to lead the Skipper win.

She finished first in floor exercise with teammate Nancy Walls runnerup; a second in bars and third in balance beam.

Other Skipper points came from Margie Frederickson, who won the balance beam as Pat Meehan took second.

'Big' News Doesn't Go Unnoticed

By Lois Martin

Not for a moment should city folks regard us as unapprised in state and national events. True, we're tied up with local goings-on. But far be it from us to let our minds slacken to dullness.

When it comes to current events, not much slips by us. We're bright as a dollar down here, though that's not much of a recommendation these days, according to the news.

Still we absorb the fast-breaking bulletins, mull them over in our minds and relentlessly come forward with observations. Take last week, for instance. All manner of happenings were brought to our attention.

Mr. Blackwell, a man who surrendered the name his mother gave him for one that would make him famous, said Dolly Parton was the worst-dressed of all of us. I was relieved. A lot of us fear he'll see us on Saturday mornings. Instead poor Dolly headed the hiss list. I know at least one person who'd consider her faults to be assets.

PATCHES

Bobby Orr's number was elevated to the ceiling of Boston Garden, giving grown men a chance for a good cry. So did the Celtics. Gentleman Jim Rice has a new haircut to go along with his membership among the uniquely prosperous. And Ned Martin's got a job announcing the Sox game. Hated to think of him alone somewhere with his microphone not plugged in.

The Shah's been having a devil of a time. One's popularity is apparently precarious at best. All he's got out of the riots thus far are sound vacation plans.

Out in Oregon a married couple that met in court over a first-of-its-kind rape suit rendevouzed over the weekend. They're speaking to each other again, but not until they'd had the entire nation in volved in their fight. Their cooing knew no bounds after the reunion. See the good to come from talking things out.

A fresher, scarier report was uttered on the dangers of smoking. The tobacco industry said the announcement was made by a man who used to smoke three packs a day. Seems to be lack of coordination in governmental policy on smoking. President Carter says we can count on him to support the large industry and Joe Califano is just as firm about encouraging people not to smoke.

Wholesale food prices went up eight per cent in December. That's no news flash for people who've splurged on a pound of hamburger. Before long there'll be car pools to the gas station. But the consumers aren't persuaded of the need for greater cost. We've grown cynical. Money-makers say the weather was too wet, too hot, too cold. We don't listen now. We believe the bottom line is greed.

The Pope said women have an "eternal vocation" in motherhood. Mothers agree motherhood is the most important vocation but if it's the only one, some of us are going to have to start adopting spon to stay in business. He didn't offer guidelines for men. But we're hoping the person who gathered fatherhood is a hobby is dead wrong.

In the State House Gov. King, with his coat barely hung on the hook, battled with what could be considered a moral issue . . . if you evaluate a person's failings, are you also required to judge his contributions . . . or does an obvious, undeniable mistake negate assets. At any rate, one could conclude it's better to be off by two semesters than to be off by two universities.

There was a toy that didn't prove to be fun when children swallowed part of it. And Billy Carter lost prestige at the White House when he lost control of his mouth in the company of some people from Libya. SALT talks were well-seasoned, but men working on an oil rig lost their lives.

The tide of 1979 is coming in.

Perhaps the most tittilating is the revelation that some women not too far from here are planning to pose for Playboy magazine. The rest of us refused to offer because it would seem to make us sex objects. We get enough of that doing the laundry.

Harbormen Now Men Of Harmony

"What's in a name?" asked Shakespeare.

Members of the Scituate Harbormen barbershop chorus decided that by another name they could sound as sweet.

So at their first meeting of the new year they voted to take a new name, the South Shore Men of Harmony.

The chorus was founded in Scituate in 1952 but in recent years meetings have been held in Norwell, Marshfield and Hanover. The growing membership comes from 15 towns between Quincy and Plymouth.

"We wanted a name that would represent the whole area. We didn't want to give the impression we were only for Scituate residents," explained chorus president Leo Harrison of Norwell.

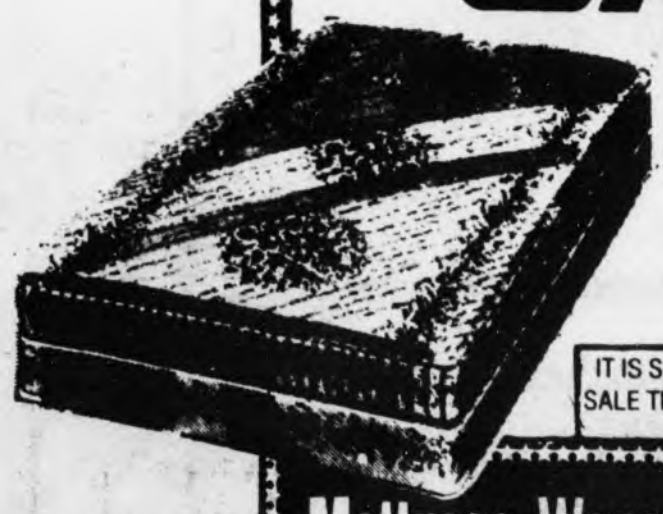
Harrison said that the singing group hopes to increase its membership 25% this year to nearly 80 men.

"There will be some special open house nights, but each weekly meeting is open to the public, too," he said.

The South Shore Men of Harmony meet each Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Conway Buildilng, Rte. 53 at Rte. 139, Hanover.

The organization is a chapter of the Society for the Preservation & Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America, Inc.

Bee Line



The Plymouth County Beekeepers' Association will, for the second year, offer a course for beginning beekeepers or for those with a potential interest in this facinating hobby. This will be given at Hanson Grange Hall on Rte. 27, Thursday, Jan. 31 at 7:30 p.m. for seven weeks.

Economical, careful, secretive, slow, cold, pessimistic — that's a Capricorn for you. Everywhere we go, people seem to be aware of their horoscope and believe the signs of the Zodiac influence their lives. If the above sounds like someone you know and if they're also musically inclined and hard workers, ask them if they were born between Dec. 21 and Jan. 20.

Sounds to me as though they must be superbly qualified to cope with these hateful, climbing food prices. Careful shopping and economical planning make a trip to the supermarket challenging. Few can afford a carefree dash to pick up a few steaks for the night's meal. A casserole such as Millie Carr's Hot Tuna Salad is a pleasing substitute.

1 6½ oz. can tuna, drained
1 tsp. onion
1 tsp. parsley
1 tsp. parsley
1 tsp. pimento
1 small can mushrooms

Combine above ingredients and pour into small casserole.

Topping:
1 egg white, beaten
½ tsp. sugar
1 T mayonnaise
1 T lemon juice
1 T grated cheese
1 slice bread, cubed

Beat together egg white and sugar. Blend in mayonnaise and lemon juice. Heat until warm and pour over tuna mixture. Top with cheese and bread cubes. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 min.

"I've got four kids," says Fred Wintzner. "If I take everybody out to MacDonald's, it's $12 and my wife loves me. If I take them out to an ordinary restaurant, it's $35 if I'm lucky." However, little touches such as candlelit tables discovered at a MacDonald's in Philadelphia and a fancy MacDonald's in the showpiece Water Tower Place in Chicago, can boost the price of such family outings. Many children (and grown-ups) would consider Hope Warren's luscious Faery Gingerbread a treat. This is an old recipe from Mrs. Thomas Bailey Aldrich which Mrs. Warren served her three children and, later, theirs. Bake at 400 degrees in cupcake pan for approx. 20 min.

Beat one egg
Add ⅓ c. molasses
⅓ c. melted butter
⅓ c. sugar
Mix together:
1 c. flour
1 tsp. soda
¼ tsp. each cinnamon, ginger and nutmeg

Mix dry ingredients with first four ingredients and add:
½ c. boiling water before placing in oven.

It takes neither time nor money to create a pleasant setting for even the simplest meal. Candlelight, attractive placements and a little basket with a flowering plant stolen from the windowsill, make the dreariest dish more appealing. Serve what you will on your prettiest plates and follow with Mrs. Warren's dessert and your family may be so impressed, they may never want to eat out again. Called Mrs. Lanier's Dessert, this is another family favorite of the Cohasset matron's.

6 oz. chocolate bits
3 T. hot, strong coffee
2 eggs
2 T rum
¾ c. boiling water

Blend in blender for two min. Top with ice cream, or whipped cream.

The Cohasset Chimney Sweeper

Meet Jeff Ludlow, Alias August West

He arrives in a top hat, mildly besmirched with a by-product of his trade. The tools for his work are stacked in a truck, still trimmed with a Christmas wreath, and topped by a sign that reads, "August West, Chimney Sweep."

He is a 20th century entrepreneur of an age-old skill. And his given name is Jeffrey Ludlow. A resident of Cohasset, Ludlow adopted the trade name of August West in deference to a celebrated English sweep by that name.

Not many years ago, Jeff was a salesman, traveling the many miles in his job of covering the New England area. In the process of evaluating his fatiguing way of life, he discovered his chimney needed cleaning. And...it wasn't all that easy to find someone who could do it.

He searched for a means of gaining technical know-how the job would require and found a training and apprentice program for chimney sweeps in Connecticut. That done, Jeff, nee August West was in business. Not counting his truck, he put up about $3000 to start but keeps adding to his equipment.

When he started, three years ago, he used a car and trailer. Now he needs a bigger truck and has added masonry repair and rebuilding to his job description. Fall is his big chimney sweeping time. And he estimates he's cleaned more than 1000 chimneys since he started, most of them on the South Shore.

His wife, Marcia, handles the books, the organization, the scheduling of his work, in addition to overseeing their four small children. West's combination card and bill advertises his work, "Call for whatever soots you."

Perhaps 10 years ago an enterprising man would not have been able to support himself cleaning chimneys. In the past few years, however, with the rekindled interest in wood as fuel, the need for a chimney sweep has risen sharply. Jeff and wood stoves came into demand nearly simultaneously.

Though August West's approach to his work is somewhat colorful, as a chimney sweep he's more genteel than showy. He says he uses both the American and European methods of cleaning. The American way, it seems, is to clean the chimney from the bottom up. The European style is opposite, cleaning from the top down.

Jeff says he hasn't fallen off a roof yet, though he's had some close calls. Gusts of wind are the greatest danger. He doesn't ordinarily secure himself while working topside, unless he'll be there an hour or two.

His basic equipment includes a barrel-size vaccum and 30 different sizes of wire brushes and ladder. He spreads a large protective blanket on the floor in front of a fireplace or stove before starting his work of setting up the ladder and toting his brushes to the roof. He doesn't work in a downpour or snowstorm but can carry on throughout all seasons.

He says his work has been "very rewarding." One of the results in addition to a livelihood is a strong physical tune-up for the sweep. Jeff says it probably took him a year and a half before he was fully in shape for the skills in agility he needs.

In addition to baling out dirt from chimneys, he's removed squirrels, their nests, racoons families, birds and bats. But mostly, he's confronted with chimneys that are just plain dirty. He cautions woodburners to use seasoned wood. The green variety, he says, leaves creosote deposits that hasten and heightens the potential for chimney fires.

As for when or how often chimneys need sweeping, Jeff says the National Fire Protection Association suggests it be done every 150 uses. As a further barometer, the sweep says users of fireplaces and woodstoves (not the airtight variety) have a sweeping every three or four years. But people who use air-tight woodstoves as a constant source of heat should see to cleaning once a year for safety's sake.

August West's elegant 'work' hat was sent from California. When he started the business, he picked up one from a formal wear business, the old collapsable variety. He also owns a beaverskin top hat, but that gets used only for special occasions, like meetings of the Chimney Sweep Guild.

Jeff maintains many traditions associated with the craft. He says it's good luck to shake hands with a chimney sweep. Some of us can't do it fast enough. We know it's good insurance, if not guaranteed good fortune, to have a handshake on clean chimneys.

Roger Pompeo

This M.D. Is A Busy G.P.

—By Judith Epstein

Dr. Roger Pompeo is a busy man. But not too busy to read a patient the results of a lab test at the Log and Line. And not too busy to stop off at the home of someone recuperating from an operation.

A resident of Weymouth and Cohasset all his life, the 37-year-old doctor has earned many devotees. He is a rare breed. He undertakes to do more than humanly possible and finds a way to multiply more than the number of hours in a day available to the rest of us.

His local practice is complicated by other duties which are many and carefully arranged into his schedule. Of his patients 40% are Cohasset residents, 40% from surrounding towns and the rest travel a distance to see him. He admits it's hard to fit everything in and that his practice has grown far beyond what he originally wanted.

"In Cohasset, my life is not my own," the young physician doctor explained. His hours are long and the day doesn't end until late at night when he can finally unwind. However, this confession does not come as a complaint. The tragedy of a heart attack or other physical catastrophe occurring to a patient may loom large in his mind and disturb him. But Pompeo admitted he loves his work and places it first in his life.

Maybe it's this sensitivity that distinguishes him most. His family practice, which encompasses a wide spectrum of human ills, is known as primary care.

Cites Chilling Effect

Maloney Raps School Committee

School Supt. John Maloney warned the School Committee this week that chaos could grip the Cohasset Schools if the rapport doesn't improve between the committee and his administration.

Maloney charged that two committee members, "with apparent defiance and designed effort" ignored the Committee's vote last week not to provide members with photostated copies of budget backup materials. Instead, copies of this information were to be held by school principals and made available for study at the request of committee members.

On Wednesday, "within 12 hours" of the vote, Maloney said, two committee members obtained the backup sheets from the high school and proceeded to photostat the materials, tying up the copy machine for three hours.

At other times, he continued, School Committee members have spent hours at a time in the business offices of the schools, creating a "chilling effect" and "unnecessary instrusion" within the administration. As a result, he said, there is discontent among the staff and a deterioration of morale in the schools.

The superintendent underscored the need to reverse the trend before the fabric of the entire system is undermined. He reminded committee members that they are expected, individually and collectively, to act with responsibility. He feared that future photostating by committee members would reveal confidential information on students.

In responding to Supt. Maloney, committee member Frank England expressed concern over the lack of cooperation from teachers and the administration in providing the committee with the backup material it wants. England said he found it "very strange" that the administration could include large photostated documents in his packet when they wanted "to sell us something."

After going through the backup sheets, England said he discovered $20,000 to $30,000 worth of athletic equipment in the budget that wasn't needed. "Take a walk through the basement of the Deer Hill School," he said, referring to what he called old and discarded equipment that was stored there. "We've got a good school system; with better management, we could have an excellent system."

Vice chairman Josephine Mahoney said she hadn't found the administration difficult to work with and praised Mahoney for his comments, calling them long overdue. She said she was proud to see that the system had a superintendent who "had the guts" to speak as he did.

Later, when the meeting had adjourned, the committee members who had done the photostating of the backup materials defended their actions. Patricia Walsh and John Langmaid said they did not monopolize the copy machine for three hours, but rather, stopped what they were doing to allow others to use it.

They also defended their right to make copies of the backup sheets. Mrs. Walsh added that she had paid for the paper used for the copies.

A motion made by committee member Irene Brown to bar any School Committee member in any school without the specific knowledge of the superintendent was rejected on a 4-2 vote.

A second motion by Mrs. Brown, to consider the maintenance portions of

T.M. Water Article Ruled Illegal

Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter, Jr. has ruled the vote which appropriated $65,000 for a water main on Chief Justice Cushing Highway at the Nov. 2 Special Town Meeting illegal and void.

The legality of the article, inserted by Selectmen at the request of a citizen's petition, has been questioned in past weeks. The most concern over the vote has been whether repayment of money appropriated to the Water Department for a capital expense is an implicit requirement of the law. The article made no mention of repayment.

Thaxter's findings state that the section of the law which refers to the authority of a town meeting to raise money for the installation of water main revealed nothing to prohibit the vote. He also indicates that although income of a water department should defray operating expenses, interest charges and payment on principal, no mention was made in this section of the law about capital expenditures. In Thaxter's opinion, the Water Department does not have to repay the Town for the appropriated sum.

The illegality of the vote is instead based on his conclusion the the Board of Water Commissioners had refused to extend the water main after being requested by residents prior to the Special Town Meeting vote. This determination came in a Jan. 5 letter to Selectman Arthur Clark after Thaxter had been trying since November to ascertain whether or not the Water Commissioners did, in fact, refuse to extend the main. The Water Commissioners were reportedly not adverse to supplying water but were without funds to do so — Thaxter finally ruled this reason as a refusal.

Thaxter explains his ruling by quoting part of the statute, "If, for any reason, the Board of Water Commissioners should refuse to extend water mains or pipes into sections of the town not previously supplied with water from the town water works, a two-thirds vote of an annual Town Meeting shall be necessary to annul such refusal."

The law also requires that Selectmen direct all work done in town if funds are provided to construct, lay and maintain under or over public or other ways. Whether Selectmen intend to sponsor the article to be addressed at the annual Town Meeting as it now stands or with a clause outlining the possibility of repayment is unknown.

Pompeo

The general practitioner has never hankered after a medical avenue not taken. "I take care of people and refer them to other doctors if necessary," he said. "I'm never offended by a second opinion." At one point during his years of medical school at Boston University, he thought he might go into surgery.

As it turned out Pompeo did try his hand at surgery as a resident in Vietnam from 1967-1968. After that year in a field hospital situated in a village called Rach Gia, deep in the Mekon Delta, Pompeo decided that he had seen enough of surgery and prefers now to treat people when they are awake and "alive."

Although Pompeo is qualified to assist in major surgery, the surgical procedures he attends now are minor. A special room in his new office is equipped to handle biopsies, the repair of lacerations and care of trauma and shock.

His work at the South Shore Hospital Emergency Room two Mondays a month is an adjunct occupation which further hones the skills he employs in his practice. The emergency room has always been his primary attachment to medicine, he said, offering the kind of training that is essential. Not only does emergency room doctoring keep him on his toes with what is new and modern in medicine, it also continues to educate him in the ways of emergency life-saving techniques, especially cardio-pulmonary resuscitation or CPR.

Teaching is also a big part of medicine to Pompeo. He is working with the Dean of Boston University Medical School to set up programs for second year medical students to work with practicing doctors and to learn the art of physical diagnosis. He plans to take on students in Cohasset and with the permission of his patients, they will observe office procedure.

As if Dr. Pompeo's week were not already crammed full he manages to give service when needed as Norfolk County's Second District Medical Examiner. Fortunately the job is not a steady one, but from time to time, Pompeo said, he is called on to investigate sudden deaths resulting from motor vehicle accidents, homicides, suicides or unexplained causes. Dr. Clifford Ward, Plymouth County Medical Examiner, of Scituate, covers for him when he is called out on a case, and he crosses over districts when needed as well.

A civic contribution is his place on the Cohasset Board of Health which meets every other Monday night.

In a manner typical of this man who always finds room to do more, Pompeo stressed that every young and active member of the town should partake somehow in community activities.

Sometimes, the doctor gets a chance to mix business and pleasure up at Lake Placid — as one of the physicians for the U.S. Olympic Ski Team. Pompeo hopes to attend the 1980 Olympics in this capacity and will offer to the athletes what he offers all his other patients-good general care.

Dr. Pompeo sat back in his handsome consultation room and offered some free advice. Most people who visit him are not really that ill. They overindulge in food, smoke and drink, he said, but they seem to be looking for something else. Relaxation is the answer, he advised. "People would be a lot happier if they just stayed home."

The doctor said he didn't wish to be seen as a demi-god, the mystical allusion that those in the medical profession sometimes attain.

"I work long hours," he said, "and I'm doing well. I try to be the best at what I do."

Selectmen Reject Police List

Selectmen last week returned as unacceptable a list of intermittent police officers to Civil Service. A request for a full-time police officer was also withdrawn.

In a letter to Civil Service, Selectmen noted they had already voted to appoint Frederick Grassie to a full-time permanent position vacancy as a patrolman with the Police Department. Grassie has been serving as a permanent intermittent officer and was the remaining name on the first May appointment list.

Although Selectmen notified Civil Service of their desire to have Grassie appointed a full-time officer, a second intermittent list which was generated in July, listed three new names.

Selectmen were also concerned that the Civil Service letter which named these individuals was sent to the Police Chief and not to the Selectmen, the appointing authority.

Another point which was handled improperly, according to Selectmen, was the fact that two of the three persons on the second list received notification of their appointments at the Police Department, rather than at their homes.

of the budget, received unanimous approval and the committee turned its attention to the elementary schools.

At both the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools, $1500 was approved to add ramping entrances. Also approved for the Deer Hill School was $4000 for blacktopping and $6000 to replace electric light fixtures as part of an energy-conservation program.

A cafeteria program was also approved for the Deer Hill School. The National School Lunch program will provide 75 per cent of the money needed, with Cohasset to pay the remaining 25 per cent, or $5614.

Approved maintenance improvements at the junior-senior high school included $7000 for ramping entrances, $18,000 for blacktopping front parking lots and the addition of $2500 to the custodial overtime account for possible rescheduling of work hours.

Marilyn Watson, head of the physical education department at the high school, defended the $108,363 budget which has increased by about $9000 over last year. Watson said she is looking for staff accountability and anticipates a decrease in equipment turnover.

When Langmaid moved to cut archery from the physical education program because of possible safety hazzards, Watson said the sport epitomized motor coordination and equipment care. His motion was defeated.

The budget for all district athletic programs was also discussed. And the committee approved $320 to pay chaperones at away games for basketball and hockey cheerleaders.

"Hey John, if you don't go along with us you're going to get whacked on the head."

School Committee member Frank England to School Supt. John Maloney

Last week School Committee Chairman Doris Golden told her fellow members to go home and grow up after two stalemated votes (3-3) thwarted attempts to deal with the new school budget.

This week, Supt. John Maloney, a moderate man not given to hyperbole, spent several minutes lacerating the committee for the souring rapport that has developed between his administration and committee members. He warned that chaos would ensue if the trend continues.

How's that for the future of education in Cohasset?

Supt. Maloney takes it one the chin regularly at meetings of the School Committee as the quotation from Frank England so aptly indicates. So do other members of the administration and teachers. This week one teacher told us he'd never take the kind of treatment that some committee members regularly dish out to Maloney and his lieutenants.

In brief, the Cohasset School Committee is making news these days, and the news — about the committee's squabbling — isn't good.

Philosophical differences over education are inevitable. That they do exist in Cohasset mean residents are probably being better represented than if the School Committee were lopsided on the liberal or conservative side. Philosophical differences, however, are not an invitation for rudeness, persistent distrust, vituperative remarks or some of the other histrionics that have come to plague committee meetings.

Without belaboring the point, we suggest the obvious: that the committee take steps to ease the tension that has developed between some members and the administration that snideness and rudeness be shelved; and that the pettiness that has come to descend on committee meetings be eliminated.

The Recreation Report

By John Worley

For 1978

The annual report of the Director of Recreation offers the opportunity to inform the residents of Cohasset of the activities, programs, and services that their Recreation Commission has concerned themselves during the calendar year.

The Recreation Department completed its second year of full-time operation on November 9, 1978. During the past calendar year, November 1977 to October 1978, there have been 8,908 individuals of all ages that have participated in Recreation Department programs, activities, and special events.

During the first year of full-time operations the Department offered a variety of programs designed for all aged residents. Many of the programs were continued during this past year. Some have undergone re-structure, others were re-vamped entirely, and new programs were added as demand indicated. One of our primary functions is to continually monitor and evaluate all programs as to their effectiveness and popularity. In this regard we hope to remain open to suggestions and needs, while remaining dynamic and responsive to the leisure demands of the community.

Most recreation programs require a minimal registration fee. During the calendar year of October 12, 1977 — October 12, 1978, the Recreation Department generated $5,012.00 via these fees. From July 1, 1978 to October 12, 1978 there has been $796.65 transacted through the Recreation Department Revolving fund which became effective on July 1, 1978 as a result of state and town legislation.

One of the more significant program changes this year involved the Summer Playground Program. The 1978 program was offered at one central location, affording best utilization of staff and equipment. The program was a full day program that operated for eight weeks, Monday thru Friday, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The apparent success of this program was quite evident as there were 335 children between the ages of six and 12 years enrolled in the 1978 Summer Playground Program. While program revisions often lead to a more successful program, it is ultimately the caliber of the program staff that determines the actual success of any program. This year's staff was of the highest caliber and afforded the children an outstanding summer experience.

Revisions were also made in the Summer Youth Tennis Program during the 1978 season. Classes were offered twice weekly, for a one hour period. This change also appeared to be successful as it offered more in-class time for the 114 participants.

Other new programs for 1978 that proved highly successful were: Dog Obedience, Womens' Fitness, Summer Gymnastics, as well as many special events. More than twenty-five regularly scheduled programs and over one dozen special events and activities were offered during the 1978 season. Each year the department hopes to add more programs, activities, services and events to the present schedule.

This summer, during July and August, a series of eight feature films were shown Thursday evenings at the Town Hall Auditorium. The movies were co-sponsored by the Cohasset Public Library and the Cohasset Recreation Department. Approximately 1,140 residents of all ages attended the film showings at no charge.

A special thanks should go to Mr. Richard Hayes, Director of the Cohasset Public Library, and Mr. Kenneth Sargent, custodian of the Town Hall, for their services in regard to the film series.

Through grants from the American Federation of Musicians, The United States Government, and town appropriated funds, the Recreation Department was able to offer a series of seven band concerts during the summer months. Six concerts were held on the Town Common and music was provided by the 30 piece South Shore Concert Band. The seventh concert was provided by the United States Navy Show Band and was held at the Cohasset High School Auditorium. Attending the seven band concerts were approximately $1,820 individuals.

Many special events and activities were conducted by the Recreation Department during the past year. Many of these events were jointly sponsored by local organizations and volunteers. Over 2,500 individuals attended the special events and activities. From time to time the Recreation Department will conduct special programs such as an Easter Egg Hunt, Fun Carnival, Seminars etc., etc. Information regarding these programs as well as other programs will be disseminated through local news media, posters, fliers, and schools.

Work continued this year at the Elms Meadow Skating area. At present the area is entirely functional, with lights for night skating. Further landscaping is scheduled for the spring of 1979. The area is approximately one acre in size and year round use will be available. The Recreation Department would like to extend their gratitude to the numerous town departments,

Plaza Pharmacy Robbed Of Drugs And Cash

Last Thursday night an armed robber made off with a quantity of narcotics and $150 in cash from Cushing Plaza Pharmacy on Route 3A at approximately 8:30 p.m.

Robert Greenblatt of Quincy, the pharmacist, said that he and a clerk had been closing the store early because of the bad weather when a young man knocked on the locked front door. Greenblatt opened the door for him and was handed a note.

The note read, "Do what I say or you're dead!" and demanded narcotics, cash and a list of other drugs. It also warned, "Don't move for five minutes or I'll shoot everyone in here." The man followed Greenblatt inside the pharmacy and displayed a Lugar type pistol.

Greenblatt complied with the orders and filled a large brown paper bag with the cash and drugs including valium, percodan, demeral, demeral injectable, eskatrol and dexedrine. As the robber left the store, he said, "Thank you."

A car which was determined as stolen may have been used in the robbery was found by police in the parking lot near the pharmacy.

The thief was described as white, with ear length brown hair and a full mustache. He was wearing a peacoat turned up at the collar, blue jeans, mirror sunglasses and an ace bandage on his right hand and wrist.

Chun Chan Is A Long Way From Home

A Straight A Student At CHS

By Jocelyn Kennedy

After a 30 hour plane trip from Hong Kong in late August, Chun Chan arrived in New York City and promptly exclaimed, "It's quieter and much prettier than I expected!"

Now a senior at CHS, Chun Chan is living on South Main St. with Mr. and Mrs. Prouty. With only three years of formal training in English, one would think that the change from the musical, flowing native Chinese to English might be very difficult. However, Chun communicates as easily as any native American. And her understanding? Even better!

An extremely intelligent 17 years old, Chun is receiving A's in all of her courses. First term she ranked number one in the class and joined those on the High Honor Roll.

An only child, Chun was born in Peking, China, and after 15 years moved to Hong Kong. Since China is a Communist country, Chun's parents, Che Kin Chan and Kam Sin Man-Chan, had to apply for a permit to leave the country. After two years of anxious waiting, they were granted permission to care for her ailing grandfather in the British Crown Colony of Hong Kong.

Although she had no knowledge of English, Chun discovered that she had to take all of her classes in the all-girl school in English. She explains that in Hong Kong her classes are much more intense. Her social studies course included public affairs, eeonomy, Chinese History and Western History. She also took physics, chemistry, biology, algebra, English and Chinese. And each class met three times a week. Here at CHS, Chun expresses a great love for biology, her favorite class.

While the Chans were still in China, the country was experiencing a cultural revolution. Many people were protesting difficult living conditions, the economy. Chun explains that in China there are no private enterprises. Everything is owned and run by the government. One of the Communist leaders, Teng Tiao Peng, is visiting here in the U.S. at the end of January.

Along with adjusting to a much smaller school in Hong Kong, Chun discovered that she could not choose her own classes. Each grade was divided into small groups which attended all of their classes together.

One method of transportation was a real surprise to Chun when she arrived in New York. "I rode one of those things that go underground — what do you call it? Subway. The people were so expressionless as they stood waiting."

Asked about national holidays, Chun said, "We have a Chinese New Year." In Hong Kong the New Year celebration arrives sometime in January or February, according to the movement of the moon. Also, unlike our Western calendar, the Chinese reckon time according to the moon's movements, with the 15th each month designated a "full moon night." On each of these occasions the family reunites and shares the day together. Each August 15 — mid-autumn — there is a big festival. Lobster and cakes are the traditional foods eaten at this time.

Although Chun's visa card is good for only one year, she has decided to stay and apply for a renewal in order to attend college here. So far she has filled out applications for Harvard, Wesleyan, Brown and Yale. And, in a low voice accompanied by a barely noticeable grin, she adds, "I would very much like to go to Harvard."

About the Americans she has met and her current teachers, Chun said, "In China, the teachers don't associate with the students. It is very difficult to earn an A grade because tests always include questions designed especially to trip you up. There is no Honor or High Honor Roll either."

And what of our teachers here at CHS? "They are friendly, and so willing to help."

Chun is surprised at the variety of ethnic groups in the U.S. "In Hong Kong there are mainly British and Chinese." And she concluded, "It really is pretty here, not at all like the scenes in the U.S. detective movies that are shown in Hong Kong."

Just before the interview ended, I asked Chun to write something in Chinese. Without hesitation, she drew out a line of characters standing for "I see the building." It really is amazing that in only three years Chun learned a whole new alphabet and a totally new way of communicating. She is much to be admired both for her remarkably quick learning and her friendliness towards others. A very pretty girl, Chun Chan is one of a kind, and her presence definitely adds a great deal to CHS.

organizations, and individuals who have helped us towards the realization of this project.

The Recreation Commission consists of seven members; Richard P. Barrow, Chairman; Nancy E. Sladen, Vice Chairman; Irene E. Brown, Secretary; Richard D. Ainslie; Eugene K. Price; Ernest J. Sullivan; and Hamilton T. Tewskbury. Members are elected to the post and should be thanked for the donation of their time and effort toward the betterment of recreational opportunities for the town of Cohasset.

The Recreation Department utilizes many facilities for programs. Special thanks should go to Dr. John F. Maloney, Superintendent of Schools, and Mr. John M. Raftery, Business Agent, and their staff of prinicipals, teachers, secretaries, and custodians that have made school facilities available for many of our programs.

While the Recreation Department employs over 50 part-time paid instructors, it also relys on the help of many volunteers and organizations. Special thanks should go to these numerous individuals for a job well done and greatly appreciated.

Cohasset Hoop Team In Tie For First Place

By Steve MacQuarrie

Cohasset's basketball team went through a pair of unusual experiences last week. First they found themselves alone atop the South Shore League after a 60-57 win at Duxbury Tuesday night. Then they were the victims of a bona fide upset, losing 64-63 to a Hanover team which entered the game with a 2-7 record.

Their win at Duxbury got them into first place by themselves, as the two teams were tied for first coming into the game. The Skippers played their best basketball of the season running off 10 straight points en route to a 17-9 first quarter lead. With Brian Keating and Paul Farren scoring from inside and controlling the rebounds, and Mark Goff (11 first half points) hitting from the perimeter, the lead got to as much as 16 (27-11) midway through the second quarter.

Here the teams tried role reversal, with the Skippers turning the ball over 6 times in less than four minutes and Duxbury scoring 12 straight points to pull within 4 at the half. Duxbury's man-to-man pressure continued to bother the visitors in the third period (8 Cohasset turnovers) and the Skippers trailed 47-46 at the end of three. Only a 10 point third quarter effort by Farren kept Duxbury from running away with the game.

The fourth quarter was an emotional and scoreboard pendulum as the lead changed hands 7 times, finally coming to rest on the Skipper side of the ledger with 43 seconds left as guard John Howley stole a Duxbury pass, was fouled and then, with 43 seconds left, swished a pair of foul shots to make it 56-55. Howley calmly added 2 more free throws 30 seconds later making the score 58-55 and sending Duxbury coach Foster Cass over to Cohasset coach John LeVangie for a congratulatory handshake and an acknowledgement of defeat.

Duxbury has some big names, including 6'9" Brian Connors and soccer All-American Colin McEvoy. But it was a pair of lesser knowns —6'2" forward Gordon Cushing, who scored 15 and battled Farren toe to toe all night and 5'9" guard John Andrews, who added 12 and harassed Howley all over the court, who almost won it for the Green Dragons.

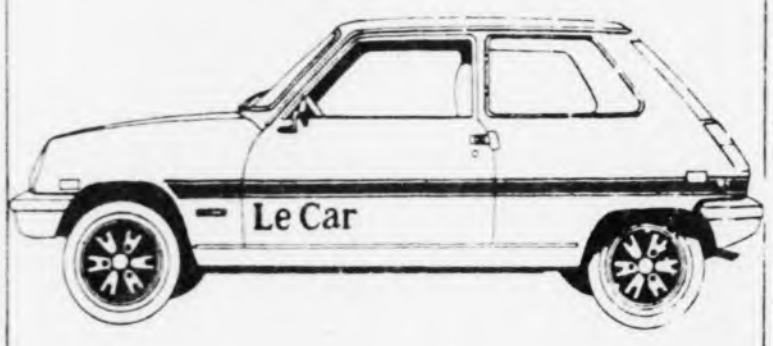
For the Skippers, Farren, the 6'5" senior was immense, scoring 24 points and adding 15 rebounds to lead both teams in those categories. Goff and Keating provided most of the rest of the offense with 13 and 11 points respectively.

Though the Skippers often looked sloppy against Duxbury's pressure defense and could manage only 4 fast break points, their composure in the final quarter was decisive, as they outscored Duxbury 10-4 in the last three minutes.

That same last minute composure was net in evidence against Hanover. After three years as the scourge of the South Shore League, the Hanoverians have fallen on hard times, and it seemed for much of this game that those times were not getting any softer. Cohasset seemed to have a lock on the game, leading by 10 late in the third quarter over a team they had already defeated (57-51) earlier in the year. But the fourth quarter turned into a nightmare. Co-captain Paul Farren got into foul trouble, the Skippers had severe difficulties from the foul line and Hanover outscored them 17-6 down the stretch, winning the game on a foul shot of their own in the waning seconds. High scorers for the losers were Brian Keating with 22 points and co-captain Matt Salerne, who had 20.

The loss reduced Cohasset's record to 9-3 and dropped them back into a tie for first — just where they had begun the week. This time, however, it was a four-way knot — with Duxbury, Holbrook and Middleboro sharing the other pieces.

The Skippers take to the road for their next three games — at Abington Friday night, at East Bridgewater Tuesday and at Norfolk Aggie next Thursday.



Wrestlers Lose To Duxbury

Duxbury had too much experience and defeated Cohasset wrestlers last week, 52-10.

Bright lights for the Skippers were a 126-pound division tie gained by Jack Hernan, another deadlock at 145 pounds by Craig Langford and a close but no cigar performance by Rick Hobson in the 157 bracket. Cohasset's Paul Stockbridge also earned a forfeit at 185 pounds, leaving the Skippers with a 3-3 mark whereas the Dragons are 6-1.

A GREAT YEAR TO GET INTO THE CLASSIFIEDS

Meet Eleanor & Frances Downs

Two Cohasset Treasures

Yesterday—Eleanor & Frances Downs

By Joanne Young

The year 1979 ushers in the 102nd birthday of Cohasset's oldest citizen, Miss Eleanor Downs. Her sister, Frances, was 95 Christmas Day.

Frances, or Fannie, as she is affectionately called, attributes their long lives to a healthy diet, most of the food grown in her own garden; not having the stresses that come from raising children; and the stability of loving and supportive parents.

We asked Fannie if she would have changed any part of her life, and she answered an emphatic "NO." "I never wanted to live anywhere but the beautiful town of Cohasset, and I had generous parents who allowed my sisters and me freedom of choice to do what we wanted with our lives." (We have noted in interviewing successful people who have lived long that this freedom is a constant in their lives. But it always presupposes trust, on the part of their parents, that traditional mores and values are also assumed.)

There were four Downs sisters: Jane, Rebecca, Eleanor and Frances. Their mother was Ellen O'Keefe, who was nurse to the Gammons children when she met and married Patrick Downs, who emigrated to Cohasset from Ireland in 1863 and was a stonemason. Many of the walls he built are still standing along South Main Street and around the Cox Estate on the Harbor. The Downs family were great horsemen in Ireland and the sisters' grandfather was killed while jumping during a hunt. Frances remembers her father had silver stirrups on his saddle.

Rebecca married Joseph Hock, an actor, and toured the country in a private car with her husband and James O'Neill, Eugene O'Neill's father, in the play THE COUNT OF MONTE CRISTO. Jane married Harry Lincoln and the Lincoln house is still standing next to the library. They built the first tennis court in Cohasset.

Eleanor and Frances never married, and remained in their parents' home on James Lane, which was built from ship's timbers washed up on the Cohasset shoreline. When Eleanor started school in 1882, there were no public schools. She and Rebecca attended the little red school-house which stood where St. Stephen's Church is now. then they went to the Academy, which was built on the present Town Hall property. It was rebuilt on Beach Street and is the present Tower house. The first school to contain first grade through high school was an imposing three story structure on the site of the present police station. Kindergarten was held in the current Rotary building on Elm St. When it became outmoded, the Ripley Road school was built and the Unitarian Church minister, Joseph Osgood, a graduate of Harvard, was its first teacher. Eleanor was instrumental in having the school renamed in honor of Joseph Osgood, in recognition of his contribution to education in Cohasset.

Frances graduated from Cohasset High School in 1899 and studied under Miss Chandler in the one-room Chandler Secretarial School in Boston. Frances became, at 17, secretary to a History professor at Harvard. Eleanor held an important position during World War I as head of government disbursement, for the Emery Wool Co., of all wool sold in the country. Wool was a scarce commodity then as most available wool was made into uniforms for the troops. Both sisters commuted to Boston by train every day except in the winter, when they rented an apartment in Boston and returned home for the weekends. During this time they were active socially in Boston and Frances rode horses sidesaddle and played tennis at the Country Club in Brookline.

Eleanor was tax collector for Cohasset for 17 years, after her retirement from secretarial work. It was part of her job to collect the poll tax and she would ask for one dollar per head from each family and try to collect ten dollars for each house. It was during the Depression when Roosevelt closed the banks and Eleanor tried to save homes from being sold at public auction.

Today—Frances (L) & Eleanor Downs

Frances retired at forty-five and spent her time at their James Lane home cultivating a magnificent flower and vegetable garden. The Downs had the first Ford car in Cohasset. It was a brougham and featured the self-starter. The original Fords were copies of carriages. Before the advent of the motor car, the Downs were very proud of their horse and carriage, which was lined with purple broadcloth.

Eleanor and Frances are remembered by townspeople as two distinguished Victorian ladies with a great flair for living. They loved opera and were patrons during opera season. When John MacCormack visited the Bancrofts they were invited to meet him. Their New Year's Day Egg Nog party was eagerly looked forward to by many Cohasset friends and neighbors.

Eleanor and Frances' popularity throughout their lives is due to their ability to adapt to each decade and the great changes it brought. They were always surrounded by young people, and may be considered the original sparkling example of what today is known as "women's liberation." They always considered themselves liberated and moved through life sharing and contributing. We are pleased that they have shared their memories of a fulfilled life with us.

Frances Downs voiced the sad fact that she feels she has outlived her usefulness in this life. We discussed the tragic waste of lives still alert and functional, lived out in nursing homes instead of around the family hearth.

In another century, there was room for all ages, and older members of the family were part of a useful unit, still baking, sewing, knitting, caring for the young and carrying on the tradition of the family with remembered stories of past generations. These are loving memories of the roots and traditions of two indomitable women - Eleanor and Frances Downs.

Mrs. Lucinda Newton

Newton—Fairchild

Miss Lucinda Jane Fairchild, daughter of Mrs. Richard G. Fairchild of Cohasset and the late Mr. Fairchild, was married Dec. 30 to James Francis Newton. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Newton of Plymouth.

The Rev. Edward T. Atkinson performed the double ring ceremony in the First Parish Church.

The bride was given in marriage by her grandfather, John W. Purssel Jr. She wore a white satin gown with a white overlay, lace train and mantilla. Her bouquet was of stephanotis and philanopsis.

Maid of honor was Miss Jennifer Fairchild of Cohasset. Bridesmaids were Miss Linda Sugdon of Carver and Miss Margaret Templeton of Mattapan.

Best man was John Call of Hull. Ushers were David Barry of Braintree and Mark Wallace of Rockland.

A reception followed in the church parish house. After a wedding trip to Maine, the couple is living in Hull.

The bride graduated from Milton High School.

The bridegroom graduated from South Shore Vocational Technical High School in Hanover and is assistant parts manager at Wolfe Sullivan Inc. in Hingham.

Rec Registrations

JOB PROGRAM

The Cohasset Recreation Department has during the past few weeks, placed about 18 youths on part-time continuous, and non-continuous jobs in the community.

The Department is still accepting applications from employers and youths for part-time positions.

If you are an individual or business that needs help in any form, call the Recreation Office at 383-6791, to register your job.

If you are a Cohasset resident and interested in part-time work, you also should call the Recreation Office to file applications for work.

SWIM PROGRAM

There are only a couple of days left to sign up for the Recreation Family Swim Program to be held at the MDC Pool Thursday evenings at 7, beginning February 1. The cost for the program is $15. per person for 8 weeks (1-1/2 hours in the pool each week plus transportation each week.) Children under age eight and non-swimmers of any age must be accompanied by an adult swimmer, 18 or older.

The Recreation Department participants will have the exclusive use of the pool each week from 7:30 to 9 p.m. This is an ideal family program and great for all residents. The program will be limited to 50 individuals, and a minimum of 47 people will be required to conduct the 8 week program. Registrations will be accepted via phone, call 383-6791.

YOGA REGISTRATION

Late registrations for beginner Yoga, for ages 13 and over, will be accepted by calling the Recreation Office at 383-6791. The fee for the eight-week program is $8. per person, with no family discounts. Participants will meet at the Town Hall auditorium, Wednesdays beginning Jan. 31, at 7:30 p.m. Each class will last for one hour in duration.

ELM'S MEADOW SKATING AREA

There are specific ways to test ice for safety. Throwing rocks, branches, sticks, etc is NOT the way to properly test ice for safety. Most debris thrown out on the ice will eventually freeze into the ice surface making it dangerous for skaters.

Please do not throw debris on the ice surface but rather test the ice on the edges of the skating area, at the railroad bed side, by carefully stepping out about six to eight inches proceeding carefully out to about two feet if ice appears safe. Chip ice with tool or stick until you can get a rough idea of how thick ice is. You should always have another person with you when you do this. However, if you should fall thru at this point, the water is only four to 12 inches deep.

RECREATIONAL SKATING

Registrations will be announced shortly for a skating program, (recreational and figure skating only) to be held at the MDC rink in Weymouth. The program will cost about $12 a person for six weeks, one hour a week. This fee includes bus transportation and ice time. Please watch the paper for further details.

FEBRUARY VACATION PROGRAMS

Programs for the February vacation, from Monday, Feb. 19, through Friday, Feb. 23, will be announced in early February.

Programs are being formulated for ages three years 6 months through senior high school.

Dejá Vu for 'New' Sox Voice

By Bucky Yardume

When the Red Sox answer the bell for the start of the American League baseball wars on April 5 (a Thursday on your calendar), the occasion will be the second coming for Ken Coleman. But there's another reason for the Cohasset resident and new radio Voice of the Red Sox to experience a touch of deja vu.

The thing is the Fenway Fusiliers will open against the Cleveland Indians.

Not only has the affable and articulate Coleman been at the mike on opening day for both the Sox and Indians before, but in his very first year of the 24 that he's covered major league baseball, the opening opponents were — you guessed it — the Sox and Indians.

It would be inaccurate to say this year's opener will be a homecoming for Coleman.

Actually, he's never been away. Not entirely.

Even when he departed local air lanes for Cleveland, he retained his home in Cohasset. "I love it too much to give it up," explains Coleman who lives within surf-sound of the seas breaking on the rock-bound Cohasset coast.

Then, you could say Coleman is

Break-Ins Still Plague CHS

By Judith Epstein

Security starts from the inside out, according to Supt. John Maloney. But it doesn't always work that way.

The Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School has, again, suffered a rash of break-ins in the past few weeks. Despite a planned program to help both students and faculty become more security conscious, young people, mainly juveniles, still find a way to enter the building.

Inside security has been stressed by the need for religious locking of lockers, windows, and doors to classrooms, Maloney said. Each faculty member is responsible for his or her classroom and the securing of equip--ment, materials and files. Confidential information is always kept under lock and key in the administrative offices. Chains have been added to all exterior doors for further security when the building is not in use.

All portable equipment has been inventoried, Maloney continued, and displays the name of the school and an identifying number painted on the surface, a tactic to make the equipment unattractive to thieves. Maloney emphasized the good working condition of all the lockers, many of which are new, repaired, or possessing new locks.

Problems continue, however, though these seemingly thorough steps to curb theft and vandalism have been taken, and they are twofold. According to Maloney, the difficulty stems from the ingenuity with which access to the building is attained, and the failure of students to secure their possessions within the building.

The carelessness or laziness of students in the proper closing and locking of their lockers was evident in an arbitrary check of the west wing lockers.

Out of 85 individual functioning lockers, 21 were unlocked when checked by Maloney this week. And consequently, the contents of these lockers are subject to theft not only during the school day, but also at night or on weekends when people manage to break in.

The motives for getting into the school are as varied as the modes of entry, Maloney said. Motives range from the desire to steal the types of equipment the high school has to offer, to the impulse to maliciously deface or destory property, to simply take part in a lark by being in a place where one

'Good Doctor' Drama-Rama This Week

The comedy The Good Doctor will be presented by the award-winning Cohasset Drama Workshop in the high school auditorium at 8 p.m. on this Friday and Saturday, Feb. 1 and 2.

With Jim Vivian in the role of the writer, the audience is introduced to a composite of Neil Simon and Anton Chekhov, from whose short stories Simon adapted the scenes that make up this collection. First to be met is the goverment clerk whose life is changed by a sneeze aimed accidently at his boss. Then we encounter the dentist's apprentice and his attempt to pull a tooth, the hag who storms a bank, the playboy who offers a lesson in winning the heart of a married woman, the woman who offers to drown herself for three rubles, and still more intriguing characters. The stories are droll, the portraits affectionate. The humor is infectious and the fun unending.

Chief Feola's Vacation May Be Permanent

Police Chief Randolph Feola plans to start his vacation on Feb. 5 — if he is feeling well.

Should the Chief take his vacation as planned, he will have 20 working days off which he will spend at his home in Florida. He would then be due back to work March 6. According to Feola, however, his health and particularly the condition of his back, is a variable which may considerably lengthen the time he will be absent from the department.

Feola apprised Selectmen of the fact that he recently fell and hurt his back again when checking a burgular alarm on King Street. This fall, he said, has rendered him unable to walk a distance without a cane.

Selectman Arthur Clark suggested at last week's board meeting, to recommend to the Chief that he retire because of his deteriorating physical condition. Selectman Henry Ainslie said, "He talks about being in pain all the time, he shouldn't be working." Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray agreed, but said that she would like to see a medical report first. No vote was taken to make a recommendation to the Chief.

Chief Feola maintained later, that, as far as he knows, 65 is the required retirement age for a police chief. Feola will be 64 on July 28. He indicated that if the Selectmen make their request, he will take the 120 sick days he claims he has coming — in conjunction with his vacation days — and then retire.

Feola also noted that he is entitled to take time off for injuries suffered in Boston-bred if not quite born.

Ken is a Hartford native. But his family moved to Dorchester by the time he was ready to go to school. His mother is a Roxbury native. So you could say he's half native Bostonian anyway. And his wife Ellen is from Jamaica Plain.

Coleman went to North Quincy High, then wound up in the Army in World War II and the Indo-China-Burma theater.

"Where General Stillwell — old, Vinegar Joe — was top honcho?" we reminisced.

"Yeah, I think he was there, too," quipped Coleman, always quick with the bonmot.

Thereafter, Coleman returned, put in his time at Curry College (then located in Boston) after which he launched his broadcasting career, if not exactly the way he'd dreamed about.

"I dreamed about being a big league broadcaster ever since I was eight years old," revealed Ken.

First port on the dial, though, was WSXB in Rutland, Vermont which, at last reports, didn't have a big league franchise or even a minor league one.

Nor did the second assignment when his path led back to the local area and WJDA in Quincy. We remember Coleman airing area high school football with elan, enthusiasm and also professionalism and accuracy not always gracing that level of sports.

Ken remained at WJDA from December, 1947 til August, 1951 when the trail again turned from the local area, this time to WNEB in Worcester where he put in a year until August, 1952.

"Then I got lucky," relates Coleman referring to the call that came from Cleveland.

His eighth grade dream of being a big league broadcaster became a reality, again if not quite as Coleman had envisioned it.

The call wasn't to broadcast Cleveland Indian baseball but the Cleveland Browns football-very much big league under the Paul Brown coaching aegis. Brown turned out champs more times than the current titlist Steelers ever can claim.

Coleman began a 14-year tenure with what was the Dumond television network which became the largest independent TV network and at one point encompassed 200 stations before the NFL went CBS.

Ken was a familiar of Brownies like quarterback Otto Graham, fullback Marion Mottley, Dub Jones (father of Baltimore quarterback Bert Jones), placekicker Lou Groza, a.k.a. the Toe; et al. So familiar, in fact that Groza is the godfather of Ken's son Bill, and Ken likewise for Lou's son Judd.

Coleman soon cracked the big league baseball lineup with the Indians, too. He aired their games during 10 of his 14 years in Cleveland. It was in his first year at the microphone for the Tribe that the Indians opened with the Sox. So 1979 is reincarnation of that occasion.

While in Cleveland, Ken also became the Voice of Ohio State broadcasting Buckeye football. The coach? Who but Woody Hayes. For $64 who coached OSU before Hayes?

"A great man," says Coleman of Hayes who finally was junked this year.

"He just had an unfortunate habit of punching people about once a year."

Hayes in his last 'bout' punched a Clemson player in the Gator Bowl.

"A bad move when you're on national television," commented Coleman.

In 1966, Ken came home to replace Curt Gowdy as the Red Sox Voice, and he remained in that capacity through 1974. He wasn't retained when the Sox switched from Channel 4 to Channel 38.

Now's he's back, and the excitement in his tone provides the answer as to his sentiments.

So which is his favorite — football or baseball?

"I know it may sound trite, but I really have no preference," replies Coleman. "Football and baseball, I love them both. I truly miss football. I loved doing Ohio State and Browns games. I've always loved baseball just as much."

Coleman feels extra lucky on one score baseball-wise.

"There's one basic difference between broadcasting football and baseball," he explains. "In football, it isn't so bad if a team isn't winning all the time. After all, the season's much shorter, particularly in college, but in baseball, it can get to be difficult if the club isn't even a contender. (and for everyone, Ken, for everyone).

"When I was doing the Sox in 1966, they only drew 600,000 for the year, about 8,000 a game. They weren't drawing like they are now. The turnaround year came in 1967 (the Impossible Dream Year). Their magnetism became infectious."

Albeit the Sox certainly rank as a contender again this year, even hardcore Sox fans have trepidations after the winter trades which strengthened the World Champion New York Yankees — evern more. After all, without the added strength, the Yanks staged the phenomenal stretch run that overhauled the Sox last season the year of The Impossible Finish.

How does Coleman see it? Are the Yanks uncatchable? Did they buy themselves another pennant? And World title?

"I hope not," Coleman see it? Are the Yanks uncatchable? Did they buy themselves another pennant? And World title?

"I hope not," Coleman says earnestly. "But the Red Sox have to be figured right up there so it looks like a great season."

Never one to mince words, Coleman declared, "I don't like the free agent draft" which has enabled the Yankes to stake their claim to the championships by acquiring everybody's pitching talent from Catfish Hunter to Luis Tiant just by brandishing the fattest checkbook.

"I don't blame a player for going where he gets the most money," Coleman admits. "But it certainly hasn't been good for the game. I'd hope that something will be done to change the situation before the fans react so adversely that it hurts baseball. There has to be a change. But don't ask me what."

Coleman has another calling besides sports, although it's very much associated. He was a volunteer — worker for the Jimmy Fund. Then last January he was named with an office at the Sidney Farber

Ken Coleman

Cancer Research Center in Boston.

He's one of a staff of four for the Fund which sports have rallied to support for so many years. Jeff Donahue is his assistant and Maureen Burnett and Ruth Ordway office staffers.

The past year alone, Coleman made over 200 appearances at the community level on behalf of the Fund and cancer research.

While so many big names in sports have helped the fund, Coleman says, "It's the local communities and the generosity of people who support cancer research which has kept it going."

Just one name synonymous with the Jimmy Fund, of course, is Ted Williams, the former Red Sox slugger and stormy petrel.

"Ted still helps," emphasized Coleman. "I don't see him as often, but I hear from him regularly. The checks supporting the fund still come from him in the mail."

Ken and Ellen Coleman have five children, although they're a little old to be called children anymore.

There's Casey who's following his father's mike steps as a sports announcer almost literally since he's working in Cleveland. And Kerry, who's attending UMass. Kathleen is employed at the South Boston Boys Club. Susan is in Florida. And Bill — Lou Groza's godson — is studying at the Berkeley School of Music and is a bass guitarist with a musical group, name of Special Delivery, which plays the New England circuit and has had gigs on the South Shore.

Coleman somehow finds time for a passel of hobbies.

"I just took up golf," Ken reveals but he also snorkels in Cohasset waters and jogs. But his favorite is shooting pool.

Ken was an athlete in school playing baseball for North Quincy High and Sacred Heart CYO of Wollaston.

His position? Pitcher.

"I was a crafty righthander," chuckles Ken.

The Red Sox just lost a crafty righthander to the Yankees, namely El Tiant. In a pinch they just might dip into the broadcasting box for Ken's mound services.

Comes March 4, and Ken will be with the Red Sox in spring training at Winterhaven, Fla.

And on April 5, he'll be back 'home' atop Fenway in the broadcasting booth.

from the desire to steal the types of equipment the high school has to offer, to the impulse to maliciously deface or destroy property, to simply take part in a lark by being in a place where one shouldn't.

Similarly, youths from all sections of town have been apprehended for the break-ins. They are mostly boys under the age of 17, Maloney said, and guilty of antics wihin the schools that are usually just annoyances, such as spraying walls and lockers with fire extinguishers or disarraying papers and supplies.

Six to eight of the known parties are "repeaters," Maloney explained, those who have broken into the school more than once and who may be part of a group who wish to continue to do damage to the school. It is believed that some may have left school or have been out a year and involved in covert activities elsewhere — at any rate, the repeaters are not all students.

Student first offenders are reprimanded by the school by suspension, according to the seriousness of the break. Maloney explained that punishment is coupled with notification of police and parents, however, frequent offenders may face further police investigation and various charges for breaking and entering.

The potential for destruction and large thefts still exists if illegal access to the school is possible, and this is what worries administrators. "If someone really wants to get in, they'll get in," Maloney said. A popular method of entry, he said, was driving a car or van through the breezeway between the north wing of the school and library. The vehicle would then be driven around the corner in the courtyard out of sight of patrolling police cruisers, parked alongside the building where the low roof could be easily scaled. A skylight would be broken allowing the intruders to lower themselves inside the school.

Efforts to curtail this practice are soon to be implemented. A set of double doors at either end of the breezeway will not only prohibit entry to the inner courtyard, but will also insulate the building in cold weather. Heavy gage wire mesh and locks on skylights will also discourage entrance via the rooftop.

Further internal precautions are now being taken by completely separating the boys in-school physical education and after-school athletic locker rooms. Maloney said the physical education locker room need only be unlocked during school hours, and conversely the athletic rooms unlocked after school. This should reduce by two-thirds the area that has to be kept under supervision, and once again this is a measure taken to insure the safety of the belongings placed in gym lockers.

Other cases of internal vandalism, such as displacement or marring ceiling panels, or breaking windows or the bars across them, may not result as much from maliciousness as from adolescent rowdiness. Maloney emphasized that values taught in the home for the consideration of public and private property have to be instilled in children, so that they may pass by the temptation to yank a piece of exposed telephone wire out of the wall or a chance to take a midnight ramble across the school's rooftop.

All in all, it is a small percentage of students who partake in these activities, Maloney said, but those who do are making it tough on the remainder who must constantly police the safety of their books, coats, jackets and gloves; and tougher still on the faculty who must watch with vigilance the whereabouts and condition of the equipment they use to help educate Cohasset students.

Kindergarten Registration Continues This Week

Children who are five years old on or before Dec. 31, 1979, are eligible for admission to kindergarten in September 1979 and may be registered throughout the week of January 29. Registration may be made at the Joseph Osgood School between 9 and 3.

Future mailings indicating the dates of the orientation sessions and screening program will be based on this registration. A birth certificate must be presented at the time of registration if not already recorded at the Town Hall in Cohasset.

Scouts Out Selling Cookies

Between Jan. 26 and Feb. 11, Girl Scouts in Cohasset will be taking orders for the 1979 Blue Hill Girl Scout Council Product Sale.

The 1979 sale is important because the proceeds from it, as in other years, will be used to support troop activities. Council program events, camp facilities, fees and more.

Volunteers coordinate and direct all facets in a well-planned procedure that includes informing and training everyone involved down to the little Brownie.

The 1979 Council Cookie Chairman is Mrs. Emanuel Hambelburg of Braintree who presided at the recent luncheon held to distribute materials to the Town Cookie Chairman of the 19 communities served by Blue Hill Girl Scout Council.

the line of duty. The Chief said he didn't know how long he would take off because he didn't know what would happen to his back. According to a count he made on the calendar, if he were to take his 120 days sick leave without retiring, he would not be returning to work until Aug. 20.

Feola also notified Selectmen that all his reports and inventories for the police department have been completed. He added that he had not taken a day off in the past year.

Lt. Charles Stockbridge was recommended by Feola to be appointed Acting-Chief during his absence. This appointment will save the town money in overtime pay. Lt. Stockbridge will probably be appointed this week, Clark said.

Selectmen To Try Again On Voided TM Article

Selectmen will resubmit the article to extend the water main along Chief Justice Cushing Highway for consideration at the annual Town Meeting.. The manner of financing the extension is still in question.

There is an apparent difference of opinion over the illegality of vote taken on the same article at November's special town meeting. Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter, Jr. ruled the vote illegal when he determined that the water commissioners had refused to extend the main. Town Accountant William Signorelli, however, based the illegality of the vote on the matter of repayment, that any town money appropriated for water department construction must be repaid.

'T' Help

Robert Foster is the new Mahatma of the MBTA.

That's nice.

With appointment of the Scituate resident, the South Shore received one of the few bones tossed its way by Beacon Hill.

But it's ironic, too.

Now the South Shore has the MBTA head man, but, of course, no service. Just a hefty share of the annually huge deficit.

MBTA stands for Massachusetts Bay Transit Authority.

That's nice.

That's ironic, too.

Most towns on Massachusetts Bay don't get anything from the MBTA except the aforementioned annual bill.

Program On Alcoholism Coming

As part of a comprehensive community education program, the South Shore Council on Alcoholism will sponsor a series of workshops for parents of elementary, junior high and high school students at the new study hall at Cohasset High School.

The program will be held on consecutive Mondays from 7:30 - 9 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

The first series will be for parents with children in grades K - 6 and is scheduled as follows:

Feb. 12 — What to do About Anger.

Feb. 26 — How to Get Your Children to Listen

March 5 — What To Do When Resolving Conflict

March 12 — Being a Consultant to Your Child - Establishing Credibility.

The second series will be for parents of 7th and 8th graders and will be held March 26, April 2, April 9 and April 23.

The third series for parents of 9th and 10 graders is scheduled for April 30, May 7, May 14 and May 21.

The fourth series for parents of 11th and 12th graders will be June 14, June 11, June 18 and June 25.

The premise of this program is that parents have the ability to communicate with their children. Throughout the program, parents will deal with the following issues:

In talking to your children, do you often get upset?

Do you wonder how to deal with difficult situations?

Are you uncomfortable talking about touchy issues?

New Offerings At CCC

The Cohasset Community Center will offer a new course in authentic oriental rug making. It will be taught by Mary Kelley and run for five weeks on Tuesday mornings from 9-12. The first class begins Feb. 13 for 5 weeks. The cost is $30.

Other new courses being offered include:

— A stencil tracing workshop, taught by Nancy Clapp in her home at 251 Beechwood St., on Tuesday, Feb. 5 from 9:30 -11:30 a.m. Cost is $3.

— Tax workshop for 1978 Tax Returns, conducted by Jack Conroy at the Community Center, Thursday, Feb. 8 from 8 - 9:30 p.m. Cost is $3.

The course will be conducted because of the new Tax Revenue Act of 1978.

All courses and workshops should be preregistered at the Community Center in person or by mail. The number is 383-0888. For more information, call Judy Volungis at the Center from 9 - 12 Monday, Thursday, or Friday.

Fire Dept. In State Of Flux

By Gilbert Tower

Commentary

The Cohasset Fire Department situation has been changing for years. At the present time it is not static. At the next annual town meeting in April, the town will be called upon to decide whether to make a significant change.

As the writer sees it, there is going to be a great increase in the number of smoke and heat detectors in all houses and buildings. They will sound warnings before a fire even starts. They will enable firefighters and equipment to arrive almost instantly. A little fire just starting can be extinguished easily before it has gotten severe.

It is hoped that the chief will present to the town a plan for encouraging smoke and heat detectors in every house and building. The newspapers have reported that Chelsea, Mass. is taking a step in that direction with the help of government money. The thought occurs that the Cohasset Fire Department could encourage individual homeowners to install detectors and conduct a campaign to get them put in. Probably no fire department expenditure would do more good than money spent to encourage detectors. It is understood that at Scituate the Rotary Club is promoting smoke detectors.

The Cohasset Fire Department originated about 100 years ago as related in Bert Pratt's history. At first the wagon carrying hoses and ladders was pulled by hand. The next step was to use horses and eventually motors. "Old Independence" the hand-powered pump and water tank, I believe, was purchased about 1825, but was not very effective.

Cohasset's public water system was installed in 1885 and seemed to be a great improvement in fire protection, but the pressure was inadequate. A pumping engine was needed but was considered to be an extravagance. As a boy attending town meeting, the writer distinctly remembers how a Sandy Beach resident named Harry H. Gay stood up and said, "Why shouldn't they have it?" That did it! If the summer people were willing to pay increased taxes there was no objection.

For years the town had a volunteer fire department of "call men" who would hear the bells ringing at the three stations. There were a few regular men who drove the trucks. As they proceeded along the street they would pick up men to fight the fire. Then came television and the firemen complained that they could not hear the bells when listening to T.V. It was predicted that the present horns would be violently opposed. Strangely they are not objected to and now they sound rather comforting by saying that help is on its way in answer to a call.

The Beechwood and North Cohasset fire stations originated in the horse-drawn period. Residents of those parts of the town felt that they were being neglected. After a snowstorm they were cut off from the central station. The booklet of insurance rates was also a factor. On the few houses more than a mile from a fire station the fire insurance rates are slightly higher. Probably that does not make much difference because some people do not pay much for insurance. Fireproof shingles are now taking the place of wooden shingles.

The demolition of the Black Rock House greatly reduced the danger of fire. If the vacant wooden structure had burned on a windy day, a conflagration might have resulted. With that possibility eliminated Cohasset's need for more engines was reduced. Our town's fire protection problem is very simple when you stop to think about it. Almost all burnable buildings are private homes, generally well spaced. A fire at one house rarely endangers adjoining houses. A weakness has been that a fire has to gain headway to become discovered. The fire department usually arrives within ten minutes, but by that time a fire may have made a good start. If someone is living in the house, the alarm by the smoke detector will permit a call to the fire department before the start of a fire. The general installation of smoke and fire detectors should greatly reduce Cohasset's fire problem.

One item of fire department expense is hose, the 2½" cotton rubber-lined type. It has to be tested every year and it requires care to prevent blow-outs. Salesmen make a good profit on fire hose. Every manufacturer claims his hose to be best, but for years there was only the saleman's word for it. Finally the underwriter's laboratory wrote a specificiation for fire hose so that now there is a standard of quality.

Salesmen hate that but buying by specification saves town money. In the writer's experience as fire chief, a salesman complained to a selectmen that the chief was buying cheap hose which makes trouble. As a matter of fact, some lengths of underwriter's specification hose lasted longest but the writer's effort to save town money was defeated.

One important factor in town fire protection is the system of underground water pipes. Many are now old and small so that they resist the flow of water needed for a fire. If Cohasset buys some pipes from the Hingham Water Company for the western Cohasset area, it will be a help. Snowstorms are not very bothersome now because adequate equipment keeps the streets open. Smooth paved streets permit getting quickly to every part of the town.

Some long private ways continue to be a problem for the Fire Department, but they may permit at least one pumping engine with a tank full of water to get near a remote house. A number of Cohasset buildings are now equipped with automatic sprinklers which are very effective and practically make the buildings immune in respect to fire. Our problem is nothing like that of a city where there are high buildings. Now it is not necessary for every town to have fire equipment in proportion to the maximum possible need. Safety to life is the first consideration! Safety to property and reduction of insurance rates is secondary.

But, it is comforting to know mutual aid from other towns can be counted upon. When a serious fire occurs it takes only a few minutes for the neighborhood to become full of equipment and firefighters. It is also comforting to all residents of the town that Cohasset has an excellent fire department who are alert and capable.

Drama Workshop Wins Award

Just as David felled Goliath with perfect aim, the Cohasset Drama Workshop was right on target as its performance of Story Theatre was selected as the best production at the Emerson College Theatre Arts Festival Jan. 13, defeating larger schools as much as three times the size of Cohasset High. In addition, Beth Donahue was awarded the title of best actress, giving the Drama Workshop victory in two of the three prizes presented.

The presentation was originally performed in November at Cohasset High School. Stories from such sources as Aesop and the Brothers Grimm are blended with humor and mime to produce a highly original theatre form in Story Theatre.

Beginning in September, the troupe of actors experimented with a variety of roles and interpretations as they attempted to bring the fairy tale characters to life with the help of director Ron Emmons, who labels Story Theatre our most creative work so far.

Appearing in the award-winning production along with Beth Donahue were Missy Barcomb, Cathleen Collins, Meri Fink, Jonathan Foell, David Hanlon, Mary Lagrotteria, Scot Muir, Sally Sisson, James Vivian and Jerry White.

The show will next be performed in regional competition for the State Drama Festival in March. Any local organization interested in a performance of this 40 minute work should contact Ron Emmons at the high school.

Social Service League Health Projects Will Continue

The Cohasset Social Service League this year under contract with the Board of Health of the town, will continue to provide community health nursing services to residents of Cohasset.

These services include: Senior Keep Well Clinics, Well Child Conferences, hypertension screening, tuberculin detection, health promotion and disease control activities.

The Senior Keep Well Clinics are held on the fourth Wednesday of the month from 1 - 3 p.m. in the Recreation Room of the Senior Housing at 60 Elm St., and on the third Wednesday of the month from 1:30 - 3 p.m. at the Social Service League Office, 83 South Main Street. At these clinics blood pressure is taken urine tested, weight checked and hematocrits done. Diets, medication and health problems are discussed. All residents over sixty years of age are urged to attend. There is no charge.

In response to the increased demand for hypertension screening for residents of all ages, a Saturday morning hypertension screening clinic is to be held on March 31 from 9 - 11 a.m. at the Social Service League office. There will be more details about this clinic at a future date.

There are three Well Child conferences planned for 1979. The first clinic is scheduled for March 13 from 9 - 11 a.m. Parents of pre-school children who would like to make an appointment for their child, or who would like to know more about clinic services may call the office.

In cooperation with the Police and Fire departments, a program which is going to be called White Alert is in the process of being initiated by the Social Service League. Frequently, when a medical emergency arises, indivisuals, because of their medical condition are unable to supply the hospital and/or ambulance personnel with pertinent medical and social background and information which is important for their treatment and care.

This program supplies this information by having individuals who would like to participate in the program complete Emergency Information Cards to be kept in the individuals home in case of an emergency. A coding system would alert ambulance E.M.T.'s that this patient information was available.

Those who would like to know more about the program or who would like assistance in filling out White Alert Emergency Information Cards may contact the League on Mondays.

A community health nurse is available to residents of Cohasset from 8 - 9 a.m. and 12 - 1 p.m. Monday through Friday. Town residents who need their blood pressure checked, who need injections or other health related information, including health services available to them, may drop into the Social Service League office at this time or call for more information.

The Social Service League is also a certified Home Health Agency which provides Visiting Nurse, Physical Therapy, Medical Social Work services and Home Health Aide services for home bound patients. These services are available to all residents of Cohasset and many services are covered under the Medicare program.

Residents are urged to cotact the League if you have any questions about Medicare home health care coverage or about other services which the League offers, including the Senior Shuttle Bus, loan of medical equipment, Meals on Wheels or youth employment services.

The League also employs a professionally trained social worker who offers individual, family and marital counseling. A sliding fee schedule is utilized and no one is denied services due to inability to pay.

Good & Bad

Hoopsters LoseTo Middleboro,Whip Abington

By Steve MacQuarrie

Cohasset's basketball team went through its own version of the ancient good news-bad news routine last week, losing on Tuesday to Middleboro, 74-66 in overtime, before thumping a pesky Abington team on Friday, 65-46.

Tuesday began auspiciously as the Skippers awoke to find themselves ranked sixth among the sixty-odd Eastern Massachusetts Division III teams. They showed why in the first half against Middleboro, racing off to a 37-29 halftime lead, keyed by 56 per cent shooting from the floor and led by a 16 point effort from senior Brian Keating.

There were, however, a pair of bad omens amongst the brightness — which did not augur well for the second half — 3 fouls on Paul Farren and Middleboro's frequent penetration of Cohasset's man to man defense for layups (which, fortunately for the Skippers, their opponents missed with uncanny regularity).

Cohasset must have drunk some Jekyll-Hyde potion at half-time, for they looked like a different team after intermission. Turning the ball over 4 straight times in the first 3 minutes, they let the Sachems back into both the game and the lead. The fourth quarter was close, with ties registered at 52, 54, 56, 58, 60 and 62 before a Middleboro hoop with 8 seconds left sent the game to overtime.

Despite playing without Farren, who had fouled out in the fourth quarter Cohasset stayed close until the last minute of overtime, when their man-to-man defense broke down once more, giving the Sachems an easy layup, a three point lead and the game with just 50 seconds left. The Skippers could manage to hit only 8 shots out of 30 attempts (a dismal 27 per cent) in the second half, as poor shot selection helped to do them in.

Coach John LeVangie was not disappointed in his team's performance against first-place Middleboro. "It was a fine game between two strong teams, both of whom played well," was his bottom line assessment. Despite playing less than the full game Farren led all scorers with 22. He was backed up by Keating's 20.

Friday the Skippers celebrated the end of mid-year exams by traveling to Abington and flattening the Green Wave. Abington elected to slow the game down in the first half, taking a minute or more to get off each shot. But Cohasset remained patient, squeezing out a 28-19 halftime lead behind Paul Farren's 16 points. They threw a half-court trap defense at Abington in the third quarter, and salted the game away before the fourth period was very old.

Farren again led all scorers, finishing with 21 and Keating again topped the rest of the team this time with 11. Rich Tebbetts had a strong game rebounding and Tom Higgins found himself playing much of the game at the unfamiliar position of point guard and performed admirable. "Tommy used his height well in directing our offense," said LeVangie, "and I may use him here again against certain teams."

The win gave Cohasset a record of 10-4, and they take their mark to Norfolk Aggie in a non-league joust tonight (Thursday). Next league game is at home against Hull Tuesday night. Cohasset slipped by the Pirates in overtime last month and they'll need to do at least as well this time to stay in running for the South Shore League title.

Girls Five Hangs On To Trip Abington

Staving of a Middleboro rally, Cohasset's girls basketball team last week hung on for a 44-40 victory.

At the intermission, the teams left the floor tied at 20-all. Cohasset surged to a 36-25 third period lead but then lost two starters on fouls and had to hang on from there on in.

Guard Diane Maloney had 18 points for the Skippers including two key charity throws with only a minute left that proved the winning points. Katie Salerno hooped 12 and Ellen McCarthy 17 for the Skippers who upped their mark to .500 at 5-5.

Abington's powerhouse girls basketball team proved too much last week as it downed Cohasset, 44-23, to continue its undefeated march through 14 straight games.

At half the Wave led, 17-9.

Dianna Maloney was high with eight points for Cohasset which saw its record dip to 5-6.

Behind 14 points by Kate Salerno, Cohasset's girls basketball team defeated Hanover 48-41, last week.

The Skippers led throughout the game and Salerno's showing was backed by double digit scoring by Dianne Maloney, who had an even dozen points and Jodi Sandbloom with 10.

Hanover made a run at the lead pulling within four points with two minutes left, but Cohasset hung on for the win.

Icemen Chill Hull

A pair of goals by Larry Evans sparked Cohasset's hockey team to a 4-2 win over Hull last week.

The Skippers apparently thrive on playing shorthanded as they collected three of their goals when they had players in the penalty box.

Hull moved out in front with a first period goal but Cohasset came back to even the count in the second period on Evans' first goal.

Cohasset moved in front on a third period score by Doug Dillon and put the decision away on a solo goal by Don Compadelli which proved the winner and an insurance marker by Evans for his second tally.

Hull got its second goal in the third period.

Outstanding at point for the Skippers was defensemen Tim O'Connell.

Corrigan Grad Pam Maynard In Maryland Meet

Miss Pamela Maynard of Locust Road competed in the Capitol Cup meet, Jan. 27 at College Park, Maryland.

Pamela studied at Cathy Corrigan School of Gymnastics for two and a half years before her acceptance to the Grossfeld School of Gymnastics in Milford, Conn.

To attend the Grossfeld School, it was necessary for Pammy, (as she is known to her many friends), to leave the Deer Hill School, when she was in the fourth grade.

Last year while on the basic team, Pammy qualified to represent Massachusetts at the Massachusetts State Trials and placed third in the Chilren's Division meet which was held in Philadelphia.

Jan 1, six months after entering the Grossfeld School, she was promoted to the Elite team, and at age 10 is the youngest member of the team.

As a member of the Elite team, she now lives in the school dormitory with the 12 other girls, one of whom is the well known Wide World of Sports television gymnast and Gold Medal winner of the 1978 U.S. World Championship, Marcia Frederick.

Life at the dorm is regimental with special diets served in the dining room; all team members participate in six hours of vigorous gymnastics daily.

Pammy is enrolled in the fifth grade at St. Mary's Parochial School in Milford, and hopes to be one of the future stars in the world of gymnastics.

Just like little Miss Muffet, renowned for sitting on her tuffet eating half-done cheese, more and more of us are devouring cheese. Curds and whey are but a few ingredients found in either natural or processed cheese. Natural cheese results from concentrating components of milk and removing water. Processed cheese results after mixing various cheese together, adding an emulsifier and heating until one gets, in the words of the Federal regualtions, "a homogenous, plastic mass."

Processed cheese was first developed in America by J.L. Kraft in 1916 who discovered that there is little difference in nutrition between natural and process cheese. If you find that fish and meat prices do terrible things to your food budget, cheese dishes such as this Fettucini and Spinach are a little easier.

1/4 c. salad oil
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 pkg. [10 oz.] frozen, chopped spinach, thawed, drained
1/2 c. canned condensed chicken or beef broth, undiluted
1/2 tsp. dried basil leaves
1/4 c. chopped parsley
1/4 c. grated Parmesan chees
1 c. cottage cheese
1/2 tsp. salt and dash pepper

Cook noodles and drain. Meanwhile, in hot oil saute garlic and thawed, drained spinach, stirring for 5 min. Add the broth, basil, parsley, Parmesan, cottage cheese, salt and pepper. Stir over low heat until blended — about 2 min. Toss cheese-spinach mixture with noodles. Turn into heated serving dish. Makes 5 servings.

Cheese is a part of our heritage. The Bible tells of a delivery of honey and curdled milk to David in 1000 B.C. In Homer's Odyssey, King Menelaus of Sparta praises cheese. The origin of cheesecake is hard to trace, for it exists in one sort of another in many countries in Europe, but many think of it as America's soul food. Here is Craig Claiborne's Mocha Cheesecake to satisfy your soul.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. As it heats, prepare bottom crust by blending 3/4 c. of graham cracker crumbs with 4 T butter and 1 1/2 T sugar. Blend with fingers and press onto bottom of ungreased 8" springform pan. To the bowl of an electric mixer add 3, 8 oz. pkgs. of cream cheese. Add 1 c. of granulated sugar and 2 large eggs. Beat until smooth, increasing the beater speed cautiously to prevent splattering. Add 1, 8 oz. pkg. of semisweet chocolate squares that have been melted over low heat while stirring with 2 T heavy cream. Add 1 c. sour cream. Pour in 1/4 c. of coffee and 1/4 c. dark rum. Add 1 tsp. vannilla extract and beat til well blended. Pour and scrape the batter into the pan. Bake 45 min., or until puffed at the sides. The center will remain somewhat soft, but will become firm on cooling. Let cake cool on a rack several hours. Remove sides of pan. Garnish with chocolate curls and sprinkle with blend of 1 T each confectioners' sugar and cocoa. Yield: 8 to 12 servings.

Cheddar is the most popular of all American cheese, followed by Italian varieties and then Swiss. Swiss is not a Swiss without the holes, or eyes, which are created by adding propionic-acid bacteria so that during aging, carbon dioxide is released to create the holes.

This Alpine Fondue is as tasty and nourishing as you could wish.

1 can cheddar cheese soup
1 pkg. (8 ox.) Swiss cheese, cut in pieces
1/4 tsp. prepared mustard
1/4 tsp. Worcestershire
1/8 to 1/4 tsp. hot pepper sauce
French or Italian bread cubes

In saucepan, combine soup, cheese, mustard, Worcestershire and pepper sauce. Heat until cheese melts. Stir occasionally. Spear bread with fork and dip into hot cheese.

Makes about 2 cups.

The Blood Donor Adventure

By Judith Epstein

I used to be incredulous at the idea of giving blood. That people actually allowed needles to get stuck in their arms and be sapped of their most precious bodily fluid was beyond me. And for free?

One day last summer I had escaped from work early and was headed down Kent Street bound for Peggoty Beach and the merciful coolness of the ocean. I was just passing St. Mary's Rectory when a man approached me on the street.

"Have you given blood today?" he asked. No, of course I hadn't, and I was just on my way to the beach, thank you. Well, the man started waving his 'Give Blood' bumper sticker and said things like, if a man of my age can give blood why can't a strapping young girl like you give, too, and so on.

I was shamed into it. I walked inside the Rectory. The place was steaming from bustling activity in the hot July air. I can't go through with this, I thought, I'll faint dead away. Furthermore, I wasn't decent — I wore only a bikini with a towel wrapped around my waist.

That first donation is now a little hazy in my memory. I remember that a very nice woman greeted me and at my mention of the words "first time" she took extra pains to see that I would survive the ordeal. I did. It was kind of fun, actually. And at the end of it all, a photographer snapped his shutter as a volunteer attached a donor's pin to the strap of my bathing suit.

In subsequent trips to blood mobiles, initial nervousness ebbed, and I paid more attention to the donating procedures. Last week in Cohasset I descended on the volunteers and Red Cross personnel working at the bloodmobile visiting the Unitarian Parish House. I decided that this time, in exchange for my donation, the workers would be asked to explain just what they were doing every step of the way.

First of all, a recruiting program has been going on in the town prior to the bloodmobile's arrival. In Cohasset, most of the appointments for donations are made over the telephone.

In Scituate, I have received postcards with a time reserved for my donation. Whatever the method used, an estimated number of pints to be received is reported to the regional Red Cross blood center — ours is located at 814 Huntington Avenue in Brookline — and professional staff is sent according to demand at the donor site.

On arrival at the Unitarian Parish House, I was met by Alfred Odermatt, the chapter's Publicity Chairman, who introduced me to everybody. At the reception desk Jill O'Donnell and Roella Hobbs co-chairmen of the drive, logged in donors according to their appointment or walk-in times on a chart made up for every half hour.

Volunteers Ann Churchill, Kathleen England and Mary Howley recorded the preliminary statistics needed for each donor — name, address and Social Security number. A donation may be credited to a group or organization so that should a need arise, say, at your place of business, blood would be available. However, Mrs. Churchill noted that Cohasset's chapter will cover anybody's blood needs.

Temperature taking is the next step. Gerta Cahill was in charge of the electric thermometer which records a person's temperature via a little screen. If the temperature is within normal range, the person is ushered on to a registered nurse where blood pressure and pulse are taken, hemoglobin is tested, and a brief medical history is recorded.

Here, Red Cross head nurse Margaret Piper explained that the nurses taking this information, although most were volunteers, are specially trained to take histories to function all round on mobile units. Blood pressure is taken via the regular cuff method; hemoglobin is tested by taking a few drops of blood from a pricked ear lobe (it doesn't hurt at all) and placing it in a container with a solution which allows blood with sufficient iron to drop to the bottom.

A rash of questions are asked, mainly to ascertain whether a person has or has had a communicable disease which could contaminate the blood and make it unsuitable for donating. Also, if blood has been given in the past, the nurse will ask to see the donor card which gives blood type and a record of previous donations.

A volunteer then brings the donor to the donating table, where he lies down and a Red Cross nurse readies his arm for the venipuncture. The nurse examines the inside of the arm for a good vein for insertion of the needle which will draw the blood. This procedure is really not as dramatic as it sounds, and pain from the venipuncture is momentary and minimal.

In about six to eight minutes a pint of blood will flow into a plastic container that also holds about two ounces of an anti-coagulant - preservative solution. When it and two test tubes attached to the plastic pouch are full, the tubing through which the flow flowed is clamped off, the needle is removed, and the arm is held above the head for a few minutes at venipuncture site.

When the arm has stopped bleeding, the donor may sit up slowly. The circulatory system may need some time to fully adjust to the loss of fluids and slight dizziness or lightheadedness may result. However, in most cases, donors proceed to the canteen where they have something to eat and drink or at least relax for 15 minutes.

The blood is immediately refrigerated in cartons which are lined with ice and special insulation. It then travels to Boston where it it typed and distributed: processing is usually done within 24 to 48 hours of its arrival.

Cohasset's bloodmobile this week yielded 126 pints of blood. Odermatt said this was a good turnout but not what past years have boasted. The need for blood cannot be underscored enough; so, if any of you who have not given blood are apprehensive as I once was, please try to allay your fears. Remember, too, all donors must be in good health and between 17 and 65 years old.

Police Recover Stolen Goods Valued At $250,000

It Was Unbelievable, Stockbrid

By Judith Epstein

Cohasset Police officers recovered-ed nearly $250,000 worth of stolen goods from a Margin Street apartment early Saturday morning following a week of surveillance and an evening of good luck.

"The gates of heaven opened up for us, and we went in by invitation," said Lt. Charles Stockbrige of the fortuitous recovery.

Patrolman Paul Laugelle, one of the officers credited with the discovery of the goods, agreed. "It was convenient." He and Det. Donald Damon of Scituate had been trying to gather sufficient information on the apartment, which they watched for a week, to obtain a search warrant.

"I got information from an informant," Laugelle said. "We have no detectives here; I took telephoto pictures of the place and watched it on my own time."

So, when Laugelle and Patrolman Randolph Feola Jr. received a call at 6:30 p.m. Friday to check on a woman who claimed she'd been beaten by her boyfriend, a policeman's dream was about to unfold.

Linda Ostravage, 19, was waiting outside Kimball's Motel expecting a police escort home. But when Laugelle and Feola discovered where the young woman lived, where, in fact, she led them because she apparently feared going home alone, they immediately secured the apartment and called for Lt. Stockbridge's assistance.

Lt. Stockbridge currently in charge of the department, arrived at the scene and was stunned, he said, as he walked through the apartment. "All I observed were oriental rugs, oil paintings, Ming vases.

"It was unbelievable," he said. "It was obvious the apartment was full of stolen items, that they didn't belong to a 19 year-old girl in a $250 a month apartment. Imagine coming in from the snow to wipe your feet on an oriental rug — it's unheard of."

Stockbridge placed Ostravage, who at first, he said, gave a false name of Angela Capone, under arrest and had the officers stay with her at the apartment while he obtained a search warrant. After several hours, a search warrant was secured from John Dalton, Assistant Clerk of Quincy Court; Ostravage had been brought to the department accompanied by a matron and by 2 a.m. police proceeded to work through the night, removing four truck and van-loads full of stolen goods from the apartment to the police station.

Kevin Gidea, 23, who apparently had seen police arriving at the apartment that evening, made a temporary getaway out the back door. Boston Police arrested him early Monday evening, and he was returned to the Cohasset department by Laugelle that same night.

Lt. Stockbridge reported that Gildea and Ostravage had been posing as man and wife when they moved there in December. "The landlord never noticed the stuff coming in," he said, "he thought they were just moving."

The recovered goods are believed stolen from numerous house breaks in Hingham, Norwell, Scituate, Quincy, Randolph and Canton — most of which occurred over the past few months, although some breaks may date back as far as September. Nothing, apparently, was taken from Cohasset.

As of Monday night over $125,000 worth of merchandise had been claimed by residents of the aforementioned towns.

MASSIVE HAUL — An estimated $250,000 of stolen property of almost every kind and description was recoved in Cohasset last Saturday. Opponents Hit Town Hall Plan

The Committee to Study Space Needs for Town Offices held an open meeting Tuesday night to discuss the $326,000 plan, designed by architects Brett Donham and Tadg Sweeney of Boston, to renovate the Town Hall.

Chairman Daniel Cotton addressed the 40 residents and town officials in attendance before Donham proposed the plan which was chosen over seven other renovation variations and which was approved by the Committee a few weeks ago. Cotton said that the Committee had worked arduously to study a wide range of factors affecting office space needs including population by the year 2000, the attitudes and opinions of Town Hall employees and residents, and the importance of locale.

Cotton said the Committee, deliberately large in consisting of nine members, concluded that the Town Hall should remain situated in the Common area and that the renovation of the existing building, with minimal exterior change would still be able to satisfactorily suit the needs of the 10,000 people expected to be living in Cohasset in 30 years.

Donham explained the plan which calls for the shortening of the auditorium so the first floor would contain offices for the Town Clerk, Selectmen, Selectmen's Clerk, as well as handicapped toilets and a vault for town records. An elevator and exterior ramp would make the building totally accessible to the handicapped. In the rear of the first floor, behind and beneath the stage area, where the old dressing rooms are now, the Recreation Department would have offices, although Donham explained that the plan for this department requires further work.

The exterior of the building would remain almost exactly the same, with the exception of the access ramp on the parking lot side of the building. Upstairs, Donham said, more efficient location of the offices would result in the adjoining of one office with another. Large connected offices would be shared by the Treasurer and Tax Collector, the Accountant and computer room, and the Building Inspector and the Board of Health.

The cost estimate includes the installation of an elevator, insulation to be added to the roof and walls, revisions for the heating system, a summer cooling program which in-

Jazz Ensemble Wins Festival 'Gig'

The Cohasset High School Jazz -Rock Ensemble, under the direction of Anthony Hyde, was awarded first place in the second annual Norwood Jazz Classic Festival held Jan. 26.

The "skippers" were among nine bands from eastern Massachusetts and Maine to compete for the honors. Among other local schools involved were: Marshfield (second place), Sharon (4th) and Abington (8th). Beverly High School placed third and the pre-festival favorite, Westbrook, Maine, slipped to 5th.

This marked the second "First Place" trophy won by Cohasset in the recent past. Last Spring they captured the Class III title at the Berklee College of Music Awards Festival in Boston.

Singled out as the outstanding trombone player of the evening was Cohasset senior Peter Cook, featured on several of the compositions. He was awarded a citation for his efforts.

Overall musical effectiveness, variety, soloists balance and blend were the key areas which put Cohasset over the top. An outstanding trombone section and a unique and effective flute section were also singled out for praise by the three judges. Those having a featured solo during the program were: Andy Trask, Sally Sisson, volves a ventilating system and two timed heat sensitive thermostats, painting and repair of both the interior and exterior, new lighting and a sprinkler system.

Buildling Inspector James Litchfield challenged Donham on the building code regulations concerning the fireproofing of the Recreation offices converted from dressing rooms. Litchfield claimed that proper safeguarding of this area was not adequately afforded under the Committee's plan. Donham said that the Town Hall had been accepted by the Massachusetts Historic Commission and by the State Building Code Commission as as partially preserved building, and that the stipulations to which Litchfield referred applied only to the construction of a new building. The proposed changes in a partially preserved building are allowed via modifications in the code and in this case, as long as a total fire warning system is working within the building and connected to the fire department, exemptions could be made for the fireproof doors the Town Hall is lacking.

Most of the discussion revolved around the pros and cons of buying the professional building on Route 3A for use as a Town Hall. Arthur Clark, Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, said that he was speaking for most of the Town Hall employees in his dislike of the Committee's proposal.

"You've done almost the same thing as the way it is now, except you've moved the Selectmen downstairs. You've made no provisions to house the departments while construction is going on. Guess we'll just have to live here during it," Clark said.

Clark also disapproved of what he thought would be cramped file rooms and even busier offices downstairs. "I urge you to look at the professional build ing on Route 3A. It is a bargain the town can't afford to let go by at $325,000," he concluded.

Donham said that, according to his figures, the 3A building needs $81,000 worth of renovation including partition changes and installation of insulated glass. A few residents questioned this figure which is to be added to the cost of the building, but Donham stood by his estimate.

Town Accountant William Signorelli urged the Committee to consider another option for a new Town Hall. He said he found it difficult to justify having the same facility for all the money involved; he found the location of the vault inefficient and the continuous need to move records back and forth of great concern.

Alfred Odermatt, while uring the purchase of the professional building, informed Chairman Cotton that he had initiated a petition which will bew submitted as a citizen's article at Town Meeting, advising townspeople to buy the building and seeking an appropriation for it.

Cotton said that it had been the Committee's desire to submit one article concerning a proposal for the Town Hall because they feared the inability of the people to make up their minds. "If we could not make up our minds on a single thing," Cotton said of the Committee, "then the town wouldn't be able to either."

The Committee will sponsor the following article at the annual Town Meeting: To see if the Town will raise and appropriate the sum of $30,000 to be expended by the Committee to Study Space Needs for Town Offices for the preparation of detailed plans, working drawings and specifications in connection with the renovation of the Town Hall and its office space and for the securing of bids for the same or anything else relating there to.

Lt. Charles Stockbridge Named Policeman In Charge

It was brought to the board's attention last week by Sgt. John Rhodes that Stockbridge couldn't be appointed Acting-Chief under Civil Service because there was no opening for a chief's position in the department. Two weeks ago Selectmen had discussed appointing Stockbridge Acting-Chief, at Feola's recommendation, to save the town overtime money.

Rhodes said that Lt. Stockbridge will be under close scrutiny by the police association in his use of overtime, should he remain in his current 4 p.m to midnight shift as Lieutenant-in-charge. In the event of an occurrence that requires Stockbridge's attention as head of the department at times other than his regular shift, his overtime work could result in a grievance from the association for denying this time to the other men.

Lt. Stockbridge said that he had never heard of the Civil Service law prohibiting the appointment of an Acting-Chief in another chief's absence. He did claim that he should receive the equivalent of Feola's salary because the police contract requires appropriate remuneration when more responsible work is assumed.

Attorney Charles Humphries, assistant to Town Counsel, temporarily present at the meeting, said that Stockbridge cannot assume the duties of the Chief because they are distinct and peculiar to that post only. Stockbridge could, he said, take charge as the highest ranking officer in the department and arrange his overtime assignments as equitably as possible.

Clark checked later with an Attorney Rasmussen for Civil Service to determine which of the opinions expressed at the meeting was correct. Rasmussen said that although that Civil Service law did exist, the police contract governed.

Although Lt. Stockbridge has been Lieutenant-in-charge this past week, his title will be changed this week to that of Acting-Chief. Stockbridge will receive the same rate of pay as Chief Feola, will assume his duties and hours of work.

Selectman Discuss Feola

Selectmen discussed again last week the possibility of recommending that Police Chief Randolph Feola retire.

Feola left for his vacation in Florida on Feb. 2 — a vacation of 20 working days. However, Selectmen were concerned that they could not be sure of the time of the Chief's return because of the state of his health and the amount of leave he would take in conjunction with his vacation, variables that would lengthen his stay away from the department.

Selectman Henry Ainslie said that it wasn't fair to the town or the people not to know when the Chief was coming back. Ainslie felt that eight months to a year would not be an unreasonable length of time for notice of leaving his post.

It was generally agreed that Feola should be compensated for what was due him, but that the board shouldn't be left in suspense for his decision until his presumed retirement age of 65. The Chief will be 64 in July.

Selectmen Ainslie and Clark suggested that Feola be paid a settlement or severence pay and be asked to step down.

Feola had intimated that he would take the 120 sick days he has coming, if his doctor in Florida deemed him unable to work. Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray said that should Feola return to work, she would like the board to order a medical examination for the Chief by a doctor of their choosing.

Town Accountant William Signorelli later explained that the Chief's salary and benefits are governed by the town's personnel committee bylaw, and that unlike the police contract stipulation does not allow the dollar for dollar payment of unused sick days upon retiring. That is, if Feola were to take his sick days in a lump sum — for a medically proven ailment — or if a deal were to be made with him by the Selectmen, that money would have to be appropriated by a vote of the Town Meeting.

Town Counsel will review the matter and suggest a course of action.

Notes& Comment

Three things this week.

...First. The Cohasset Police Department has received more than its share of unfavorable publicity in recent weeks. This past week, however, the "ink" was glowing and justifiably so.

Under the direction of Lt. Charles Stockbridge, the department recovered art, televisions, money — you name it — that was collectively valued at more than $250,000, making it one of the largest recovery of stolen goods in South Shore history.

The facts speak for themslves in this case. Good police work coupled with diligence and some luck solved a lot of crimes and let the light shine brightly on the Cohasset Police Department at the same time. If nothing else, it proves that infighting, squabbles and other turmoil that have nothing to do with solving crime don't have to interfere with the business of crime fighting.

A bouquet to Lt. Stockbridge and his men.

...Second. After ruminating over it for three to five seconds, we have decided not to adopt the editorial policies of Alfred Odermatt.

At a meeting of the School Committee this week, Mr. Odermatt gave the press a lesson on how to cover the news. Or how not to cover it. He called the Open Meeting Law — the one state statute that keeps local boards honest and accountable to the public — a deterrant to open discussion. It is as much a deterrant as the secret ballot box is a deterrant to Democracy.

In short, we couldn't disagree with you more Mr. Odermatt. The Open Meeting Law, despite the bruises it may inflict on timid officials, is meant to give the public — the people who pay the bills — a chance to know what decisions are made, how they are made and why they are made. It is also a tool of the press to better inform the public.

The days of public servants thinking they are know-it-all public savants are over. So, in this country, are oligarchies. Your suggestion that the press spend less time on how votes are made — soft news, you called it — would undo what small steps have been taken to open up the process of government. The better informed people are through vehicles like the Open Meeting Law, the better decisions they will make. And it is the people, the taxpayers, who will make the decisions.

...Finally, a comment on good taste.

Chester Magee is in the midst of a zoning battle with Zoning Officer James Litchfield over Magee's right to operate a business at his residentially-zoned home.

To emphasize his right to do what he pleases with his property, Mr. Magee has chosen to use different vehicles of protest. But last Thursday he went too far. Last Thursday he chose to fly a swastika — a hate symbol if there ever was one — over his property, thereby thumbing his nose at Mr. Litchfield and all Cohasset as well.

Legally, he may have been on solid ground. Morally he had nothing to stand on, and we believe his actions to be in the worst of taste.

School Committee Airs Criticism In Executive Session

The School Committee, in a 90-minute closed door meeting, "aired the whole thing out" this week while considering discipline for and hearing charges against board members, according to Chairman Doris Golden.

Golden said that accusations against individual School Committee members had come from the school staff. There has been reported discord among committee members themselves as well as with the school administration and staff for some time.

Budget discussions have exacerbated the disagreements between the committee and Supt. John Maloney. A recent incident which involved committee members Patricia Walsh and John Langmaid and their apparent disregard of a vote not to photostat individual copies of budget back-up sheets, prompted Maloney to strongly reprimand the Committee for creating staff unrest and what he feared might result in the eventual undermining of the entire school system.

Alfred Odermatt of Todd Lane addressed the committee as soon as they returned to open session. He asked that his remarks be made off the record but was informed by the committee that the meeting was open and public. Therefore they couldn't comply with his request. He then agreed to speak but asked the press to especially mark his words.

Odermatt said that the press "should take a hard look" at the way they cover School Committee meetings. The open meeting law, he said, has been a deterrent to open discussion, and that during budget time this inhibition results, not unnaturally, in frustration.

The news media, he continued, should recognize the position the open meeting law puts the School Committee, and should concentrate not so much on the discussion leading to a vote.

Rather, he said, the press should report on the votes and the results of the board's actions or 'the harder news," not "the lesser news."

Mahoney To Resign School Committee Seat

The School Committee unanimously accepted with regret the resignation of Vice-Chairman Josephine Mahoney.

Mahoney's resignation will be effective April 14, one year shy of the completion of her second term on the committee. She plans to step down because of personal reasons.

Chairman Doris Golden said that the evening didn't contain enough time to enumerate Mrs. Mahoney's qualities. "It has been great to have had her on the board these past five years," Golden said. "She has never complained. It will be a great loss. We're going to miss you."

Supt. John Maloney praised Mahoney's voting record, which he said, has always been in support of programs for the youths of Cohasset.

"This is a sad day for all of us," he said.

Librarians Win Salary Increase

The School Committee voted Monday night to increase the salaries of two library personnel, librarian Ronna Bingham and audio-visual aide Robert Gohl.

Mrs. Bingham had been planning to resign from her position in Cohasset which she has held since September to accept a comparable job in Scituate for more pay and a shorter work year. She expressed a desire to remain at her present post but requested that her salary be increased to $14,000 and her vacation lengthened by two weeks to make her stay worthwhile.

Supt. John Maloney spoke in support of Mrs. Bingham's recommendations and said that he had, in fact, asked her what he could do so that she would be willing to stay. Maloney said that the library program had experienced a renaissance since Mrs. Bingham's arrival in the fall. Her master's degree and six years of background in library services, he said, should earn her a higher salary than her present $12,000 which does not come under the teacher's contract.

Audio-visual aide Gohl will also receive a salary increase to $8,500 for his half-time position for which he is now paid $7,000. During the library budget discussion, it was noted that Gohl spends many unrequired night time hours recording programs as part of the video services offered to school children.

The Committee also discussed the music, social studies and English departments budgets. Most of the budget increases were attributed to teachers' salaried increments for the next school year and to textbook and media costs.

Ron Emmons, Chairman of the English Department, defended the use of video tapes in the teaching of literature to aid students reluctant to read. Emmons said that with video equipment he could ensure that all students would get a chance to see a program that might otherwise only be viewed on television or in the theatre. He maintained that plays, especially those of Shakespeare were meant to be seen and heard, not just read.

Gohl further emphasized the importance of a well stocked video library. He said he is trying to accumulate a video library and wants to develop a collaborative in the near future with Hingham and Scituate.

Meet Mr. Magee

The Adventures Of A Cow Carpoolist

By Peggy Beals

A man who likes to keep current asks me, "So what are you health nuts up to now?" I tell him about the milk run, describing some of my adventures as part of a cow carpool at least 10 local families are sharing. He can't believe it.

We have two carpools of five families each. We take turns going to a dairy in a nearby town to buy a week's supply of milk for the families. When my turns comes, I eye the weather anxiously all week, but Friday is nice about dawning clear. I load in several crates of old fashioned glass quart milk bottles, 12 to a crate, carefully stored upside down so water won't freeze in them and break them. They are precious collectibles now and the dairy guards them jealously, buying more when they can from defunct dairies. They bear a variety of names: Socquet Farm, "Better Milk For Particular People;" White Farms, Ipswich, Mass. "Golden Guernsey;" Sunshine Creamery, Fall River; Capital Dairy, South Dartmouth; Leinerts of Darien, Conn. "Please send me home . . .I have more trips to make."

GETTING ORDERS

I go to the Cowgill's house on Forest Street to pick up more crates left there by others in our pool.

At the dairy I back up to the milk room door. The owners hurry out with cheerful greetings and help carry bottles in. They're a delightful couple, grandparents several times over, but looking years younger than they are. They credit hard work and the exercise of running a dairy.

The dairy is always busy. One person is washing bottles in boiling water while another caps filled bottles, and visitors stand around enjoying the bustle. As they wrestle the crates of filled bottles, I can admire the black-and-white Holsteins tugging at grass in the meadow and hear the hens gossiping nearby.

SOUR MILK?

My friend is amazed at this return to 'Ye Olden Times.' "Doesn't the milk get sour during the week?" I asked that before we started, having gone to the store too many times and brought back near-sour milk, good only for secondary uses. This milk doesn't. Being less than a day old to start with, it tastes just as fresh six days later, although the cream is a bit thicker. Sandy Cowgill says it's like enjoying a carrot one minute from the earth in your garden, rather than two weeks old from California Getting a week's supply at once is so Convenient, Janet Spriggs says, keeping her from running out several times a week for fresh milk.

"You said cream. You mean it isn't homogenized?" This is an important reason many of us get the milk. Nancy Butler cites several studies linking homogenized milk to America's extremely high rate of arteriosclerosis Homogenization breaks the fat globules into such small units they can pass through the intestine walls into the bloodstream and collect in the arteries, especially aroung the heart. The process is also suspected of removing most Vitamin A from the milk. Janet points out it's better to get natural vitamins in the first palce than have them removed and allegedly put back again by the processors.

And we like the cream for beverages and cereal.

Sally Cochrane buys extra to churn butter. Judy Mabey of Pembroke, formerly of Marshfield, makes butter and ikes to watch the color changes. In winter the butter is pale, but when the cows return to grass and dandelions it turns a rich yellow. And when they get into an occasional patch of wild onions . . . !

RAW MILK

"You mentioned raw milk. Won't that give you tuberculosis?" People are amazed to learn that raw milk can be sold when a dairy follows a regular testing program. Marilyn Dunn quotes Adelle Davis on the value of raw milk, untampered with by processing. Sally is interested in all raw foods, what nutritionists call the "back to nature" diet of foods that are fresh, unprocessed, uncanned or frozen, uncolored or flavoured and are free of chemical additives.

Dr. Ben Feingold's version of this diet has been known to turn hyperactive children into sympton free, pleasant to have around kids within one week. Sally also makes yogurt from the milk, which is a natural pasteurizing process. Carol Robinson serves raw milk to friends who do not suspect that's what they are drinking, but are sure that raw milk must taste "funny."

The flavor is another main reason for buying milk. All the families prefer the taste. Judy says her son wouldn't drink milk until she heard of this place, and with her doctor's reluctant consent tried it on him. Mary O'Sullivan of Pembroke says her husband didn't drink milk before they started this. "It doesn't taste of the plastic carton," she says. Even the skim milk is pleasing to those who want skim but don't like the store kind. The flavor is so inviting, at our house we sometimes have to label the bottles to make the generous supply last. Visitors beg for a glass of that good milk. Linda O'Callahan's children, after vacationing elsewhere, were glad to get back to "real" milk. The quart bottles are easier to handle, too, especially for little hands. Janet Spriggs thinks the milk stays colder in them.

"But all that driving to get milk, when there's plenty in town, and some milkmen still deliver. I know, it must be cheaper!" It isn't, but we think the taste, nutrition, and convenience of having our milk delivered for four weeks is worth the few extra pennies. The route is through residential areas with little traffic, and some interesting stores, including one of those no-advertising supermarkets where things are 10 cents cheaper and they take your check cheerfully at the cash register. Youngsters love the trip, the dairy activity and the lively couple who run it. A visitor seeing the O'Callahans' bottles said they must have a milkman. "No," Laura said proudly, "a milk lady!"

It's all too unconventional for my friend, but then he's still saying, "Show me a vitamin and I'll believe in 'em." The rest of us think we're on to a very good thing. Oh, how I would love to share the name of the dairy with you, but its business is so good the couple have asked me not to reveal their name, because they have all the business they can handle. We'll gladly continue our milk run until some of our equally nutty friends start a local dairy. It looks like a sure mom-and-pop opportunity if you're not afraid of hard work.

Francis, Collins Work At Art Center

Drawings by E. Marie Francis and watercolors by Jane Flavell Collins will highlight the exhibit at the South Shore Art Center Gallery from Feb. 2 to Feb. 28.

Gallery hours for the show are Monday through Friday from 12 to 4 and Saturdays from 10 to 1 p.m.

The intricate pen and ink drawings of E. Marie Francis have received awards for excellence in the National Exhibit of Prints and Drawings, at the Rhode Island Arts Festival, the Marion Art Center Summer show and the Brockton summerfest.

In 1976 Bridgewater Public Library held a solo retrospective of her work and she exhibited her drawings at the Copley Society in a two-woman show in 1978. Group juried shows include the All New England on Cape Cod as well as Festivals throughout the South Shore. Her work was included in the Drawing Anthology, 1974 by the Regina Publishing House of Long Beach, New York and has been chosen for the Jordan Marsh All New England Competition.

Ms. Francis began her art education as a teenager when she received a Scholastic Art Award in Boston and has recently completed her degree at Bridgewater. She currently teaches art at the Governor John Carver School. She is a member of the Copley Society, The Cambridge Art Association and the South Shore Art Center and has exhibited with these organizations.

Jane Flavell Collins has recently returned to watercolor as a painting medium although she had studied it formally during her training at Massachusetts College of Art and her graduate study in Florence, Italy that resulted in a Master of Arts degree. Throughout her college years Ms. Collins did portraits on Cape Cod which supplied good training for the swift likenesses required for the courtroom drawing in which she is now engaged. When a major trial is in session, you may view her pastel drawings on Channel 5 (WGBH-TV) in Boston.

The watercolor landscapes currently on display have been inspired by her surroundings at her homes in Duxbury and at Pemaquid, Maine. She has been affiliated with the Arts and Science Center in Nashua, N.H. and has exhibited widely throughout Maine and Massachusetts including the Jordan Marsh show in Boston and a 1978 exhibit at Schnabel Gallery.

For five years, Ms. Collins was an art teacher both in Hingham and in Maine and is currently a member of the Duxbury art Association and the South Shore Art Center Gallery.

Farren, Skipper Five Reap Harvest

By Steve MacQuarrie

Paul Farren must be loving every minute of it.

After suffering through things like a 5 - 11 basketball season last year and a 2 - 7 football season in the fall, the 6'5" senior and the basketball team he co-captains have both blossomed this winter.

Last Tuesday Farren scored at a point per minute rate as the Skippers ran up a 42 - 17 halftime lead en route to an 86 - 54 win over East Bridgewater. For an encore on Thursday, the Cohasset center poured in 25 points (on brilliant 11 or 12 shooting) to lead the Skippers over Norfolk Aggie 73 - 49.

With the exception of Farren, the Skippers played lethargic basketball against the Aggies, trailing by 2 after one quarter and holding a slim six point lead at the half. A more aggressive defense after intermission produced a 25 - 16 third quarter and with it Cohasset's twelfth win of the season (against 4 losses).

Two nights earlier, the Skippers had less trouble with East Bridgewater, despite the absence of John Howley and Mark Goff. Coach John Le Vangie was able to give his reserves plenty of action in both halves, and they reciprocated with a strong performance — 8 points apiece from Jimmy McCarthy and Billy Kurtz, a pair of long bombs from Tom McMahon, and excellent playmaking from Jimmy O'Brien.

LeVangie added special praise for the play of senior Billy O'Brien: "Billy started and played a super game, scoring 10 points and directing the offense. Some games he plays a lot, and some games very little, but he's always come through for us when we've needed him."

Despite trailing league-leading Middleboro by a game with four left to play, LeVangie feels his team still has a shot at the league title. "Of course we'll have to win all our games, and then we'll need somebody else in the league to beat Middleboro. But we're playing very well right now. We're certainly capable of keeping it up."

To keep it up, the Skippers will need continued strong performances from Farren, who's certainly been up to it, averaging nearly 20 points per contest over the past 6 games. In addition to leading his team in scoring, Farren is also the Skippers' top rebounder. Perhaps the best measure of his value is that 3 of Cohasset's 4 losses have come in games in which Paul has fouled out.

Farren leads his Skipper teammates back into action Friday night at home against Holbrook and then to Norwell for an away game next Tuesday.

CHS Icemen Win Wild Shootout Over East, Deadlock Hanover

Trailing 3-1, Cohasset's hockey team stormed back last week to overhaul East Bridgewater, 10-6, in a wild shootout.

East had seized a 3-1 lead in the first period, but the Skippers unleashed a seven-goal explosion in the next period that turned things around as seven different Cohasset players shared the scoring.

East's Scott Harlow who leads the South Shore League collected four goals but the two-line balance of Cohasset offset his efforts.

In the second period, Cohasset got two quick goals with freshman defenseman Dom Campadelli, who had two on the night, scoring first on a power play and Tim Smith connecting from the blue line seconds later for the first of his two goals.

Doug Dillon, Joe Becker and Campedelli got three goals in succession to fashion a 5-3 lead before the Vikes tied the score. But the Skippers were off and running again in the final two minutes of the period when Dillon scored on a solo power play effort and Rick Young got another.

In the final frame, Cohasset kept up the scoring rampage with Evans on a Drago assist, Smith on a Brown feed and Durkin on a Dillon assist adding to the total and the defense holding off East Bridgewater's efforts.

Cohasset upped its record to 4-1 on the season.

Cohasset and Hanover's hockey teams battled to a 6-6 deadlock last week as the Indians fought back five times to tie the game.

Cohasset was led by Joe Durkin and Doug Dillon who each had two goals and an assist.

Cohasset's record in the South Shore league is 4-4-1 and 5-5-1 overall.

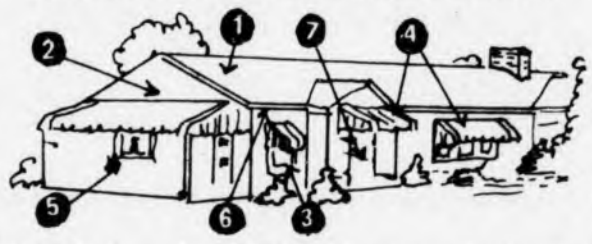
Selectmen Listen To Grievance

Selectmen heard a grievance last week concerning an alleged violation of overtime assignments in the Police Department. The matter was taken under advisement.

Attorney Gerard McAuliffe, representing the police association, claimed that an article of the collective bargaining agreement regarding overtime has veen violated. According toMcAuliffe, a permanent intermittent officer had been filling a full time shift. He said this time should be considered overtime and offered first to regular officers.

Permanent Intermittent Police Officer Frederick Grassie has been working a regular shift for several months but is still receiving hourly pay. Selectmen have voted to appoint Grassie to a full-time permanent position to fill a vacancy in the department. Civil Service has not yet responded to the appointment so Grassie has not been officially installed as a permanent officer.

McAuliffe said that an intermittent officer is not included in the overtime section of the collective bargaining agreement, that an intermittent officer was only an occasional position, and just the fact that Grassie was working full-time was a grievable item. The other officers, he said, want compensation for the overtime which was not made available to them.



Selectman Arthur Clark responded, "If it weren't for the stupid Civil Service that guy would be a permanent. We have a right to work this man."

McAuliffe agreed that they had a right to work Grassie, but only if the regular officers didn't want overtime assignments. He added, "I see nothing wrong with regular personnel working double shifts."

Clark continued, "We have two vacancies in the department which we haven't been able to fill because of Civil service troubles. I can't see what we're doing wrong."

Clark said that he was unable to resolve the grievance and that there was no money in the budget to pay overtime compensation. He said he would consult with town counsel and provide McAuliffe with an answer in two weeks.

Musings...

By John Cutler

☐I like the Roman Catholic bishop who said, "A smile is the shortest distance between two persons." And remember that you are not fully dressed until you wear a smile. A frown? Why, a frown is a smile turned inside out.

☐The founding fathers (where were the founding mothers?) were so wrapped up in the cause of freedom and liberty they forget to treat the Indians as equals.

☐I understand the sign in a post office: "No dogs allowed." But the fine print baffles me; "Except Seeing-Eye Dogs." Neither the seeing-eye dog or its master can read the fine print, no?

☐An aphorism is considered a half truth. Why do most people believe the wrong half?

☐This week's household hint for lazy housewives: Leave your vacuum cleaner around in plain sight. Then if friends drop in, see your dirty house, they will think you are in the middle of cleaning.

☐Massachusetts Senator Henry Wilson said it: "I believe that if we introduced the Lord's Prayer, senators would propose a large number of amendments to it." Edward Everett Hale, when chaplin of the senate, was aksed if he prayed for the senators. "No, I look at the senators and pray for the Country."

☐If a diplomat says yes, he means maybe. If he says maybe he means no. If he says no, he's no diplomat. And surely Cyrus Vance would agree with Mark Twain: "A diplomat is an honest man sent abroad to lie for his country."

☐A Gaelic proverb: "If the best man's sins were written on his forehead it would make him pull his hat over his eyes."

Perry Como Missed The Bus

By Lois Martin

High school bus trips today must be a far cry from what they were 25 years ago. And it's all because of musical trends.

If you remember, bus trips to and from sports encounters were passed merrily with group singing. You'd pick out a good seat, toward rear middle, so as not to miss anything from up front but far enough back so chaperoning adults would miss you. The absolute rear of the bus was left for those whose behavior was lacking in total propriety, unless their plans went awry.

Anyway, we'd pass the trip with lively songs. There were always a few good singers to make up for the rest of us and to handle harmonizing.

Gosh it was wonderful. We had "Now Is The Hour...When we must say goodbye." That was a tear jerker, sung mournfully on the way home after a basketball game was lost. More sprightly renditions were offered on "Side by Side"...'Oh we ain't got a barrel of money; maybe we're ragged and funny; but we're travelin' along, singin' our song, side by side."

PATCHES

And we hadn't grown out of "You are my sunshine," always good for your super sopranos. We believed we were raising the devil when we sang "100 Bottles of Beer on the Shelf," right down to the last fading bottle. And if you had a cooperative bus load, you could sing rounds: "Sweetly sings the donkey at the break of day; if you do not feed him, he will surely say, hee, haw, hee haw, hee haw, hee haw, hee hay."

A few from the back of the bus would start on the more bawdy minstrel lyrics of well-known smutty verses, only to be hushed by the personnel in the front or the ever patient bus driver himself.

Nowadays the kids must be at a loss for good bus songs. How can they hum on the melody when there isn't any? Or do they simply pound out the beats. And they still need words, don't they? Who can understand them to memorize them. Who are the Bings and Perrys that furnish pleasant bus trips for today's sports.

Oh, I can sing along with Ann Murray on "You Needed Me." And Englebert never opens his mouth that I don't join him. Same with Simon and/or Garfunkel, Barbara and Olivia.

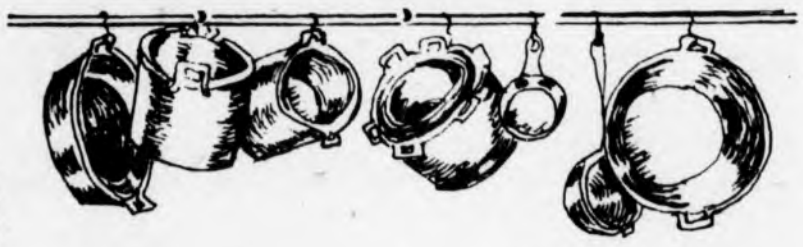
Even the B.G.'s have earned my musical respect. True, I've never been able to catch all the words to "Too Much Heaven," but the melody is easy to take. But I'm concerned about Mrs.Gibb, their mother. How would it feel to raise four bearded sopranos?

I've been told the above listed songsters are not the top recording artists with today's youths. They skip the soft stuff, I hear, and go directly to medium or hard rock.

They speak of a person named Pink Floyd, a title that makes the sex of the singer indiscernible, could even be a Ms. Then there's that Rolling Stone crowd, a group of flower children that wilted. And there's the Punk Rock element that the School Committee shouldn't allow on bus trips. Anyway, I can't help but question the music of any organization that concludes a performance by smashing their instruments. But then I'm old-fashioned. I would tend to save the same old guitar year in and year out. High schoolers of today have every right to get discouraged. If I had to listen to that music I'd be depressed. What do they sing on the way home after a winning ball game?

Take Billy Joel, for example. If I understand correctly, he's categorized as between soft and medium rock. Billy looks like a nice enough boy on his album cover. He's got a pair of boxing gloves hanging around his neck. Some high school students tell me they can relate to him.

I don't know if that's because of his songs or his gloves.



One of his renditions is called "She's Always A Woman." Its strains include "She can kill with a smile; she can wound with her eyes." The kids tell me Billy Joel wasn't referring to his mother.

I came right out and asked this generation of teeny boppers if they understood all the words of the harder type songs. They conceded they don't, but that doesn't stop them from singing them. Apparently where real words fail to come to mind, they add their own, becoming song-writers as well as singers. And of course, pupil/guitar ratio has risen enormously. More kids may have guitars than braces.

But I'm heartened. They guaranteed me they're still singing on bus trips. They have implied I wouldn't like all the songs but at least one song has survived the generations. They still sing "100 Bottles of Beer on the Shelf," with their own adaptations, of course.

In Grandma's day, "dainty missives and love tokens" were fashionable as Valentine gifts. Feb. 14 is again coming our way, but our approach is much simpler, though no less sentimental. Not for us the horseshoe-shaped flower pieces trimmed with satin ribbons in "harmonious colors." Bonbons in fancy baskets, dainty booklets ornamented with ribbon, lace and flowers are not quite what we expect from our Valentine. Fans, according to the author, were the most popular Valentine gift the previous year. Made of gauze, silk, satin or feathers, they were decorated with hand painting, embroidery, lace and spangles, with handles of ivory, sandalwood, silver or ebony. Less elaborate, but one way of showing our family we care, would be to serve this very special casserole called Hope's Crabmeat and Rice. "Hope" is Hope Warren of Cohasset,and the recipe is among those found in a cookbook she was nice enough to lend me called Seconds Please consisting of recipes from old family collections, favorites from all over the world.

2 T Margarine
¼ c. celery, chopped
2 T green pepper, chopped
2 T onion, chopped
1 6 oz. can crabmeat
1 4½ oz. can mushroom pieces
¼ c. chopped ripe olives
4 oz. Swiss cheese, grated
Salt and pepper
1 c. med. white sauce
1 c. cooked rice
dry bread crumbs
¼ c. slivered almonds

Saute celery, pepper and onion in 2 T margarine til limp, about 5 to 6 min. Combine crabmeat, mushrooms, olives and cheese. Combine white sauce with sauteed vegetables, crab mixture and rice. Pour into buttered 1 qt. casserole. Sprinkle bread crumbs and almonds on top and bake 350 degrees for 30 min. Serves 3 or 4.

Who wouldn't feel just a little bit special knowing someone took the time to make these Easy Rolls for Valentine's Day dinner. When Marge Clark and her husband were in Georgia last month at a business convention, Georgia cookbooks were being given away. This recipe is from an Atlanta housewife, and the beautiful part is that this mixture can be stored in the refrigertor for several weeks and used as needed.

3 pkg. dry yeast dissolved in ½ c. warm water
5 c. self-rising flour, unsifted
¼ c. sugar
1 tsp. soda
1 c. shortening
2 c. lukewarm buttermilk

Dissolve yeast and set aside. Mix flour, sugar and soda. Put in shortening. Add buttermilk and yeast. Mix well. Place desired amount of dough on cloth and roll out. Cut with biscuit cutter, or make shaped rolls. Let warm to room temperature before baking in 350 degree oven for 15 to 20 min.

'Think pink' when you're planning your Valentine dinner and serve a pretty dish such as this Shrimp Bisque. This is another recipe from "A Georgia Cookbook."

1 10½ oz. can undiluted mushroom soup
1 10½ oz. can undiluted bisque of tomato soup
1 soup can milk
1 c. chopped raw shrimp
1 T sherry
½ tsp. Worcestershire

In medium saucepan over low heat, heat all ingredients, stirring often, until hot and shrimp turns pink.

Duck Art Fund Raiser

Plenty of ducks will be flying at the Minot's Ledge Chapter DU fund-raising party, March 31. The waterfowl won't actually be in flight inside but will be viewed in the many pieces of unusual waterfowl art on display and being auctioned. Among the highlights of the event will be the auction of the Ducks Unlimited 1978-79 Artist of the Year art print.

This highly colorful print, titled, 'Fall Kaleidoscope - Wood Ducks,' is one of a very limited series of prints from an original oil painted for the DU program by Artist of the Year, Owne J. Gromme. The colorful original painting, featuring the Wood Duck, was created especially for Ducks Unlimited by one of the nation's renowned nature artists. The Artist of the Year print is one of a high quality limited edition of 1,250, each print personally inspected, numbered and signed by the artist, and impressed with the official Ducks Unlimited seal. The print is impressive in size — 26 inches by 17.3 inches, painstakingly lithographed on heavy, quality paper, 32 inches by 24 inches.

These special, limited edition art prints — personally signed by the DU Artist of the Year, Owen Gromme, will not be available in any other place or manner — they must be purchased at auction at DU's fund-raising events. So, here's your chance to bid on and perhaps own one of these rare and unusual nature prints. Plan now to attend S. Shore Country Club's at Hingham, on March 31.

Osgood Students Greet Ground Hog Day With Joy

By Joanne Young

The pupils and teachers of the Joseph Osgood School traditionally celebrate Groundhog Day with a joyous round of songs, games and a spelling bee.

On Feb. 2, the day began with the paean "Glory, glory to the Groundhog," and the children, dressed in shades of brown and black, displayed art work, told stories and made their predictions based on the sunny day. The sun guaranteed 40 more days of winter, a not unfamiliar New England forecast.

In the cafeteria, "groundhog" food was served. A stuffed groundhog held a place of honor in each classroom. Pictures and accompanying stories were displayed in the halls by Cyndy MacIvor, Cheryl Smith, Jennifer Aaron, Stephen ford, Jennifer McAuliffe and Dennis Jones.

After qualifying spelling rounds in grades 1 to 3, the winners received the grand prize of a Groundhog T-shirt. Jack Creamer, Principal of Joseph Osgood School, called the spelling bee in the open space classrsoom. Winner in the first grade was Chris Heintz, in the second Jay Staunton and in third, Holly Pompeo.

At recess, "groundhog" Libby Wood cavorted about the playground dancing with the children as they sang "Today the Prophet Comes" to the tune of "Glory, Glory Hallelujah". Ann Pompeo designed and sewed the furry groundhog costume which Libby wore.

You cannot convince the Joseph Osgood children that the weather prediction of the groundhog is suspect. Despite the wet blanket assertion that the groundhog is right only 28 per cent of the time. The ebullient students maintain that the animal is more accurate than the U.S. Weather Bureau. They take their holiday spirit seriously and will continue to support their predictions with this eagerly awaited annual celebration.

Nursery Parents Host Pasta Supper

The Nursery School Parents Committee of the Center, under direction of Judy Powell, hosted a spaghetti supper recently. The 100 guests included pre-schoolers, siblings and parents. To the gustatory delight of all, Ed Jacome, father of Tiffany and Christine Jacome, and husband of committee member Eileen Jacome, prepared the gallons of sauce and pounds of spaghetti necessary to feed so large a group. "It really was fun" says Ed. "There was plenty of pasta for everyone." He totaled the amounts to include 16 lbs. of spaghetti, 15 lbs. of meta and six gallons of homemade sauce. The rest of the Committee members provided salads, bread, wine, dessert and coffee.

Raffles for gift certificates to the Wine and Cheese Shop and for a Toyland shopping spree were won by Abigail Adams and Peter Collins Jr., respectively.

Loot Recovered

The larger claims, Patrolman Feola explained, can be made if the items are on a list of things stolen at the time of the theft, and if a detective or policeman from the town accompanies the person wishing to claim the property.
from the town accompanies the person wishing to claim property.

Less expensive items require an accurate description.

There wasn't a parking space to be found in the Police Department parking lot early this week as dozens of people from all over the state poured in to look over the loot. Oriental rugs, cameras, stereos, televisions, clocks, hummel figurines, fur coats, clothing and jewelry of all descriptions were only some of the goods left Monday night.

Some of the more precious items, that were for the most part already claimed, included a priceless oriental rug, other oriental rugs with an estimated worth ranging in the thousands, a Wedgewood soup tureen valued at over $5,000., Chinese bases and a Chinese hutch worth $9,000., a Millais oil painting valued at $5,000. and a miniature cannon used to start yacht races. The list could go on.

"There is a note of humor to all of this," Stockbridge said. A few art reference books had also been recovered, which described all types of works of art. "They were obviously studying their trade," the Lieutenant laughed.

Drugs valued at more than $1,00 were also recovered. There was believed to be "a personal supply" of heroin and syringes, and larger quantities of marijuana, LSD, amphetamines, hashish and various unidentified pills. The substances are to be analyzed by the Massachusetts Food and Drug Administration in Jamaica Plain.

Stockbridge shook his head, still incredulous. "Things seem to happen when the Chief leaves town." A mysterious part of all this is that she (Ostravage) is the same girl that was left at the South Shore emergency room with a gunshot wound in her leg two months ago. Stockbridge learned that Ostravage had reportedly claimed that the wound, from a small caliber weapon, had been self-inflicted.

Stockbridge said he associated that incident with Ostravage only after her arrest. Previously he had never heard of her, removing the goods from the apartment her real name was discovered, and the connection became clear. "I confronted her in the cell with her true identity and she immediately feigned amnesia," Stockbridge said.

Saturday morning Ostravage pleaded not guilty in Quincy District Court to charges of receiving stolen property and possession of controlled substances. She was released on $5,000 bail sometime over the weekend. Several other warrants for her and Gildea's arrests are forthcoming from the towns involved in the thefts, probably with charges of breaking and entering, said Stockbridge.

Gildea was arraigned on charges of receiving stolen property at Quincy District Court Tuesday morning.

Monday night, she was arrested in Boston on another charge — receiving stolen property — along with Gildea.

Part of the loot (above) included a small cannon that was used to start yacht club sailing races.

Two Boston Men Charged In Cohasset A&P Robbery

Two Boston residents pleaded not guilty in Hingham District Court Saturday to charges resulting from the Friday night holdup of the A & P in Cushing Plaza, Cohasset.

Edward Nigro Jr., 31, of East Boston, was charged with using a motor vehicle without authority, driving without after his license had been revoked and unlawfully carrying a dangerous weapon, a pellt gun.

His companion, Susan Foster, 21, of South Boston, was also charged with using a motor vehicle without authority and unlawfully carrying a dangerous weapon.

Nigro also faces charges stemming from the armed holdup of the Star Market in Norwell Jan. 29.

The suspects were apprehended by Hingham Police shortly after the A & P holdup. The $400 taken in the crime was discovered in Nigro's pants pockets.

After their arrest, police learned the suspects' car had been reported stolen from an auto leasing firm in Milton.

Judge Alvin Tamkin set bail for Nigro at $50,000 and $25,000 for Ms. Foster. Both were committed to the Plymouth House of Correction in lieu of bail. Their cases were heard Monday, and continued for a later trial in Quincy District Court.

Murray Out Of Selectman Rac

Cohasset's Town Election Campaign race turned into a classic game of musical chairs this week.

Without a program, it was tricky to tell who could be sitting where (eventually) or, if you prefer, who might wind up on first, second or even third.

It began with the announcement of State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray and also a member of the local Board of Selectmen that she would not seek a fourth term as Selectman. Rep. Murray is completing her ninth year and third term in the latter capacity.

No sooner was the typewriter ink dry on that announcement than first one and then a second candidate indicated intention to succeed Rep. Murray.

On Monday this week, Rocco Laugelle took out nomination papers for the Selectmen's chair.

Before the day was out, Doris Golden also arrived at Town Hall to obtain papers for the same office (Selectman).

However, Laugelle is a member of the Water Commission whose term on that Board is expiring this year, so the post of Water Commissioner thus would be up for grabs.

And Mrs. Golden is Chairman of the School Committee, and her term also is expiring this season so yet another town position was thrown as she indicated that she would not seek re-election to her current office.

Mrs. Golden, who is completing her second term on the School Committee, said she would not seek re-election to that post in favor or "giving the Selectman's race, "a try." "Are you going from the frying pan into the fire?" she was asked. "It may be just the opposite," she replied.

Laugelle, Golden Promptly Toss Hats Into The Ring

Laugelle was not immediately available for comment or to answer whether he might be thinking in terms of seeking two offices.

Candidates have until March 9 to take out nomination papers which must be returned to the Town Clerk by 5 p.m. on March 19.

In making her announcement of passing up the Selectman's race, Rep. Murray explained, "I have enjoyed serving the citizens of Cohasset as one of their Selectmen. It has been a marvelous experience for me, and I am thankful that I have been able to assist my fellow townspeople."

Rep. Murray went on to say that with her new Representative District under redistricting with the add tion from 23,000 to 37,000 in population, she will find a greater demand on her time.

"My stepping down at this time will provide others with the same privilege I have enjoyed to serve the people of Cohasset," Rep. Murray stated.

Laugelle and Mrs. Golden wasted no time in doing just that.

"The local Affairs Committee and Committee on Counties are very busy committees and I want to do a good job," Rep. Murray continued in listing some of her committee duties on Beacon Hill.

"I'm also serving on three special committees - the Committee to Re-organized Higher Public Education, the Committee to help Children in need of services (CHINS-Child Abuse) and the Committee to study the transportation of all hazardous materials.

Shuttle Keeps Senior Life Rolling

By Karin Bartow

Cohasset's white 'Senior Shuttle' van is a common sight to us as it travels back and forth across town delivering and returning senior citizens from their daily errands and excursions.

Unseen to most of us is the web of volunteers who keep the bus rolling.

The 30 individuals who man the wheel — the agency that supports them, and a commitment by the Town to provide the funds, through the Council on Aging, for leasing, insuring and fueling the bus — make it all happen.

Promoted by the Social Service League of Cohasset, and recommended by the Council on Aging, the Shuttle was launched in April of 1974, and remains a unique entity, quite unlike anything else in other towns. The drivers are volunteers. The schedule, with the exception of five special shopping trips a month, is shaped on a day-by-day basis, and passengers receive door-to-door service.

The Shuttle is free and is for citizens age 60 and over. It operates Monday through Friday. There is no service on Saturday, unless something special is going on. There is a separate Sunday church shuttle, currently run by Lloyd Prescott.

The Shuttle program, administered by the Social Service Leauge, is the responsibility of it's current chairman, Mrs. Jean Manganaro. She has been chairman for one and one-half years and driving for a total of four. She recruits new drivers, juggles the intricate monthly schedule, drives two regular turns, and also substitutes another three or more times a month.

Her philosophy reflects her sensitivity to the needs of the elderly: their desire for independence, need for companionship and fight against oneliness. She feels the Shuttle should be used for people's daily needs, be they errands, or the desire to "get out". It's just as important for someone to ride the Shuttle to see a friend, as it is to go shopping or to the doctor," she comments.

Although riders are reluctant to use the service for visiting, or "getting

Preliminary School Budget Up 2.12%

A new but still tentative school budget was set at $3.53 million Monday night when the School Committee completed its preliminary discussions. The budget, which reflects an increase of 2.12 per cent, now awaits action from the Advisory Board and with the townspeople at a public hearing. Dates have not yet been set for these meetings.

It was suggested at this week's meeting by Taffy Nothnagel of Atlantic Avenue that the instructional aide for the second and third grade open space classroom at the Osgood School be retained. The full-time aide position has been cut from the school's personnel budget during the early days of budget review.

Osgood School principal Jack Craemer defended Mrs. Nothnagel's recommendation. "The instructional aide provides an added dimension to the open a person who can take off with a group of children," he said.

When asked by Chairman Doris Golden why the aide wasn't included as a part of his budget, Cramer explained that he had been instructed to present a zero increase and was therefore forced to cut a position beneath that of full-time salaried personnel. Otherwise, he said he would defend the position with his "dying breath."

Supt. John Maloney was in sympathy with Craemer's reasoning. "We had to make decisions in areas where we really didn't have our hearts," he said. "We sacrificed the aide to keep a teacher."

Committee member Patricia Walsh's motion appropriating $6,000 for the open-space classroom aide carried unanimously.

During reconsideration of the Deer Hill budget a committee member suggested increasing the school librarian's salary to $12,000, in accordance with the raise given to the high school librarian last week. Committee member John Langmaid said he disapproved of piecemeal consideration of individual personnel raises. Insted, he moved that the superintendent draw up a list, to be presented to the board at the next meeting in executive session, of a salary scale for all non-union personnel and recommendations for raises in the coming school year. The motion carried unanimously.

Three alternatives that had been supplied in the proposed zero increase budget were also approved by the committee. A locker replacement plan which would

New Assignment For Professor Zotos

Professor Zotos & Scientific 'Jungle Gym'

Northeastern University Professor John Zotos of Cohasset has been placed on 'special assignment' to the Dean of the College of Engineering for industrial liason purposes during the 1978-79 academic year. He will continue to teach and conduct research and consulting duties at a reduced level in order to pursue his new tasks.

Prof. Zotos began to serve in this new capacity in the Spring Quarter of 1978 and has simultaneously completed other professional commitments. In March, he addressed the Manufacturing Jewelers and Silversmiths of America Convention in New York City on "Hypo-Allergenic Finishes for Jewelry."

In June, he was invited to speak at the Ductile Iron Society's 20th Anniversary Conference in Corning, New York, on the "Computer Aided Design of Ductile Cast Iron Alloys Possessing Guaranteed Properties." In July, he addressed the NU 1979 Summer Institute on "What is Engineering?" and his subject was "New Frontiers in Engineering and Technology." In August, he co-authored a chapter for the second edition of the A.R.S. Refractories Manual entitled "Thermochemistry of Refractory Reactions."

In September, he is speaking to the in-coming freshmen on "New Technology Processes and Techniques Discovered and Developed at N.U. during the Past Two Decades." In October, he is scheduled to address the Fall Conference of the A.S.E.E., New England Section, at the University of New Haven and Yale University (Co-Hosts) on the subject of "Marketing Engineering Education in the 1980's."

Several honors bestowed upon Prof. Zotos this year are his designation as a "Witness for the Lord" by the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of North and South America at their Church Conference in Detroit, Michigan, and his nomination by the N.U. Alumni Association for the Outstanding Alumni Award in Science and Technology.

Prof. Zotos was also interviewed by WEEI's Howard Nelson for an entire week on that station's "Education Today" program and the subject focused upon "Educational Opportunities in Engineering and Technology." More of these radio talk encounters are planned for the months ahead.

Prof. Zotos is formerly from Brockton, Mass., and currently lives in Cohasset with his wife, Libby, and their three children: Michael, Yoanna, and Frederic. Yoanna was also honored during 1978 when she was selected as the 'Outstanding Sophomore' at Cohasset High School and participated in a state wide conference in February. Michael graduated from Cohasset High in June and began his freshman year at N.U. this fall in the College of Engineering.

Anti-Vandalism Campaign Wins High Marks

Further efforts to curb vandalism and theft at the Jr./Sr. High School were praised by the School Committee this week.

Principal Richard Streeter said that the high school was closed Monday at 2:30 p.m. to dramatize that after school activities are extra and apart from regular school hours. The mandatory dismissal, Streeter said, culminated several acts of vandalism.

The painting of class years has reportedly appeared twice within a week on the inner walls of the school Courtyard. These incidents apparently italicized acts of vandalism that have plagued the high school.

Destruction of lockers and theft from them — especially physical education and athletic department lockers — was attributed in part to after school access. Streeter noted that these acts were not necessarily coming from atheletes. Supt. John Maloney said that a student's reluctance to properly lock his belongings in a working locker couldn't be overlooked as part of the problem.

Physical education department head Marilyn Watson said that it was hard to tell whether vandalism in the gym class locker rooms or varsity team rooms was happening during the day or after school. She indicated that the boys locker areas were in far worse condition than were the girls, and that in some areas locks and lockers had been totally destroyed.

Internal precautions are now being taken by completely separating the boys in-school physical education and after-school locker rooms, Watson said. This results in two areas that can be locked off at 3 p.m., relieving the necessity of supervising them.

The committee approved the appropriation of $5280 for locker replacement, which Watson said will also alleviate crowded areas and improve the locker room service. Forty-seven two-section varsity lockers and 41 six-tier lockers will be replaced.

$700,000 Now In High Yield Account

Close to $70,000 in trust fund accounts has been transferred recently into new six month certificates, earning about 10 per cent interest.

Town Treasurer Gordon Flint transferred the money after conducting a review of all trust fund accounts held by the town.

The town's recent outside audit recommended that trust funds held by the town be put in high yield interest accounts or certificates instead of regular savings accounts yielding little better than five per cent interest.

At stake is $350,970 in trust funds with only $41,400 invested in long-term, high yielding securities as of June 30, 1978 when the audit was begun.

The remainder of the money, more than $200,000 will remain in savings accounts getting five-and-three-quarters interest, said Flint.

Many people leave small amounts of money to the town, said Flint, but only amounts $10,000 or larger can be invested in certificates.

Most of the remaining accounts are in increments of $600 to $1,000 and are not large enough to place in any high yielding accounts, Flint noted.

The town has 14 checking accounts and intends on keeping all of them for bidding purposes, said Flint.

The audit recommended that checking accounts be consolidated into four but Flint disagreed, noting that except for the accounts payable and receivable, most contain only token amounts from $600 to $1,000.

"Whenever the town is seeking a bond or needs to borrow in anticipation of revenue we like to have 14 bids," said Flint. "Many banks won't bid unless a town has an account with them."

to thank my workers, supporters and the voters of Cohasset for their confidence in me."

Rep. Murray also thanked her colleagues on the Board of Selectmen — Arthur L. Clark and Henry W. Ainslie — other town officials, all department heads, town employees and committee members for all their assistance to her and her people in the town.

"Since the 200 per cent re-evaluation of the town in 1971, the tax rate in Cohasset has increased only $14.10 — or an average increase of $1.88 a year," noted Rep. Murray. "All officials of Cohasset have worked diligently to keep the budget increases as minimal as possible."

provide new varsity and physical education lockers was approved for $5,280; $6,000 was appropriated for the employment of a reading aide in the English department; and a salaried position at $14,000 for a Health Education teacher to be shared between the Deer Hill and Jr./Sr. High Schools, was approved by the committee.

An alternative which was voted down but which the Committee felt holds promise for the future, is the hiring of a federal and state grantmanship writer for $16,000. Maloney felt that this position should be full-time and devoted to the school system; the board agreed in part, but wanted to examine the possibility of employing a person who would share similar responsibilities with town offices.

Real Estate Taxes In The Mail

Real estate property tax bills for the second half of fiscal 1979 were mailed this week to Cohasset property owners.

Taxes are due at the Treasurer-Collector's office by May 1. This is the earliest tax bills have been sent out, said Treasurer Gordon Flint.

Residents are urged to pay the bills as soon as possible to generate working cash so the treasurer won't have to borrow money in anticipation of receiving taxes. Flint has only had to borrow money once during the last four years.

Persons having tax money in an escrow account should forward both copies of the tax bill to their bank, said Flint.

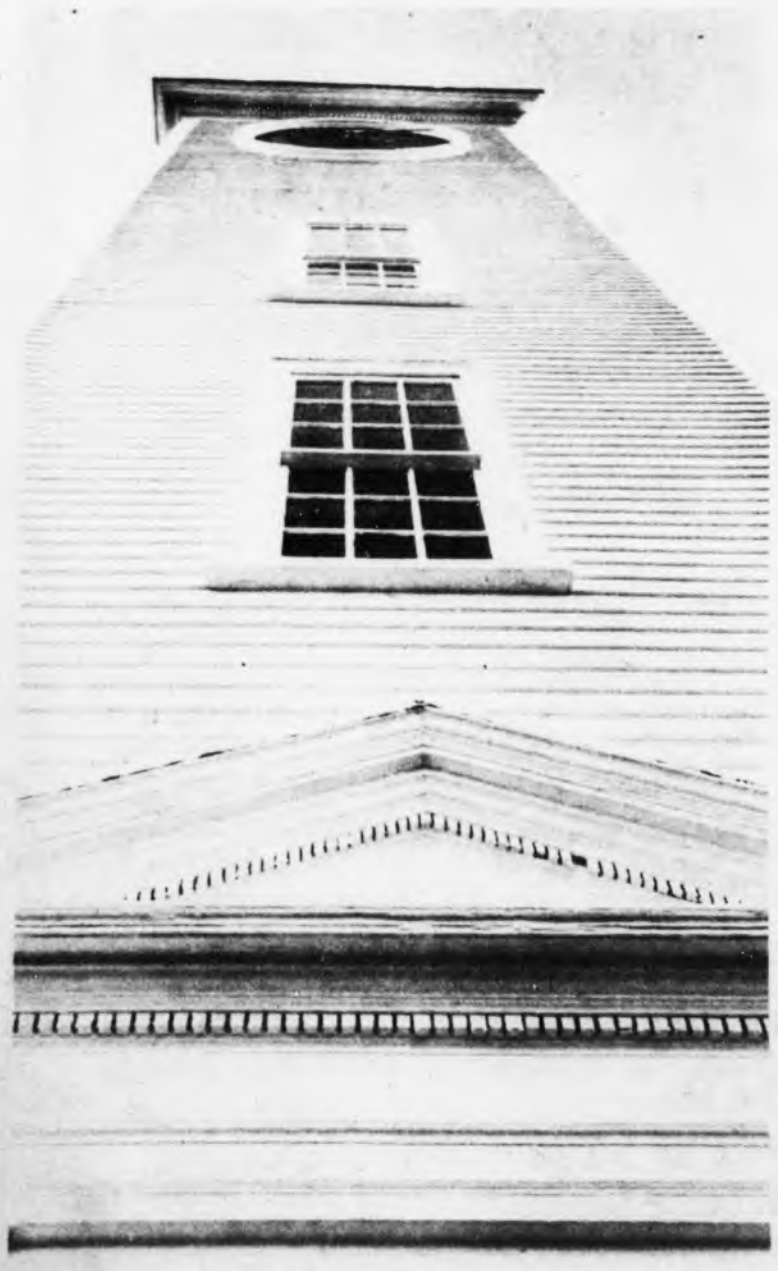
Murray's Departure

Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray is the Harry Truman of Cohasset.



Okay, gulp. But before you tell us to go soak our head in a bucket of ink, consider, despite their obvious political differences, that Mr. Truman and Mrs. Murray share(d) an ability to make decisions. And in an era of politicians who choose to waffle when the buck stops their way, the ability to decide is a most admirable trait.

This week, Mrs. Murray, the warm, affable public servant who's helped to run Cohasset for the past nine years, announced she will not seek a fourth term on the Board of Selectmen. As a fixture around town hall, and as someone who managed to bring humor and spirit to the business of governing, she will be missed.

Her decision not to return is probably the right one, however. As the state representative from a larger and substantially more populated district, she will be required to spend more time at the State House. With a smaller House of Representatives than existed two years ago, the business of legislating has emerged more and more as a full-time occupation. For Mrs. Murray to do the right kind of job, she cannot be a town father (oh, all right, town mother) as well.

In any case, she won't become a stanger. State representatives who wish to remain state representatives seldom try to separate themselves from their constituents. We expect Mrs. Murray will remain very much a part of Cohasset, even if she no longer occupies a special seat in town hall where she can give Arthur and Henry the business.

We wish her continued success on The Hill, and from this vantage, we can say without equivication that she will be missed.

Looking up to the Unitarian Church.

On Conservation

Commentary

By Gilbert Tower

The writer is locking horns with the Conservation Commission in the matter of recording the town's vote of 1961 which established the Conservation Commission. I was trying to explain it to a dear friend, when she mentioned that she felt favorably towards the Conservation Commission. My reaction was that there must be something wrong somewhere in her understanding of it, and what could it be? It has occurred to me that the word "conservation" has an emotional appeal to people. It sounds like rescuing something important or valuable from ruthless destruction. Of course none of us want that.

The Conservation Commission is an altogether different thing. The meaning of the Conservation Commission is given in an Act of the Legislature. That Act snatches away power assigned by law to the Planning Board and gives it to the Conservation Commission. Also that legislation takes from the Town Meeting its power to determine what uses should be permitted for lands in the town. Furthermore the law provides for the appointment by the Selectmen of Conservation Commission members. Therefore Evelyn Murphy claimed that the Commission's actions had the approval of the Town, which they do not have. It is all very involved and complicated. The net result is that regular Town Government procedures have been upset and thrown into some confusion.

The Conservation Commission Act of the Legislature was without a doubt the handiwork of Arthur W. Brownell Jr., former Commissioner of Natural Resources. His purpose was to set up the Conservation Commission to support his policies and principles. His philosophy was expounded in a propaganda document entitled Massachusetts Coastal Wetlands. That Brownell proclamation is a bundle of false premises, ille-

Intermittents Ruled O.K.

Attorney Charles Humphreys ruled last week that the town has a right to work a full-time intermittent police officer on a regular shift.

Two weeks ago, the police association charged that an article of the collective bargaining contract had been violated. They claimed that a permanent intermittent officer, Frederick Grassie, had been filling in a full-time shift that should have been considered overtime for regular officers.

Humphreys found that the article which deals with overtime, does not preclude the assignment of an intermittent patrolman to shift openings within the police department. "The practice of using intermittent patrolmen is one of long standing in the Town of Cohasset. If the Police Association desires to change the interpretation and treatment of matters within the department, they have the burden to negotiate such changes in subsequent contracts," Humphreys stated.

The assignment of an individual to a shift vacancy is not overtime, per se, Humphreys continued. "The assignment of a work force and the determination of shifts has been, and shall continue to be, solely a management perogative," he concluded.

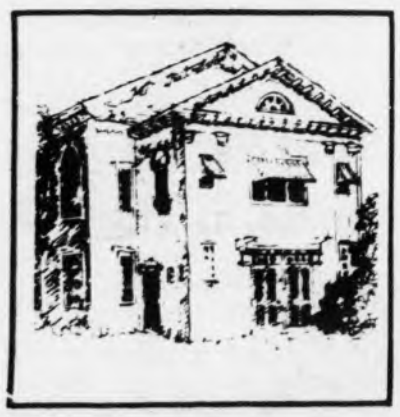
OFFICERS COMMENDED



Selectmen commended the following officers for their part in the recovery of stolen goods found in a Margin Street apartment: Patrolmen Laugelle, Kealy and Feola; Auxiliary Police Officers Andrews, Yocum and Ainslie; Lt. Stockbridge; and Scituate Police Officer Damon.

INSURANCE PLAN

Jack Skala, insurance representative from MacIntyre, Fay and Thayer Insurance Co., reproposed an insurance plan for both full-time and call firefighters. The plan would provide coverage for accidental death or loss of limb, accidents, disability pay for up to a year.

OFFICER RESIGNS

Selectmen accepted this week the resignation of permanent intermittent officer Willian McKenna of Weymouth.

HARBOR ARTICLES

The townspeople will turn much attention to the harbor this spring as four articles wend their way to consideration on the Town Meeting floor:

The Harbor Study Committee will ask the town to appropriate $5,000 for the town's share in conjunction with a grant from Coastal Zone Management, to provide a study for harbor maintenance.

They will also seek to appropriate a sum of $20,000 for a stabilization fund for harbor maintenance and dredging.

Selectmen will submit a third article to appropriate $36,000 for the town's share of a federal project to remove areas of ledge rock in the harbor. Included in the article will be the request that $15,000 left over from the last dredging by the Army Corps of Engineers be earmarked for the blasting project.

Harbormaster Harry Ritter intends to ask that $15,000 be appropriated to rehabilitate the seawalls around the perimeter of the harbor by sandblasting, chinking and guniting.

Charges Dropped Against Magee

Contempt charges against Chester Magee of Beechwood Street were dropped last week when he agreed to abide by a previous court order to remove exterior sales displays from his residence.

A stipulation entered by Norfolk Superior Court outlined the agreement which will become effective March 3. Magee will have to abide by a Sept. 1976 court order to cease and desist from displaying inventory and supply materials used in conjunction with his business, Magee Sales and Services, at his residentially-zoned home.

Magee further agreed to comply in all respects with the town zoning bylaws in connection with the use of a portion of his property as a workshop for his lawn mower and snow blower business. The stipulation also states that he is not to alter his property's residential appearance with advertising, signs or other devices.

New Life For Old Community Center

By Judy Epstein

Two years ago the Community Center was a decaying, bulky, and almost inert building — occupying one of the most prominent properties in the Common area at 3 North Main Street.

Today the Center is undergoing a renaissance — in its programs, activities and structures — and should emerge as successful as its locale is fine.

"We were a dissident group," explained President Jack Doherty of the five members who filled openings in the then governing board of directors last April. The Community Center which had been in existence since 1944, its sole purpose to entertain and educate the public at no profit, was about to close down last spring. The dissidents managed to get the board to agree to a general membership meeting.

One hundred members attended the meeting, and all the groups involved presented their sides. The most vociferous of these groups was from St. Stephen's church. Their plan was to take over the Center's liabilities and install housing for those with low or moderate incomes or for senior citizens. The membership, however, voted to maintain the Center and hence the heritage that accompanied the nursery school, the programs and the building itself was given another chance at survival.

Shortly, thereafter, the former board members resigned, and Doherty became president. A nominating committee was appointed to fill the 10 vacant positions, so that the board could operate with the needed quorum of eight people. Doherty said that the new board is a more representative one. "Now we have new people in town, older people and people in the middle." Those first few months were busy ones, Doherty said, as the board met once a week drafting vast policy changes.

At that time the Center had 77 paid members; one of the board's first goals was to attain 400 members by fall. It was also unanimously agreed that financing for renovation of the Center was in order. Herein lay a delicate balance, the need for money and members. Doherty explained, "The key to the success of the membership is in the courses and the bowling alleys." Armed with these objectives and a large volunteer staff the Community Center began an uphill climb — an ascent that soon exceeded its original expectations.

"The Oktoberfest put us back on the map," Doherty said of the fall extravanganza which featured crafts and white elephant tables, a pumpkin contest and German fare. The Program Committee was off to a good start under the direction of Judy Volungis, Jean Salvador and Regina Schulta. Their fall registration mailing offered all kinds of courses; they ranged, for example, from a "Tumble Tots" gymnastic program for children, to "Disco Dancing" for adults, to a crepe-making workshop, to a fish and chowder demonstration. The membership drive headed by Martha Gjesteby and Edward Jacome was more than on schedule, the debts were getting paid off — the Community Center was making a go of it.

Courses are open to members and prospective members of the Center, Doherty said, and therefore generate interest for membership. Family memberships are $10 a year, individual memberships are $5, and out-of-town memberships cost and additional two dollars. The recent registration added even more new courses than did the fall program. "They are mushrooming," Doherty attested. Some of the teachers are p aid, some are volunteer; but the majority of the programs yield the instructors two-thirds of the remuneration while the Center receives one third.

When it was agreed that revitalization of the three-story building would be an added attraction to members, Rocco Laugelle, Building Director started plans for what was needed. Doherty believes that the Center had been floundering, in part, because of the defunct bowling alleys, The Building Inspector had condemned the alleys because the ceiling had been severely damaged from water leakage. Because funds were scarce, the Center enlisted the volunteer aid of a Marine Corps reserved squadron, known asd the Wing Engineering Squadron 47 Combat Engineers, from the South Weymouth Naval Air Station.

One weekend a month since July the Marines have been working, ripping out the bowling alley ceiling, replacing sagging beams in the upstairs apartments and remodeling the Function Room. As a result, the bowling alleys are nearing a state of completion, the apartments have passed inspection and were recently rented and the Function Room is being readied for forthcoming wedding reception, lectures and what-have-you. Doherty was elected with the volunteer help, and the work accomplished; he was especially grateful for the renewed use of the bowling alleys which he predicted will be another "key to success" while it offers entertainment and exercise to all age groups.

A program that has remained stable during the Center's years of flux is the Nursery School. The program, under the direction of Nancy Putnam, is a tradition in Cohasset, Doherty said. Despite the Center's other changes, enrollment at the Nursery School has remained fairly stable and now has 43 children attending. Daily sessions with separate classes for three and four year olds are run from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

In the beginning building's Revenue for the facelift couldn't be met by the Center alone. Treasurer Jack Conroy felt that the building, worth $125,000, could be used as collateral for a Small Business Loan to help with construction expenses. A total loan of $66,400 will be going to the Center over a 25 year period — right now it eases renovation costs. Doherty said that so far $5,000 have been spent; SBA reimburses the Center upon receipt of expenses incurred.

Although a lot of money is being spent, Doherty said that the Center doesn't plan to increase the dues. "We plan to get as many people in the Center as possible," he said. Apparently, the plan is working, because the Center now boasts 525 memberships.

Just as the Center has flourished from the community's generosity so it extends it facilities to the public. Housed there are not only the aforementioned programs but also an array of other activities such as Girl Scout meetings, babysitting services and social security information.

The appreciation for the Commmunity Center's tenacity and phoenix-like qualities have been rewarded by individual donations slated for a particular aspect of renovation. Though out of debt, money is ever a problem, and the Center is now in the process of applying for long-term grants. The membership committee will be conducting a local funding drive soon, so support your Community Center.

Conservation

galities, misrepresentations and exaggerations. When analyzed, every sentence is untruthful. That dishonest pronouncement has infected a group of state laws relating to fisheries. In the interest of honesty it should be repudiated, denounced and disavowed.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts has a Constitution which includes an amendment saying that the State does not intend to interfere with Town affairs. The Conservation Commission Act certainly does interfere with Cohasset's Town Government. Therefore it must be concluded that it is unconstitutional and without effect. It snatches away powers which the State conferred upon the Town and hands over those powers to the Conservation Commission. That is why complaint is made!

At the bottom of it is the subject of possible dredging and filling of salt marshes. Brownell was not satisfied with being fair and reasonable. He insisted that all salt marshes without exception be restricted, and without discrimination, and without approval by the Town. Some State Laws include the words "approval by the selectmen." Others leave out those words, which would mean "with town permission." Brownell assumed a bold, presumptuous, holier than thou attitude which apparently misled the Legislative Committee on Natural Resources. They naturally assumed that the legislation proposed by Brownell could be accepted with confidence. No impact study was made and the Conservation Commission Act was passed. It was one of two bad laws. The other was the Wetlands Restrictive Act, which authorized the commissioner to attach restrictions on deeds of land. All Cohasset marshes are prohibited. The writer is trying to get the restrictions removed from some marshland on Border St. and from Whale Meadow to permit beneficial projects if the Town wants them. A simple Act of the Legislature could remove those restrictions.

It now develops that there is a head-on confrontation in connection with the Coastal Zone Management Program. It is understood that the State would like to improve harbors, but at Cohasset the improvement of the harbor is prevented by the restrictions on deeds.

The salt marshes of numerous other towns have also been restricted, but they have not complained. Cohasset is different. We now have very little land remaining for town growth and development.

It is understood that some Massachusetts coastal towns have not been restricted, but that a person in Mr. Kendall's Department of Environmental Management is trying to get them restricted. The claim is made that "thousands of acres of salt marsh have been destroyed by developers." The claim is not substanciated. Where are those acres in Massachusetts? It is conceivable that they might have been ruined in respect to their usefulness to marine life, but they were not destroyed. The dumping of some rubbish, or dirt at the edge of a salt marsh does not destroy it.

That document is in two parts. The second part is bad, but the first part is excellent. Some people are alarmed by misunderstanding that the first part is threatened. This is to definitely assure them that the explanation about the importance of salt marshes to marine life is very much applauded. In fact it is wished that a more comprehensive treatise be prepared to emphasize that ocean fish feed on smaller fish and smaller fish in turn feed on little fish that are nurtured in salt marshes. The importance of algae and plankton should also be discussed.

It is hoped that the Selectmen will ask Town Council to confirm that the Conservation Act conflicts with the work of the Planning Board. Cohasset did not know what it was doing when it accepted the Conservation Commission Act in 1961. Now the vote to accent should be rescinded by another Town Meeting vote.

Local Sha-Na-Na Member Home For 'Treatment'

By Joanne Young

Lenny Baker, lead tenor and saxophone player for the 50's revival band Sha-Na-Na, was in town for a beauty treatment before he left on the group's first 1979 tour in January. We met him at Embellish One, a salon on King Street.

Sha-Na-Na appears at a sold-out performance each summer at the Cohasset Music Circus during one of their two annual tours. Their television show is seen on 150 stations nationally and Channel 10 in Providence carries it locally at 7:30 p.m. on Fridays. Future plans include a Saturday morning cartoon show and another album, although they are basically a performing, not a recording group.

Lenny Baker began his career at the Norwell Town Hall in 1959 with Paul Wayne and the Wantelles. He later headed his own group called the Pilgrims, at the Surf in Nantasket Beach, dressed in Pilgrim costumes. Lenny joined Sha-Na-Na during its second year and they currently perform 120 songs a year on their TV show. Some of their material is original, but the format consists of reworked 50's revivals.

Lenny's face lights up when the movie "GREASE" is mentioned. He said he loved making the movie in which Sha-Na-Na created the characters Johnny Casino and the Gamblers. Lenny sang "BLUE MOON" in that movie. When asked about working with the cast, he said John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John were a joy to work with and the whole company was a happy one. "When you see the smiles on their faces and the energy with which they perform, it is genuine," he commented.

The Lineup That Makes The Sha-Na-Na Sound

"GREASE" gave Lenny the determination to seriously consider acting as a future career. He feels his distinctive looks (he is a large man with curly blond hair and a full beard) could make him unique as an actor. There are plans for a sequel to "GREASE", but Lenny would like to do a TV show on the order of "Charlie's Angels."

Lenny Baker is a Whitman native and considers this his "home base." When asked why he thought Sha-Na-Na's music was so popular today he said he did not consider it a nostalgia trip for their fans because so many of them were too young to remember the rock and roll of the 50's. He said it is rather the staying power of the music and the classic originality of the sound. Kenny believes the 50's are a popular period with the current young people because they were more pleasant years in which to grow up. The group has made four world tours but are so popular and busy in this country, they no longer have time to travel abroad.

Cohasset looks forward to welcoming Lenny Baker and Sha-Na-Na next summer. If you can't wait that long, they will be appearing at the Providence R.I. Civic Center next month on February 6th.

Selectman Authorize Mooring Repair Study

Selectmen instructed the Harbor Study Committee to investigate a potential conflict of interests should Harbormaster Harry Ritter continue to repair mooring tackle for boat owners.

Charles Fink, chairman of the Study Committee, noted that Ritter's repsonsibility is to inspect mooring tackle every five years, and that maintenance is the concern of the boat owner. Fink wanted to know if Ritter's repair work was in conflict with his job description.

Bernard Salvador, president of the Cohasset Fishing Associtation, said that repairs of mooring lines has been beyond the ability of most boat owners and fishermen. Salvador suggested that Ritter receive payment for the work which he has been doing up until now on his own time and for which he has accepted only reimbursement for materials used. Salvador added that Ritter has been the only person willing and with the know-how to do the repairs.

Selectman Henry Ainslie said that there didn't seem to be a conflict with the harbormaster's job description as yet, since Ritter had not accepted pay for the repairs and had done them on his own time. However, Ainslie said that he didn't like to encourage anybody who has a town supervisory position to go into a private business that has grown from town employment.

Ainslie cited Peter Laugelle's position as Tree and Park Superintendent as a case in point where a peripheral job, possibly proffered via the position held in the town, would not be included in the job description and therefore not permitted. When Laugelle was appointed superintendent, Ainslie said, it was clearly stipulated that he was not to start a pruning business, for example, as a result of his job with the town.

Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray had little sympathy with Salvador and other boat owners who were either unwilling to spare the time or who were ignorant of the proper procedures to fix their mooring tackle. She felt that it was part of the responsibility of being a boat owner to manage the upkeep of mooring equipment.

The Harbor Study Committee will look into the problem and possible solutions including a raise for Ritter for doing repairs, charging boat owners a fee payable to the town, rewriting the harbormaster's job description and examining the procedures used in neighboring towns.

Sweet Sounds From The Cub Scout Band

By Nancy Burns

A cub scout band, led by Mrs. Kathryn Fox, was the highlight of the Pack 38's Blue and Gold dinner held Sunday at the high school.

The boys entertained guests and parents with three patriotic songs: "Your Land is My Land, When the Saints go Marching In and America."

Members included: Ed Grafton, Noel Ripley, Pat Sheerin, Michael White, who played solo trumpet for "America", Richard Combs, Johnathan Brown, Larry Desmond, Jacob Meunier, Leonard White, Robbie Jackson and Troy Lean.

Also on the entertainment bill of fare was Creepy Crawley and Co., who demonstrated and explained about turtles, lizards, snakes and such. Those present were invited to wear a boa around their neck and many of stout hearted took the opportunity to do so.

Awards presented during the evening festivities were: service pins to all cub members indicating the years of participation; Den I-Bear badges to Richard Combs, Donald Mulligan, who also received his Wolf badge, John Scott, Bart Snyder and Tom Stevens; Den II - John Lanata, Bobcat, Billy Reed, Wolf, and Graig Martin, Wolf; Webelos-Ed Grafton, Noel Ripley and Pat Sheerin, all receiving the scientist pin and Webelo badge; Kevin Dunn, Webelo badge; and Michael White, scientist pin.

Financing of the dinner and an Aquarium trip planned for March was provided by sales of pen sets by cubs. Every cub sold at least four boxes. Highest selling dens were Den I, Den VII, Den III and Webeloes, in that order.

Highest individual sales went to Webelo Kevin Dunn, who sold 24 boxes and received a jackknife as his reward. Supersalesmen were given a pen set for each 8 sets sold and include: Donald Mulligan, Tom Stevens, John Scott, Bart Snyder, Brendon Mulcahy, Chris Gray, Todd Fitzpatrick, George Sachen, Ray Rosano, Jim Gallagher, Adam Roma, Dennis Twofoot, Mark LeVange, Larry Desmond and Ed Grafton.

Kathy and Gary Stevens, leaders of Den I, won the Eagle Award for uniform inspection. Stevens and cubs in Den I made a candleholder which was lit by each boy as he received his rank.

Den IV presented opening flag ceremony.

Cubmaster is Jeff Forsdick and sitting with him at the head table were State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray and Mrs. Kathryn Fox.

The next Pack Committee meeting will be March 25 and the next Pack Meeting will be at 7 p.m., March 28, for the Pinewood Derby Race.

around town

Alfred Fiandaca, Boston couturier, will present his only South Shore fashion show for the Thayer Academy Parents Club on March 7. Cochairmen of the fundraising event are Mrs. Frederic Wood Jr. and Mrs. Harold Coughlin of Cohasset. Mrs. Frederick Thayer Jr. is also on the committee.

Lynn O'Toole of Haystack Lane was unanimously elected captain of the CHS hockey team cheerleaders. Lynn is also president of the junior class and an honor student.

The Robert Coughlins were invited to the White House State Dinner for Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-Ping. The dinner was given to celebrate the formal establishment of U.S.-Chinese relations. The White House was besieged with requests for invitations to the dinner and the Kennedy Center entertainment. Officials said it was the most sought-after dinner they had and invitations were so tight no senior staffer except national security advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski was invited. The dinner tables were decorated with bowls of pink and white camellias, a flower discovered in China in 2737 BC.

In the ISIA Middle Atlantic Skating competition, Elizabeth McGuire and Cheryl Adams were gold medalists and Patty Oddi placed at Lake Placid, N.Y. Cohasset finished third overall against teams from all over the U.S. and Canada in freestyle, patch, dance and couples.

Edward and Eileen Jacome of Norfolk Road prepared spaghetti and sauce served to 100 guests of the Nursery School Parents Committee of the Community Center. Salad, breads, wine, dessert and coffee were included at the supper. Raffle prizes of gift certificates to the Wine and Cheese Shop and a Toyland shopping spree were won by Abigail Adams and Peter Collins Jr.

How to do the impossible 7 different ways.

Saving money isn't easy. Some people say it's downright impossible. But at South Shore we make the effort well worth your while. By offering a wide selection of savings plans to suit every lifestyle. And by promising the highest interest rate the law will allow. Look into these plans. Quite possibly there's one perfect for you.

1. Six Month Money Market Certificate.

9.376% (This was the rate through February 7, 1979.) The interest you'll earn on this certificate is excellent, equal to the U.S. Treasury Bill average six month rate in effect as of the date of issue. So the rate will fluctuate. Call us for the current reading. On this certificate, a minimum of $10,000 is required.

2. Eight Year Certificate.

7¼% Annual Interest. 8.17% Effective Yield. You'll benefit from this generous interest rate as long as you keep at least $1,000 on deposit.

3. Four Year Certificate.

7¼% Annual Interest. 7.63% Effective Yield. The minimum amount required on balance is just the same as the Eight Year Certificate. But you'll see terrific interest in just four years.

4. Two-And-A-Half Year Certificate.

6½% Annual Interest. 6.81% Effective Yield. All it takes is a minimum of $250 on deposit for this period, and you'll earn super interest.

5. One Year Certificate.

6% Annual Interest. 6.27% Effective Yield. Promise to leave at least $250 in this account for no less than one year, and you'll be very glad you did.

6. Ninety Day Notice Account.

5½% Annual Interest. 5.64% Effective Yield. As long as you maintain a balance of at least $200, you'll benefit from a better than average interest rate.

7. Regular Savings Account.

5% Annual Interest. 5.12% Effective Yield. Nobody should be without a Regular Savings Account, especially at South Shore Bank!

On all certificates, there is a penalty for withdrawal of funds before maturity.

CHS Icemen Fall To Hull, 6-5

Despite a rousing third period rally, the Cohasset hockey team was shaded last week by Hull, 6-5.

The Pirates jumped out to a 6-3 lead, but the Skippers pulled within one goal late in the final frame, then pulled goalie Bill Hollis for a sixth skater with 15 seconds remaining. Hull, however, thwarted Cohasset's assault to preserve the win.

Hull took a 3-0 first period lead, then opened the margin to 4-0 in the second period before Cohasset got on the board twice.

The Skippers outscored the Pirates in the last period 3-2, but it was too late and too little. Cohasset's record slipped to 5-3.

Valentine's! What Does It Mean?

This being Valentine's season and all, my mind meanders to the meaning of the day. Pictures of little Cupid and his quiver full of arrows are splattered around stores, reminding us of our responsibilities to our sweethearts.

We whip out our "roses are red," verses and pass them along. But though Valentine's Day offers stimulus to be thoughtful to those we love, it really doesn't carry the clout it used to before modern ways and conveniences.

One ingredient of romance has to be mystery. And there's little enigma in relationships today. We know too much, too soon.

Time was, young love bloomed on opposite ends of a see saw during recess. Gallant youths would pay court to a demure little darlin' at a barn dance. And they even provided bundling boards on cold winter evenings. You remember hearing about those. They sounded tantalizing.

PATCHES

By Lois Martin

But these days the female of the species is no longer required to drop her hankie to catch the eye of a handsome swain. And it's all because of modern conveniences. We've got the drive-in movies, the car to get there and the telephone to make prior arrangements. Oh, dear.

Parents have used their own ploys to limit contact among the young, to restrain the budding of youthful love until we're ready to sanction it, when they're about 45 and self-supporting.

One time when we attended a drive-in picture show with a car full of children, we parked behind a car that resembled a Norman Rockwell scene. Apparently a father, the boy's we decided, had condescended to take his son and girl friend to the movie.

Dad sat in front, scrunched behind the steering wheel so no one would see him. In the back sat the couple, who started the movie on opposite ends of the seat. As the movie progressed, they carefully moved closer and during the good part of the show, he managed to sneak his arm around her. We couldn't be sure if all three found the evening satisfactory, but it certainly fore-stalled cupid's full force, namely a driver's license. In fact that was probably the last time Dad got to use the car for a few years on a Saturday night.

Still the primary force that enables young love to bloom is the fault of Alexander Graham Bell.

In the olden days girls weren't allowed to call boys. Oh, we were willing, even eager. But there was only one telephone per household and it was nearly impossible to come up with a reason to call that would pass parental supervision. Besides, they'd have heard the whole conversation, a damper to any blooming relationship.

Today it's different. We've been liberated, remember, and can dial as well as a man, certainly sooner biologically. And mothers have rallied to the forefront to handle such calls when they come. It's a challenge with 13 year olds, though. There's not a distinct voice difference between sexes and Mother may not be keen to a girl's voice when she calls.

Some women have resorted to subtleties. For example, if the boy's not home, she'll tell the young lady on the other end of the line that he's out "playing." The implication is the little fellow is in the back yard with his Tonka trucks in the sand box. The conclusion is meant to be that he's still in line for babysitters rather than girl friends...It doesn't always work.

When calls go through, the recipients immediately go to a different telephone so they won't be heard. Or they shut themselves in bathrooms, kitchen closets, wherever the line will reach to avoid eavesdropping. Silly, really. We'd never interfere; we'd be helpful.

The only mystery in young love these days is for the parents. They'd like to know who called, what she looks like and what her hobbies are. Mothers are unsettled when they're only told the girl looks like one of Charlie's Angels.

My sister has teenage twin daughters who'll be 14 next month. She says she doesn't allow her girls to call boys when she can hear them. She's a realist. She knows she doesn't have time to lurk under their beds waiting for the dialing to start or to check the dialing digit to see if it's inflamed from overuse. And she also realizes the phone will be tied up by girls calling her son. It works out well.

I'm relieved they still have Valentine's Day, an opportunity for us gals to give and get little candies with catchy phrases and exchange those Snoopy cards.

Still young girls don't know what they're missing. Someone did away with May basket day. That's when we really had license. You could hang a basket on a door knob, ring the bell. And he'd have to catch you and kiss you. The last May basket I delivered was 22 years ago to a person who now lives in my house as Lord and Master, well as breadwinner anyway.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but I believe it was Alfred Lord Tennyson who said, "In the spring a young man's fancy, lightly turns to thoughts of love."

Well-spoken, Alfred. But the thing is we girls never wait till spring when someone good comes along in the winter. Happy Valentine's week.

Hoopsters Rout Holbrook To Reach State Play

By Steve MacQuarrie

It was a typical basketball event: radio broadcasters at courtside, a near capacity crowd, vocal and jubilant; the ceremonial removal of the net at the end of the game.

What was hardly typical was the site — Sullivan Gymnasium — and the occasion —Cohasset High's qualifying for the state tournament. But that was the scene last Friday night following the Skippers' 90-63 rout of Holbrook, a scene which was made possible by a 67-61 win over Hull three nights earlier.

You have to go back to 1972 to find the last time a Cohasset quintet qualified for post-season play. Before that nobody at CHS knows. Perhaps in the days of the old Osgood High School. More likely never.

Coach John LeVangie's crew was expecting a closer game from Holbrook, but the absence of the Bulldogs' 6'4" Ted Nuby deprived Holbrook of all their height. No shrinking violets, the Skippers took advantage of their height advantage to put the game out of reach by halftime. Explosive has been the best description of Cohasset's offense this year and the Skippers put on their finest offensive show of the season, riding streaks of 5-0, 10-0, and 13-0 to 47-26 intermission lead.

As they have all season, seniors Brian Keating, Paul Farren, and Matt Salerno were the scoring leaders, combining for 29 first half points. Overall, the Skippers placed four players in double figures —Salerno (17), Farren (15), Keating (11), and junior Mark Goff (10).

Hull was a much tougher opponent, thanks in part to the Cohasset coach. "I coached all the Hull kids when I was the junior varsity coach there up until two years ago," replied LeVangie. "In fact, we won the South Shore League JV championship with virtually this same group in 1977."

Determination has characterized the Cohasset team this year, and Hull showed that LeVangie must have instilled some determination in the Pirate players too, as they rallied again and again throughout the game. The Skippers led 8-2 in the first quarter, before Hull tied the score at 14. Another Cohasset lead of 22-16 in the second quarter dissolved into a 28-28 tie. A two-point Skipper lead early in the third period became a three-point deficit three minutes later. And in the fourth quarter Hull sliced a 63-55 Cohasset lead down to 63-61 before Salerno finally put Hull out of Cohasset's misery with four points in the final nine seconds.

Salerno finished the game with 21 points, his highest of the season. The senior co-captain was ably abetted by guard John Howley, whose 14 points were also a personal high.

As difficult a task as qualifying for the state tournament may have seemed in November, a piece of the South Shore League championship was considered even more improbable. Yet the Skippers still have a chance to tie for first as they complete their season Friday night.

A win at home over Duxbury, coupled with a Middleboro loss to Hull would produce Cohasset's first league championship ever. And the scene in Sullivan Gym would make last Friday's look like a wake.

Skaters In Romp Vs. Hanover, But Drop Tough One To Hull

Just a few nights earlier, the same two teams played to a 6-all tie, but last week, Cohasset's hockey team come out shooting and bombed Hanover 12-2.

Skipper coach Ed McDermott blamed lackadaisical defense for the first meeting tie with the Indians and last week went with sophomore goalie Billy Hollis who gave up only two goals in his varsity debut.

Larry Evans scored four goals including the first three for Cohasset and had two assists in the bargain as Tim Smith and Phil Drago on the same Gold Line helped to give the trio 10 points on the night.

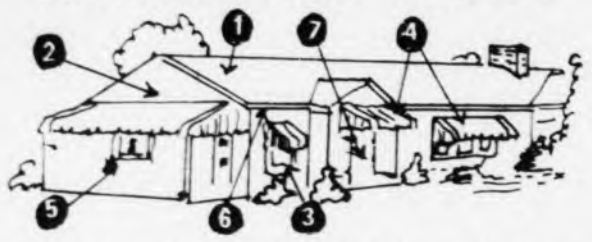
Joe Durkin, Doug Dillon and Rich Young compiled nine points with three goals by Durkin.

In the second period, Cohasset scored six unanswered goals and five without response in the third as they scored 28 goals in their last three games in an offensive binge to run their record to 5-1-1, good for a first place tie with 4-3-3 Holbrook in the South Shore League.

Bad Week for Girls Five

Cohasset's girls hoopsters dropped a 51-44 decision to Hull last week.

Diane Maloney with 13 and Katie Salerno with 11 paced the Skipper attack.



Cohasset's girls hoopsters bowed last week to Duxbury, 51-32, dropping their record to 3-5.

Cohasset's girls basketball team blew an early lead in the final seconds and lost last week to Holbrook, 38-35.

Cohasset led 16-15 at the half.

High scorer for the Skippers was Kate Salerno with 13 points.

What to do on a rainy Sunday afternoon? Make pizza, of course. Not only will you have the satisfaction of a pleasing Sunday night supper, but the outstanding flavor of your offering will be ample reward. If it all seems too much like work, think of Pam Ward and Donna Frugoli who spent all day Friday at the Marshfield YWCA making it for the annual pizza party. Here's the recipe they used to serve 70 guests. This, of course, will just do for your family. Mac McLean developed the recipe after graduating cum laude from the Bread Class at the Y. The magic of his pizza is that you can make it and freeze it and after weeks pop it into the oven for 10 minutes, and it's still delicious.

2 pkg. yeast
Pinch sugar
¼ c. lukewarm water

Mix above ingredients together and let sit.

3½ c. flour
1 tsp. salt
1 c. lukewarm water
¼ c. olive oil

Into a large bowl put flour and salt. Make well in the center of flour and pour in yeast mixture, 1 c. lukewarm water, plus ¼ c. olive oil. Mix dough well. Place dough on floured board and knead for 15 min., or til smooth and elastic. Place in bowl. Let rise until doubled, about 1½ hours, depending on room temp. Punch down with fist. Take portion of dough, knead for a minute or so, working in a little flour if needed. Flatten dough out on floured board with hands. Take rolling pin and roll to about 1/8" thick. Crimp edge to make a rim. Sprinkle baking sheet lightly with cornmeal and place dough on it. Place sauce on dough: peppers, onions, mushrooms, meats, etc. Sprinkle cheese mixture over top. Sprinkle with olive oil. Preheat oven to 500 degrees. Bake on bottom shelf for 10 min., or until crust is brown and cheese is bubbling. Sauce can be homemade spaghetti sauce or equivalent. Cheese can be mixture of 1/3 each Swiss, cheddar and mozzarella.

Eating well is not a joy reserved solely for the wealthy, for a good cook can transform the simplest meal into a treat by serving homemade bread. To make it truly nutritious, experts suggest using whole wheat flour. White flour is almost pure starch. If you go shopping for a whole wheat loaf, make sure that it isn't just caramel-colored white flour. Barbara Warner's Whole Wheat Waffles would make any rainy Sunday a pleasure.

1 c. milk
1 T melted butter
1 T honey
¼ tsp. salt
1 T wheat germ, optional
3 eggs separated

Blend first 6 ingredients with egg yolks. Preheat waffle iron to very hot and brush lightly with butter if necessary. Stiffly beat egg white and fold into batter. Ladle batter into iron and bake as quickly as possible. serves 3 or 4.

If I were a member of the jet set or the idle rich, all I'd ask of life would be to have breakfast at 10. Any day — rainy or no — would be off to a fine start with Lorene Price's English Muffins. A tuna fish can makes an ideal cutter.

Scald 1 c. milk. Add
2 T sugar
1 tsp. salt
¼ c. oil
Cool to lukewarm
Stir 1 pkg. dry yeast into
1 c. warm water until dissolved
Add milk mixture and
3 c. flour.

Beat until smooth. Stir in additional flour to make a stiff dough, about 3 cups. Knead until smooth. Place in a greased bowl. Brush top with soft shortening. Cover. Let rise until double, about one hour. Punch down. Divide in half. Roll out ¼" thick on board sprinkled with cornmeal. Cut with 3" cutter. Cover and let rise on board about 30 min. Place on greased med.-hot griddle, cornmeal side down. Bake about 15 min., or until bottom is well browned. Turn and bake other side.

out", they do benefit from the incidental contact with others on the bus.

The Shuttle's day begins at 9:30 a.m. in the Police Headquarters parking lot, when a driver, and usually a few passengers from the Elderly Housing, climb aboard and warm the cold, blue interior with greetings and conversation.

The driver has a clipboard with the names and destinations of that day's passengers, as relayed by Jean Moulten, the League's secretary.

A typical, though not busy morning, might include five or six riders, and stops at the Post Office, hairdressers, and A & P, and delivery home.

If there is a break in the morning, the driver might have a cup of coffee, or run an errand nearby, or fill the bus with gas from the town pump at the High School. Shortly before noon, the bus is returned to the office on North Main Street; clipboard and keys are dropped off for the afternoon shift. Mrs. Manganaro estimates that they handle 50 passengers a week, maybe more.

The people who ride the bus are proud of it. One woman remarks, "This Shuttle is better than other towns; we are picked up and delivered door-to-door, and the schedule is flexible." Three others told this writer, in so many words, "I don't know what I'd do without it!"

They voice their appreciation to the drivers after every trip. One amiable woman, Mrs. Knowles, helps out by phoning the drivers the night before their scheduled turn. She is modest in accepting Mrs. Manganaro's praise "Oh, it gives me something to do!"

Conrad Ericsson, Chairman of the Council on Aging, has been a Shuttle driver since it's beginning. The passengers know him well, and he is indispensable to the program, taking an average 8 turns a month! Ray Remick, a bimonthly driver for one and one-half years, is "violently in favor of (the program)!" He senses people "ride for companionship; the shopping trips are almost incidental."

To most of these drivers, their time in the Shuttle is as personally rewarding as it is essential to the elderly. Mrs. Priscilla Long, a volunteer for four years, says, "it is teaching us a great deal about the senior citizen." Moreover, she feels, "It brings together people from different backgrounds, sharing a common need — transportation!"

Margaret Young looks "forward to seeing her riders" and says she's gotten to know people she wouldn't have otherwise. A third year driver, Nancy Ripley, says it would spoil it for her if she were paid. She practices her personal conviction that "it is important for people to give time for volunteer efforts."

Mrs. Manganaro needs to recruit 10 more drivers. There is one vacancy and she would like to relieve those drivers who take extra turns every month. Getting volunteers is not always easy, and Mrs. Manganaro has been known to bribe a driver to her tribe!

She once overheard a conversation between two men - one a Shuttle driver, the other a member of her church. The latter wanted to add a flower garden to the churchyard, but worried about who would tend to the ensuing weeds. She offered to pull weeds if he would take a turn driving the Shuttle. He did, and has been with the program ever since.!

Asked if there was one thing she might like to say about the Shuttle to the Senior Citizens of Cohasset, Mrs. Manganaro replied, "It's your bus...use it!"

From the Garden

By Joan Pinkham

This last full month of winter can seem bleak and brutal, but February isn't all bad for those of us marooned in the frozen north. It begins with the absurdity of Groundhog Day, celebrated romance this week and every four years includes an extra day.

Nights that can be colder than anything December has to offer can be beautiful under the light of the Hunger Moon and I although our winter gardens are hidden under a mantle of snow, branches encased in ice shimmer and glitter like crystal. With the arrival of more sunshine and longer days, our plants are growing faster and looking to us for more water and feeding. You and your children can have a lot of fun by planting fruit pips and stones. By saving your orange, tangerine, grapefruit and lemon pips and date, apricot, avocado and peach stones, you can have green, bushy house plants at absolutely no cost. Just push the pip or stone into a small pot filled with soil. Cover with an inverted glass jar and leave in a warm, dark spot until germination takes place. Then bring the pot into the light and remove the jar.

The Old Farmer's Almanac tells us "the back of the winter is now broken" and to those of us dreaming of bursting buds and greenery, we welcome once again the arrival of the Horticultural Society's Spring Garden and Flower Show. The 108th season opens Saturday, March 17 and continues through Sunday, March 25 at the Commonwealth Pier Exhibition Hall.

Be sure to watch for the Norwell Garden Group's exhibit which will consist of a window display of herbs they are gowing themselves. This will be the first year the members have submitted an entry and we wish them luck. Also look for the display designed by members of the Indoor Light Garden Society of America. Franey Way is vice president and program chairman of the New England Chapter and says they have plans for a bay window showhow to grow plants with supplemental light — should be lovely. They will also demonstrate how to convert a closet into a propagating unit and a den bookshelf will be transformed into a display of plants growing under lights. See, you don't need a greenhouse or sunny windowsill to grow plants indoors!

More proof that February isn't all bad lies in the fact that by the end of the month our days will be 10 hours and 59 minutes long, 55 minutes longer than on Feb. 1. Everyone is hoping that Feb. 26 will be a sunny day, for that's when a partial eclipse occurs. The eclipse begins at 11:06 a.m. and ends at 1:36 p.m. Always remember not to look at the sun with the naked eye. Among the very special programs being offered to children at the South Shore Natural Science Center during vacation week occurs on Feb. 24 when there will be a solar eclipse celebration for children ages 5 and 6. It's a surprise!

"Rain, sleet and snow" can't stop the U.S. Mails, so they say and it does little to discourage our avid birders either. All are invited to join the South Shore Bird Club on Sunday, the 25th, when they tour the Manomet, Plymouth and Duxbury area. Bundle up, grab your binoculars and meet with them at the Purity Supreme Market at the intersection of Rtes. 44 and 3 in Plymouth at 9 a.m.

One of the few quaking bogs in this part of the nation is being readied for opening to the public on June 2, the anniversary date for its dedication by the late Cap'n Bill Vinal. It is hoped that all will join in supporting the fund drive which is just starting by sending contributions to Everett Russell, 17 School St., Norwell. Al Short of Cohasset has beautiful colored slides showing the rare plants and trees which seldom grow in this part of the country. If your group is interested inviewing them, just give him a call.

Now that so many people are turning to wood burning stoves in an effort to cut back on ever-rising oil bills, the sounds of chain saws and axes herald the crash of falling trees. One wonders whether this resource will in time be threatened, but Conservation Commissioner Warren Harrington of Marshfield assures us that in his town there's plenty of firewood for years to come. The precarious February weather makes the Commission hesitate to set a date for another woodgathering session on conservation land. Harrington says wood is a renewable resource and the forests we see have sprung up since the days of farmlands. The popular wood-gathering sessions have only thinned out 30 acres of woodlands out of the seven hundred Marshfield owns.

When people complain because even the bluejays are boycotting their feeders, you know there's a problem. Usually, the appearance of these beautiful, tropical-looking birds cause only mutterings when they scare away the smaller birds, but now their absence is cause for concern. Bev Litchfield says one theory is that because of an acorn shortage (due to an explosion in the squirrel population?) the bluejays are looking elsewhere. Also mystifying to many is the apparent lack of interest in home feeders shown by many of our feathered friends. That's probably because of the open winter we've been having, Bev explains. But, then again, how explain the fact that she hasn't had even one evening grosbeak at her feeder, yet two miles away, Laura Jacobs has had flocks of up to 40? It's not all bad, however, for Bev and friends saw four different species of owls on a recent trip to the North Shore. A great grey owl was seen in Ipswich for three days and then found again in Newbury. For the past two weeks snowy owls have been seen on the Driftway and short-eared owls have been seen in Duxbury and Marshfield marshes.

Town Hall Labyrinth Grows More Tangled

By Judith Epstein

The Town Hall has been in the limelight lately — whether for the good or the bad, however, is hard to tell.

Last week alone the Town Hall was officially certified by the Massachusetts Building Code Commission as a partially preserved building, inspected by State Building Inspector Joseph DiCicc o — and surrounded by a flurry of controversy over the Town Offices Space Study Committee's plan for renovation.

Two weeks ago, when Brett Donham of Donham and Sweeney Architects proposed the renovation plan at an open meeting, he indicated that the building would be exempt from certain requirements of the Basic Building Code if it was certified by both the Massachusetts Historic Commission (which it was last fall) and the State Building Code Commission. His statements met with a rebuttal from Building Inspector James Litchfield who questioned the eligibility ot the town hall to be renovated at all.

Litchfield was spurred by this doubt and by the fact that the Town Hall hadn't been inspected since Dec. 1974 and arranged to have the building examined by State Inspecter DiCicco. Their findings were forwarded in a letter to the Board of Selectmen last week.

Litchfield and DiCicco found that the structure was generally non-conforming with the requirements of the State Building Code, unprotected in many areas, and unable to meet fire resistance ratings, height limitations and use group requirements. These requirements referred specifically to the building's need for adequate 3/4 hour fire rating exitway access corridors and self-closing solid core 1 3/4" doors.

The area beneath the stage, the inspectors found, was particularly not conducive to the renovation plan's recommendation to remake the old dressing rooms there into an office area for the Recreation Department. In fact, they discerned that if the renovation plan were to be implemented, the cost would exceed more than 50 per cent of the current assessed valuation of the building — another prohibitive factor of the Code. Litchfield further noted that the Town Hall's certification as a partially preserved building precluded any change in use and occupancy.

The Selectmen's reaction to Litchfield's and DiCicco's inspection were mixed. Selectman Henry Ainslie said that Litchfield should act in an advisory fashion only and should not try to force his unrequested findings on town officials. "The only one who can be ultimately heard is the town," he said of the town meeting decision on the plan, which has been submitted for consideration by the study committee.

Selectman Arthur Clark defended Litchfield's inspection of the building in that he was responding to questions that were raised at the open meeting and wanted the backing of the state inspector. Clark voiced his dislike of the proposed plan at the public meeting and was of the opinion that he spoke for most Town Hall employees.

The board also received the letter informing them of the building's recent certification as partially preserved. Selectman Ainslie made the observation, "I don't want to use exemptions (available to partially preserved buildings) to circumvent good safety practices."

Architect Brett Donham spoke in behalf of the plan and the Study

Tidal Rave. . . New CHS Chronicle

If you are up on local slang and especially if you are a student at Cohasset High School, your response to "What's the rave?" might very well be, "Why, the Tidal Rave, of course."

The Tidal Rave, the High School's new newspaper, has just celebrated its premiere edition. The title reflects its contemporary staff and contributors: "Rave is a term peculiar among the youth of Cohasset and refers to the recent goings-on: "Tidal connotes Cohasset's affiliation with the sea.

The new name also signifies a fresh start and a distinction from CHS's old newspaper High Times, according to the paper's co-editors. Apparently interest in the Times waned several years ago when social and educational turmoil, the issues to which the paper was devoted, ebbed.

Instead, as co-editor Chris Williams notes in his Rave article, "Yes, Virginia, There is a School Newspaper," the paper "is the fresh attempt on the part of several interested active students to band together a school publication in order to portray day-to-day student life as it occurs, free from propagandist ulterior motives."

Banding together of students to make a newspaper is precisely what happened; the culmination of their efforts which began last October and with the assistance of two advisors finally yielded the six page tabloid publication last week, selling at ten cents a copy. The co-editors are: Senior Dennis Valdes (a Philippine exchange student); Juniors Peg Atkinson, Connie Grant, David McCarthy,

Stockbridge Duties Outlined

Selectmen this week amended their appointment of Lt. Charles Stockbridge as the person in charge of the Police Department while Chief Feola is on vacation.

Lt. Stockbridge began performing the duties of the Chief as of Feb. 18 and was to receive an appropriate salary adjustment. During the temporary appointment, Stockbridge is to receive no additional pay benefits, such as overtime.

Several weeks ago Stockbridge was appointed lieutenant in charge of the department. Stockbridge had said he wasn't willing to give up the differential he receives for working a night time shift, a percentage which amounts to $25 per week.

He continued to work his regular 4 p.m. to midnight shift and received a lieutenant's salary with the understanding that if he were needed as head of the department at times other than his regular shift, he would receive overtime pay. According to Stockbridge, he has received 31 hours of overtime, accumulated for the most part during the week following the recovery of stolen goods on Margin Street.

Selectmen originally thought that Stockbridge could be appointed Acting Chief, work the Chief's daytime hours and receive his salary in an effort to save the town overtime money. A conflict ensued, however, between a Civil Service law which prohibited the appointment of an Acting Chief when a chief's position wasn't available, and the police contract which requires corresponding pay for more responsible work assumed.

Charles Humphreys, counsel for the town, ruled this week after discussing the matter with Civil Service Attorney Rasmussen, that the Selectmen have the authority to assign a lower ranking officer to perform the duties of the chief if it were considered in the best interest of the department.

The title of Acting Chief, Humphreys noted, could only be appointed in the temporary absence of the chief due to sickness or disability, not during regular vacation leave.

Even if an appointment of Acting Chief is made by Selectmen, Humphreys continued, Civil Service points are not accumulated unless the appointment is made after certification by the Civil Service.

However, since Chief Feola's current status remains that of one absent on vacation, Lt. Stockbridge can't assume the post of Acting Chief. Selectmen struck a compromise by appointing Stockbridge to the chief's duties as lieutenant-in-charge, a move which is governed by the police collective bargaining contract.

Sgt. John Rhodes will work 4 p.m. to midnight rather than his usual 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. shift, when Stockbridge begins his daytime hours.

Town Accident Policy Eyed

Jack Skala, insurance representative from MacIntyre, Fay and Thayer Insurance Co., discussed accident insurance coverage for full-time fire fighters and police officers with Selectmen last week.

Skala recommended a plan which would pay up to $25,000 for accidental death or dismemberment, $10,000 for accidental medical treatment, and $100 weekly disability for 104 weeks. The annual premium, which would cost $3,519, would cover these employees against accidents which occur as a result of activities performed in the line of duty.

Skala said that the plan was meant to give required coverage for special risk employment and at the same time limit the town's responsibility to injured employees. Selectman Arthur Clark said that while he was concerned about protecting the town from lawsuits in the case of an employee accident, he wondered if it was legal to have a policy which would relieve in part the town's responsibility to pay an accident victims salary and medical bills.

Chris Williams; and Sophomore Steve Winn. Advisors are English teacher William Kite and Ronna Bingham, librarian.

Connie Grant explained that she and her friends had felt the need for a revival of a school newspaper. "If you're not involved in sports there's not much else to do," Connie said, "The school is sort of jockish." Consequently, they felt another mode of expression "would be a good outlet for kids," and so they set about preparing a vehicle in which students could be heard.

Mrs. Bingham said that she had been asked by students to help to get a paper off the ground; she discovered that Bill Kite had been similarly approached and they decided to support the newspaper together. The idea was embraced by principal Richard Streeter as well; he notes in his Rave commentary that a new paper implied a resurgence of student enthusiasm in an area that had been allowed to die out, before, and an effort to make up for the school's sore lack of clubs.

The format was left informal, David McCarthy said. The co-editors came up with a list of topics to be covered, although they were willing to accept any news pertinent to the school, and arranged to have contributors submit articles. Valdes said that students were sluggish in meeting deadlines (the bane of all newspaper business), but attributed those delinquencies to school work which was placed first.

The articles tend to editorialize, Kite said, but he predicted that with subsequent editions and more experience, straight news reporting should evolve. The co-editors felt that this way of proceeding, though opinionated, may generate opposing viewpoints and further contributions for the paper.

Financing of the newspaper was another sticky point, it was noted, and the $400 allotted for this function by the School Committee has been completely absorbed. Kite said that they got a good printing price School Publications in New Jersey. "It took two mailings," Kite said; the copy to be typeset was sent away first, then returned and pasted up. The made-up pages were then mailed back for printing and the newspapers were received within a few days.

Future editions will be funded, hopefully, by local advertising and sponsorships, Mrs. Bingham said. Should the enterprise prove successful, the Cohasset High student body can look forward to four editions a school year. A spiralling effect should result, too, Kite said, — once students see tangible evidence that a newspaper has survived at CHS, more will want to be a part of its staff.

Rep. Murray Backs State Aid To Correct Asbestos Ills

Legislative proposals providing for state aid to communities to correct dangerous asbestos conditions in schools, to raise the drinking age from 18 to 21, and to provide state reimbursement of local sea wall construction have won the support of State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray, (R) 3rd Plymouth District.

Representative Murray recorded her support of the bills at hearing held last week by the committees on Education, Government Regulations and Natural Resources.

Rep. Murray addressed the Education Committee in support of a bill calling for the state to reimburse cities and towns in which asbestos has been found in the public school buildings.

The 3rd Plymouth legislator stated, "The state has alerted and alarmed the citizens with pronouncements concerning possible health hazards of asbestos. The cities and towns which have asbestos in their school buildings are now forced to remedy the situation. We, the legislators, have been assuring the taxpayer we are concerned with the high property tax rate and now we have added another financial burden upon the local school committees."

Rep. Murray urged the committee to report out a favorable ruling on the bill which would provide reimbursement to the cities and towns for the cost of removing asbestos. She continued, "The town of Hull is such an example. A high rate of asbestos was found in the Memorial School Auditorium and Hallways. The cost to the taxpayers of Hull would be $100,000. It is imperative the state reimburse such cities and towns."

Mary Jeanette, who represents Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull appeared before the Committee on Natural Resources in support of a bill which would allow the state to reimburse cities and towns for seawall construction.

Murray also spoke before the Committee on Government Regulations regarding the Drinking Age Bills. "I support those bills which call for a return to the 21 year old drinking age, "Mary Jeanette said, "I feel strongly that we must raise the drinking age so liquor will not be available to the children in our schools."

Town Hall

Committee after the developments of last week made themselves clear. He stood by his interpretation of the Building Code; that is, his reading of a section of the Code dealing with historic buildings strongly suggested that the provisions that govern historic buildings will pre-empt all other regulations of the Basic Code.

"The Code is subject to interpretation," he said of the controversy generated by what seems to be conflicting portions of the Code. "I don't feel we are contradicting building codes, that would be irresponsible. We are not trying to do anything sneaky."

Donham explained that the Committee was more than fastidious in examining seven different options before they unanimously voted for the current proposal. Even if the building were to be exempt from certain portions of the Code, he said, mandatory safety requirements have to be met in order to qualify for those exemptions.

Donham said that he was planning a meeting very soon with Litchfield. "He and I will have to sit down with the Code in front of us. I will ask Litchfield — he's the fellow who's charge with enforcing the law locally, after all — to have DiCiccio present, too." Donham added that the State Building Code Commission exists to aid in resolutions where there are ambiguities and conflicts.

Civil Service Reply Arrives

Selectmen received a long awaited reply from Civil Service last week which included an explanation of past lists and the cancellation of a request for a full-time police officer.

Several weeks ago Selectmen had returned as unacceptable a list of intermittent police officers. Frederick Grassie, a permanent intermittent officer who has been working a full-time shift for several months and approved by Selectmen as a patrolman to the police department, didn't receive top billing on the last list to come to the Board's attention. Rather, Paul Rooney's name was placed ahead of Grassie's, according to Civil Service because Rooney received the higher score on the police service eligible list.

Selectmen have also received resignations, to become effective this month, of two permanent intermittent officers because they have taken other employment. William McKenna and Gary Keefe will be dropped from the list of intermittent police officers.

Civil Service further explained that the list which had been sent to Chief Feola at the police station, an action which angered Selectmen because they receive lists as the appointing authorities of the town, was done so inadvertently as the result of a clerical error.

Volunteer Help Appreciated

Letters

To the Editor:

As I am on dialysis Mon., Wed. & Fri. I can not be depressed because of all the kindness of the people in Cohasset.

Miss Gerdute Hooper has arranged a group of volunteers to take me in to the Kidney Center each day. It set up so that they go once a month.

Mr. Bruce Pattyson has arranged with men working in Boston to pick me up at the Kidney Center at 5:30. We have 12 men and could be very happy to have a few more so that each one would only be needed once a month. Also want a very special thanks to all my many friends that send me cards brought me many goodies and visit me.

I am home again after another operation on my arm. How can I feel only happiness for my wonderful family and friends.

I can only remember them all in my prayers.

Through the diligent work of Mrs. Donnell & Mrs. Hobbs, their volunteers, and the tremendous response of the Cohasset community, 145 people presented themselves. Our thanks again to Cohasset for being so concerned that we are able to meet the needs of hospitalized patients.

New Look Scheduled For Cohasset's Finest

The Police Association has voted to change the uniform shirt color of officers to two-toned blue and navy. Selectmen unanimously approved the decision.

The change was sought when the Association took stock of the variety of shirts currently worn by the men in the department. Since there are no written specifications enforced, many of the officers look as though they are dressed in different uniforms.

Sgt. John Rhodes said that the Association would like to see the uniforms fully standardized, with the exception of revolvers, by July. A suggested list of items to be changed and eventually conformed to by all included: a switch from the regular nine-point hat to the round style worn by MDC police, black or navy blue socks, black police shoes or boots and the two-toned shirts bearing the same collar pins, flag and town patches.

Higher ranking officers may be allowed to wear a shirt of a different color. It was also agreed to maintain auxiliary officers grey and black shirts to distinguish them from regular patrolmen.

A discussion about standardizing police revolvers raised the possibility of acquiring stainless steel .38 caliber revolvers, which would require little maintenance. Selectman Mary Jeanette Mur- said she will investigate the suggested changes in police accouterments.

Hibbard . . . Wizard Of Discs

By Joanne Young

Looking like the Wizard of Oz with red, green and blue flashing lights framing his throne, the Disco King, Jason Hibbard, orchestrated the records and tapes at last Friday's Disco Dance at CHS.

Overhead a mirrored ball revolved, shooting sparkle over the walls, floor and dancers gyrating to the latest disco beat: "Le Freak" by Chic, "I Will Survive" by Gloria Gaynor and "You and I by Rick Jones.

Hibbard sat behind a table covered with electronic equipment, as the insistent beat was counted down by the teenage dancers: 9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 to "Instant Replay."

Jason is an enterprising high school senior who designed and built the two speakers, four light foxes, two strobe lights and two turn tables. He usually chooses 350 singles and 150 albums of music when he emcees the dances.

Friday's disco was hosted by Linda and Bill Cuff and Jane and Chet Ellis, and sponsored by Curt Rever, an amiable ninth grade Social Studies teacher at CHS and mentor to the Unitarian Church Youth Group. This organization meets weekly at the Parish House on the Common and plans monthly teenage activities which involve the town, such as an Easter egg hunt and Christmas caroling. Funds raised by the dance will be used in the Youths' "Getaway Weekend" skiing in New Hampshire. All junior and senior high students are welcome to join. The Youth Group also holds discussions concerning subjects of interest to teens, such as peer pressure, drugs and alcohol. It was started by Rev. Edward Atkinson, minister of the First Parish Church.

Winners of the $5 prizes for the best disco costumes were Donna Scott, a METCO junior high student, who wore a pink satin body suit; and Brendan St. John, a seventh grader, who was jaunty in a leather cowboy hat and vest.

It was a surreal scene at the Disco Dance, a combination of leaping lights and shattering sound. Jason admitted he wore earplugs to tolerate the intensity of the music, but we toed out into the freezing February night tapping a tune to the beat.

How to do the impossible 7 different ways.

Saving money isn't easy. Some people say it's downright impossible. But at South Shore we make the effort well worth your while. By offering a wide selection of savings plans to suit every lifestyle. And by promising the highest interest rate the law will allow. Look into these plans. Quite possibly there's one perfect for you.

1. Six Month Money Market Certificate.

9.376% (This was the rate through February 7, 1979.) The interest you'll earn on this certificate is excellent, equal to the U.S. Treasury Bill average six month rate in effect as of the date of issue. So the rate will fluctuate. Call us for the current reading. On this certificate, a minimum of $10,000 is required.

2. Eight Year Certificate.

7¾% Annual Interest. 8.17% Effective Yield. You'll benefit from this generous interest rate as long as you keep at least $1,000 on deposit.

3. Four Year Certificate.

7¼% Annual Interest. 7.63% Effective Yield. The minimum amount required on balance is just the same as the Eight Year Certificate. But you'll see terrific interest in just four years.

4. Two-And-A-Half Year Certificate.

6½% Annual Interest. 6.81% Effective Yield. All it takes is a minimum of $250 on deposit for this period, and you'll earn super interest.

5. One Year Certificate.

6% Annual Interest. 6.27% Effective Yield. Promise to leave at least $250 in this account for no less than one year, and you'll be very glad you did.

6. Ninety Day Notice Account.

5½% Annual Interest. 5.64% Effective Yield. As long as you maintain a balance of at least $200, you'll benefit from a better than average interest rate.

7. Regular Savings Account.

5% Annual Interest. 5.12% Effective Yield. Nobody should be without a Regular Savings Account, especially at South Shore Bank!

On all certificates, there is a penalty for withdrawal of funds before maturity.

Hoopsters End Season With Record Win

STRETCH gives Skipper hoop star Paul Farren edge in going after a rebound against a Duxbury Green Dragon.

By Steve MacQuarrie

Cohasset completed its regularly scheduled basketball season this week, bombing Norwell 78 - 62 to set a school record for victories and coming within a few minutes of the South Shore League championship before bowing to Duxbury, 71 - 61.

Friday's loss to Duxbury meant the Skippers had to settle for third place in the league, but they can take plenty of consolation in their 15 - 5 record and an opportunity to compete in the State Division III Tournament which opens next week. In the tournament, Cohasset will get its first opportunity to meet schools of its own size, after a season of playing South Shore League schools which all have larger enrollments.

The Skippers beat Duxbury by three in January and the rematch was similar for the first 28 minutes. Cohasset raced off to a 7 point lead in the first quarter, held a 1 point lead at the half and trailed by one (56 - 55) with 4:35 left after a Matt Salerno jumper. Last time, the Skippers outscored Duxbury 10 - 4 with some clutch foul shooting in the last 4:35 to win the game.

This time Duxbury turned the tables. The Green Dragons had slowed the pace of the game since early in the second half, attempting to draw Cohasset out of their zone defense and into 'man-to-man coverage. Man-to-man is not the Skippers' stronger defense and when Cohasset finally switched to it after Salerno's hoop, Duxbury ran away with the game, dashing off 3 straight baskets en route to 15 points in the final four minutes to lock up the game.

The Skippers also had a hand in their own undoing by failing to take advantage of their foul shot opportunities, connecting on only 5 of 17 attempts (including missing 9 of 10 in the crucial second half).

Co-captains Paul Farren and Matt Salerno were Cohasset's high scorers with 14 apiece, while senior Brian Keating had 13. Duxbury's 6'9" center Brian Connors battled Farren under the basket all night, and Connors' 19 points were a key element in Duxbury's success.

Tuesday night at Norwell the Skippers used their height and speed to build a fast 10 point lead, and Norwell was never able to get within hailing distance. Farren led all scorers in that game, recording 22 points.

Girl Hoopsters Find Catchup Tough Game

Letting Norwell take a 16 - 3 first period lead, Cohasset's girls basketeers fought back but were unable to overhaul the Clippers last week and finally bowed, 36 - 30.

Dianne Maloney had 14 points and Jody Sandblom four as the Skippers got close but couldn't quite catch Norwell.

Cohasset's girls basketball team led 14 - 13 at the half but Duxbury overhauled the Clippers to win going away 38 - 31 last week.

Kate Salerno led the Skippers with nine points as the season ended on a 6 - 10 Cohasset season.

Young Celebrates Birthday Leading Skipper Hockey Win

It was Dick Young's birthday and he marked the occasion by scoring the three-goal hat trick to lead Cohasset to an 8 - 3 win over Duxbury and keep the Skippers hockey playoff hopes alive.

Duxbury scored first but Cohasset roared back with five goals in the first and second periods to take the lead and take the win.

Phil Drago and joe Durkin each scored two, Larry Evans assisted on three and Young had three.

Sophomore Cohasset goalie Billy Hollis posted his third victory and turned back 18 Duxbury shots on goal.

Cohasset's varsity hockey team had an easy time of it with Abington last week, forging a 5 - 0 win over the Green Wave.

Doug Dillon and Richie Young came up with a goal and two assists each to lead the Skipper surge.

Young scored the first of a trio of Cohasset goals in the first period with Tim Smith and Joe Durkin adding markers in succession.

A scoreless second period was followed by a goal by Jay McNeil followed by Dillon's second tally of the night in the third frame.

The Skippers upped their mark to 6-3-1.

ON TARGET — Skipper star Joe Durkin goes in all alone on enemy goalie and scores on slapshot in clash with Duxbury.

Put in 2557 Hours

Library Volunteers Are Workhorses

By Judy Epstein

The volunteers of the Cohasset Library put in a staggering number of hours last year — 2557, all totaled — time equal to that of over one and half full-time employees.

This service, sponsored by the Friends of the Library, deserves and commands hearty credit, not only for the man-hours put in, but for the countless moments of pleasure given to others.

One of the activities that exemplifies the volunteer service is the selecting and delivering of books to nursing homes in Cohasset on a bi-weekly basis. Ellie James, coordinator of volunteers for the Friends and a circulation desk volunteer herself, spoke of the program with enthusiasm. "It is more to the residents than just reading books," she said, "It is a visit with the community."

The volunteers begin their day of service first thing in the morning at the library by selecting two or three books per resident. The selection process is facilitated by keeping a record of what has been read by residents, noting their desired reading categories such as mysteries or biographies, filling specific requests and also by simply guessing what somebody might like to read.

Mrs. Faith Cook, a resident at Ripley Road, said that she enjoys historical novels; lately she has been reading the large print copies of Reader's Digest because she enjoys the variety they offer. Ida McNurland, also at Ripley Road, is a Jean Plaidy enthusiast. "I always use the service," she attested, "I read about four books each time."

Usually the rounds take a couple of hours to complete; this time is used to dispense new books, retrieve the ones already read, and to visit, chit-chat and get to know the residents. Most of the readers using the service are avid readers and can handle two or three books in a two-week period.

The volunteers, or visitors, make their rounds to Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home on Tuesdays and Ripley Road Nursing Home on Thursdays. Pat Gwinn, Dorothy Walinsky and Dorothy Candella constitute the Knoll volunteers and Betty Hunt and Vi Tuthill travel together to the Ripley Road Home.

Probably one of the most important aspects of the service is the devotion of the volunteers. Library director Richard Hayes, said, "The volunteers have a great sense of committment. They rarely miss a time. They switch assignments if they have to be absent."

Their dedication is easily confirmed: Hunt and Tuthill represent the first and only library volunteers to Ripley Road for the past five years. Each of the Knoll group has been at it two or three years; they were formerly joined by Alice Weeks, who worked in the service since its inception nine years ago.

Hayes also said that others who can't get in to the library, are able to avail themselves of this service. A volunteer can be scheduled to bring books to residences.

Donna McGee, president of the Friends, was excited over this year's 25 per cent increase in volunteer service — there are now 20 to 24 volunteers partaking in various aspects of library work. This increase reflects new attraction within the library itself as well as in its outside activities, since its renovation which was completed in January 1978.

The community's appreciation of the volunteer service surely mirrors the pride and involvement of those working selflessly in library services.

Fiction Fare For Adults, Too

By Lois Martin

Children aren't the only ones who like the impossible. Not by a long shot. We adults fancy fiction as well as our little counterparts.

Truth, you see, is forced down our throats, all day. And while they say truth is stranger than fiction. It is to fiction we look for distraction, entertainment, escape from reality.

We grow up on it. We get smaller doses of cartoons in adulthood but a lot of us are still partial to the absolutely unreal. There are the romantic novels, movies about make-believe people television soaps, and radio drama. Radio fiction is making a comeback incidentally. There used to be "The Shadow," Innersanctum," and the soaps in the afternoon . . . "Old Ma Perkins."

PATCHES

Advertising agencies must be on to viewers. They include a lot of lighthearted foolishness in commercials to be sure. They believe we'll buy the real product it they present it with unreal ads. There's Rusty Jones, for example. Rusty's a cartoon person who promises your car won't rust if you use him.

He's appealing, a freckled, red-headed cartoon person, friendly and competent in appearance. This ad is not intended for children; it's specially made for grown-ups. They sense we'll take to Rusty.

And Charles Dickens' "Christmas Carol" is annually rerun with Mr. Magoo, mind you, not believable grown-ups. Television ratings must have indicated all ages prefer imagination. Now and then Magoo is further used to sell light bulbs. And Walt Disney. Adults returning from the fairyland of Disney World are as responsive to the childlike merriment as the children. It is not childish to be pleased with children's entertainment.

The Muppets have enjoyed enviable audiences. They're funny, endearing, more popular than their real guest stars. And for tougher impossibilities, there's the bionic woman, the six million dollar man and Wonder Woman (she's capitalized 'cause I like her better).

True, those creations are faddish. With the exception of Wonder Woman, they've kind of come and gone in the list of favorites. Only one is immortal, eternal, everlasting. And he's my favorite....Superman! There are too few like him. He can do anything. I wish he were real. People have jokingly called me Lois Lane. I fear I've taken them too seriously. Nothing in me opposes a man in snug fitting blue tights, red cape and a big "S" on his chest popping into town. Think what he could have done for us in the blizzard. Imagine his clout at town meetings when folks get feisty.

This is no romantic notion on my part. Good heavens no. Superman would be a practical addition to our staff, albeit a different name from the Daily Planet. He could go ahead and be magnificent and I could write about it.

The people who made the movie about him let out all the stops. The beginni , before you got down to the familiar story, took too long. But it bathed the eager audience in spectacular color movement and music. For my part, there was too much Marlon Brando, too cautious a Clark Kent, and too much tittilating about a possible huggin' and kissin' between Superman and Lois. It was a promise that was never kept. And it's just as well. He was on Earth on business, remember.

I appreciated Lois Lane in the movie, mostly because she wasn't gorgeous. She was purposeful. She made no pretense at glamor. She spent her time getting in and out of difficult situations. And if that's not real life I don't know what is.

But as much as I'm fond of Superman, it's with all due respect that I suggest it's time for Superwoman. There'd be plenty of people to choose from. We're in town more, keen to goings-ons, used to tight scheduling, always sense when something's wrong, and in the habit of trying to control all elements.

Probably the idea of a Superwoman is an impossible dream. It certainly would be when some of us tried to fit into those tights.

Harvard Club Slates Films

The Harvard Club of Hingham is again sponsoring its annual winter movie series. This year three outstanding musicals will be shown. The first movie, on Feb. 27, is 'My Fair Lady.' 'Funny Girl' and 'The Sound of Music' will be shown on March 13 and March 27, respectively. Series ticket price is $6 or $2.50 for each movie.

The movies are all shown at 8 p.m. at the Loring Hall Cinema on Main St. in Hingham through the cooperation of the Patriot Cinemas Corp.

Proceeds from the movie series go to help the Club raise scholarships.

Soccer Course

A soccer coaching course sponsored by the Massachusetts Youth Soccer Association, will be held on Tuesday and Thursday from 7-10 p.m. beginning March 20, 1979, at Massasoit Community College in Brockton.

First Night

NRCC in Senior Showing

The North River Community Club will present a special free performance of its theatrical production of the calssic American comedy 'Harvey' for elderly citizens on Wednesday, Feb. 28.

Regular performances are scheduled Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m. beginning March 2 at the NRCC building on River St.

Ticket chairwoman Barbara Weber of Norwell says tickets are now available for the public for each performance at $4 per person. Seating will be cabaret style.

NRCC president Henry DeSantis of Norwell pointed out the special preview performance for the elderly has become a standard feature of the club's drama program in recent years and has been warmly received by area communities.

'Harvey' is being produced by Pat Treganowen of Duxbury and directed by Ralph Barnes of Hanover. It has been a long time favorite among community theater groups because of its whimsical humor and sure fire audience appeal.

The NRCC opened its drama program last fall with a sellout production of the hit comedy 'The Butler Did It,' directed by Dawn Richardson of Norwell.

Parlez Francaise?

Persons who are fairly proficient in speaking and reading French will have an opportunity to join a group at the Hingham Public Library which will be reading the French text then discussing in that language 'La Peste' by Albert Camus.

This 12-week free course will start Tuesday, Feb. 27, at 9:30 a.m. and will continue on subsequent Tuesdays through May 15. It is made possible by the generosity of Jacqueline Bailles who is giving her time to provide leadership.

Churning out three meals a day, seven days a week, takes a lot of imagination. Anyone thinking of marriage should be forewarned — feeding fond husband isn't easy. Perhaps that's why women can often be found off in a corner at a party, swapping recipes, or, hopefully, reading columns like this. Just knowing how other wives cope or what's on the menu at the house next door, can give us fresh ideas. That's why I've asked a few of our readers to share their favorites with us and, as you know by now, yours are always welcome.

'Tis said when you want something done, ask the busiest person you know. Sure enough, Selectman Rose Zoob of Scituate found time enough to ferret out this Mexican recipe which can be served as a first course or hors d'oeuvre. With little time for entertaining since her election two years ago, Rose did manage to have a dinner party for 14 on New Year's Eve and this Seviche was a hit. This recipe serves 6 to 8 and is made with either scallops or a firm white fish, preferably halibut.

1½ lb. fish, less than 1 lb. if scallops

Cut fish or scallops with kitchen shears into 1½" pieces.

Salt well, using at least 1 tsp. salt. Cover in flat glass or enamel dish, marinating in juice of four limes overnight. An hour or so before serving, drain off liquid. Mix 1/3 c. olive oil, freshly ground pepper, 10 drops of tabasco sauce, two level T of your favorite cocktail sauce, 1 chopped white or red onion, 2 chopped stalks of celery and 2T finely chopped parsley. Mix with fish and taste, adding more salt or oil if desired. Chill before serving.

Ralph Meyers, Scituate's Citizen of the Year, went into consultation with his wife before coming up with his choice of this, his favorite meal. Morning, noon or night, he'd be happy with prime ribs of beef, potatoes au gratin and pistachio ice cream.

Chocolate gives us energy, a precious commodity for public officials such as Joseph Carty. As Norwell's Chairman of the Advisory Board, this is a particularly busy time of year for Joe; a way of life for his wife, Grace, mother of five. This chocolate cake is a family favorite, one Grace gleaned from her sister, Marie. You literally "throw" it together, it's so easy, and goes like this.

1 1/2 c. flour
1 c. sugar
1/3 c. cocoa
1/2 c. milk
1/2 c. salad oil
1/2 c. water
1 egg
1/2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. vanilla

"Throw" into bowl, (no special order), beat until well blended. Pour into round, 10" angel cake pan. Bake in 350 degree oven for 25 to 30 min. This is good without frosting, Grace says, for a little crust forms as it bakes.

Surely one of Marshfield's busiest households is that of State Representative Phil Johnston, yet he and his charming wife, Beverly, are seldom too busy to enjoy evening meals with their children, Ellen, 13 and Bob, 10. After Phil's day on Beacon Hill and Bev's as director of training and staff development for the Commission for the Blind, they enjoy being together. Reserved for special occasions is this favorite of Phil's, Marshmallow Rum Pie, a dessert his grandmother used to make.

36 large marshmallows, melted in a double boiler with 1/2 c. milk. Cool to room temperature while whipping 1 pt. heavy cream. Fold cream into melted marshmallows with 1/4 tsp. rum extract. Pour while tepid into graham cracker crust. Grate unsweetened chocolate over top and serve chilled.

ROOM SERVICE presented last week at Town Hall finds thespians in action. [Greg Derr photos]

World Prayer Day March 2

On Friday, March 2, women throughout the world will celebrate World Day of Prayer. This year's service, on the theme "Spiritual Growth," was written by women in Africa.

Church Women United, the official sponsor of World Day of Prayer in the United States, invites residents to participate in an ecumenical service on March 2 at the Christ Lutheran Church, Route 3A, Scituate. The Rev. Michael Gruel will be the speaker. Coffee and refreshments will be served at 9:30 a.m., and the service is at 10 a.m.

Women have been worshipping together on World Day of Prayer since 1890. Add your prayers and offering to those of women all around the world on this historic day.

Programs and projects benefitted by the Church Women United include emergency food aid, ministries to refugees, political prisoners and their families, ministries to families in Northern Ireland, battered wives and children, Asian women's coleges and women's centers, community and rural health programs, prison programs, employment training programs, housing, and legislative workshops.

Plans To Retire At 65

Chief Feola Will Return To Work

By Judith Epstein

Police Chief Randolph Feola notified Selectmen last week that he plans to return to work March 6.

Two weeks ago, Selectmen wrote a letter to Feola in Florida, where he has been vacationing since Feb. 2, requesting his intentions concerning the Police Department — that is, when and how he intends to retire.

Vagueness and uncertainty which currently surrounds the Chief's status, Selectmen stated, not only interferes with the management and planning of the Selectmen's office but with the Police Department as well.

Selectmen noted that the Chief had indicated at various times his intention to retire from the department prior to the mandatory retirement age. But at other times he had specifically said he planned to retire on a medical disability. Selectmen were particularly distressed with the Chief's latest report on his physical condition.

Before Feola left for vacation, he told Selectmen that he had fallen while checking a burglar alarm and was unable to walk a distance without a cane. This condition raised substantial questions Selectmen said, as to whether or not the Chief's continued services as a police officer was a healthy prospect for him and the townspeople.

Selectmen further stated in their letter that they stand ready, under Chapter 32 of the General Laws, to appoint a medical panel to determine if Feola's injuries were sustained in the line of duty and if they are permanent and disabling. It was suggested to Feola that he base his retirement on his years of service, which although not yet confirmed with the Norfolk County Retirement Board, would entitle him to 80 per cent of his current salary as retirement compensation. Retiring under disability, Selectmen said, as they understood the law, yields 72 per cent compensation.

Feola's response was received late last week. He said that his intention was to retire on July 28, 1980 when he became 65 years old and that at no time had he expressed a desire to retire on a medical disability.

Skippers Win Tourney Opener

Mark Goff came off the bench in the second quarter Tuesday night and detonated a Cohasset bombardment that carried the Skippers to a 75-51 win over Diman Voc. in the first round of the State Division III Basketball tournament.

The Cohasset explosion blew Diman out of the tournament and landed the Skippers in a quarter final game with Martha's Vineyard on Friday night at 7 in Middleboro.

Cohasset & Hull Seek Joint Cleanup Of Pollution-Ridden Straits Pond

Straits Pond may be headed for a much needed and long awaited cleaning.

Selectmen voted last week to ask townspeople for a $5,000 appropriation for Cohasset's share of a project to control vegetation and insects in the pond.

Avsholam Beni, Hull Disaster Relief Coordinator, informed Selectmen that he and Health Board members Christopher McCabe of Hull and Kevin O'Brien of Cohasset, have filed a preliminary application for the study with the Department of Environmental Engineering (DEQE).

Technical assistance was needed, Beni said, for completion of the final application from DEQE. Tibbetts Engineering Corp. of New Bedford was consulted to help evaluate the pond's problems and estimated that $10,000 was needed to complete the study, 25% of the cost of the study.

Beni had been told by the Hull Advisory Board to go to the Selectmen of both towns to see if the cost could be shared — as Straits Pond lies between

Of Candy. . . . . And Quilts

By Joanne Young

Flavors of grape, lemon, lime, peppermint, cinnamon, orange, clove anise and butter rum drifted from the kitchen of the Beechwood Congregational Church on a recent snowy February evening.

We had gathered for the making of the famous Beach Glass candy. The candy is boiled to the hard cracked stage and flavored one batch at at time, the base always the same, the flavor added at the last minute.

Nine times the pot boils and nine times the candy is poured onto a cookie sheet liberally dusted with confectioner's sugar. It hardens quickly and is cut in 1/4 inch strips, then snipped into tiny pieces to give a cushion effect. Each batch is sifted and placed in a large pan then all are mixed together and resifted. Each flavor takes 20 minutes to complete and the entire process about three hours.

On this evening, lollipops were also made in metal full mold shapes of trains, horses, dogs, bears and hens. The newer half molds are plastic and flat on one side. The old molds create a full form and are more fun to eat.

Toward the end of the candymaking the pace became hectic and there was little time to taste test for May Merritt, Janice Turner, Janice Sargent, Marion

Beechwood Congregational In Candy, Quilting Bee

Douglas, Connie Jones, Flossie Cogill, Jeanita Burnside, Marie Perroncello, Jean Bailey and Ruth Mitchell.

These women have another creative interest in quilt-making. Marion Ellis, a charming lady of 87 years, and treasurer of the group, has won many awards at the Marshfield Fair for her quilts and other needlework.

She has been the guiding light behind the crazy quilt now being pieced together from uneven patches of silk, satin and velvet. This reproduction of a Victorian quilt will be backed in silk, bound with ruffles and hand-tied. It will be sold at the antique show this summer.

The sales of beach glass candy and quilts help to support Ralph Alford Feather, Jr., a full-blooded Cherokee Indian. The Ladies Committee helps Ralph, a 10th grade student in Oklahoma, through the Christian Children's Fund, Inc.

The Beechwood Church is also known for its traditional Fish Chowder luncheons. Inclusion on the mailing list is sought after, as the dining-room seats only 120 people. All the food is homemade and the day before the luncheon the cooks peel potatoes, cook fish, freshly caught that morning, and set the tables. On the morning of the lunch the stock pot starts simmering with milk, cream, butter and onions. For $2.50 you have all you can eat of chowder, sea pilot crackers, pickles, coffee, tea and cake.

There are two annual suppers, the Harvest supper in the Fall and the Election supper each Spring. The Harvest includes an auction of handmade corn husk dolls, fudge, cookies, breads and preserves. You may find yourself returning home with the table decorations. All the food you can eat for $3.50 includes ham, potatoes, beets, green beans, coleslaw, rolls, butter, coffee, tea, gingerbread and whipped cream.

The Election Supper, now in the planning stage, invites local candidates for town offices of selectmen, & planning board, to chat with their friends and neighbors in an informal setting. Good food makes for good conversation. Whatever the menu, you can be sure it will be plentiful, homemade and delicious.

At the end of a pleasant candymaking evening, May Merritt showed us about her one hundred and twelve year old church, with its classic steeple and louvered windows. She proudly pointed out the exquisite handmade lace altar cloths and exuberant banners used in the services.

As we entered the church proper, she lighted up the charming, serene interior. The soft patina of the singleboard pews, transported by oxcart from the Sanford church in Bridgewater; the pulpit, a duplicate of one in Sturbridge Village; the memorial gifts were silent tribute to the dedication and love of the small congregation and its many friends and supporters. and the shuttered windows

On Civil Service

In the Jan. 30 issue of the Boston Globe, Mike Barnicle took an astute look at that lumbering bureaucracy of Civil Service:

"Over the course of recent history, two things have arisen to stand in the path of political jobs. The Civil Service system and crusading goo-goos, a/k/a, good government types.

"As a result, we have bureaucracies that move only at lunchtime or coffee break. Or, we are treated to an endless collection of nitwits with fine paper credentials and no common sense.

You cannot fire someone with a certified Civil Service ranking. You have to let him sit there and finish his nap at the expense of the taxpayers. Too much of the Civil Service system has come to resemble a ship in drydock."

To that, Mike, we say Amen.

Something To Ponder

The net effect of the revenue sharing formula is that the greater the increase in the percentage of the school expenditures versus municipal expenditures the smaller the town's allotment of revenue sharing.

Race By The Sea April 1

The third annual Cohasset Jaycees Roadrace by the Sea will take place on Sunday, April 1, at 1 p.m. Record-holder for this 6.5 mile event is Robert Hodge, last year's winner.

Runners have dubbed the course as the roller coaster because of the hill and dale terrain of the last three miles. Striders from all over New England are expected to compete this year on this route reputed to be one of the most scenic short distance courses in the East.

Selectmen Get More Data On 3A Professional Building

Selectmen received additional information last week concerning the professional building on Rte. 3A, the building considered by many as an alternative to the proposed Town Hall renovation plan for town office space.

According to Roy Whittaker vice president of the Scituate Federal Savings Bank which holds the mortgage on the professional building, Cohasset town offices require 5,000 square feet should they be relocated there. The remaining free space, 4,780 square feet, could be rented to offset operational expenses of the building which are presently $27,500.

Three thousand square feet of the building are now rented at $7.25 per square foot. Whittaker noted that the remaining space could be leased out for the same or a slightly higher price. Rental of this space could bring in as much as $35,850, leaving over $8,000 surplus after operational expenses are met.

The Rte. 3A building is currently for sale at $325,000. The Town has been seriously considering buying the building. An article has been submitted in the town warrant requesting an appropriation for its purchase.

At a recent open meeting to hear the proposed renovation plan of the Office Space Study Committee, consideration of the professional building dominated the discussion.

Whittaker further stated that utilities have to be maintained within the building regardless of occupancy and that this cost was $11,000 last year. He added that the building's 2870 square feet of glass windows did not need thermopaning.

Brett Donham of Donham & Tadhg Sweeney Architects, spokesman for the Study Committee's plan at the open meeting, had informed the people that in his opinion the 3A building required insulated glass to retain the heat in the winter and to reduce summer solar heat gain.

A recent cost estimate from Settles Glass to remove and replace the existing window frames and sashes with new heavier frames and reglazing would cost $97,000. Donham indicated that further investigation might be able to produce a lower cost, but not below $50,000.

Commentary

A Tough Lot With A Tough Job

By Chester Magee

Cohasset Support Your Local . . .

We've all read the bumper stickers! If you have a friend on the Police Department you're lucky because police officers have few. What happens when one chooses the life of a policeman?

First one has enthusiasm to become a servant. Then one goes to the Police Chief and expresses that enthusiasm. If the Chief is honest, he will talk to the potential candidate and tell them the good and the bad about being a Policeman. I am going to elaborate on the bad, not as a officer but as a bystander.

Domestic disturbance calls, can mean facing a gun, knife, a flying bottle, piece of furniture etc., verbal threats come from as well as children standing by. Verbal threats to the officer on the scene are common as few want to admit their wrongs.

Letters to patrolmen all the way up to the Chief are received at the officers' homes from disgruntled offenders unsigned and they don't read "He, how are you!" They read more like this: "For a few bucks you can be eliminated, watch your step!" Then summer time comes and the young have to release that pent up feeling of winter and school being out. It's what we all called freedom. Years ago throughout the town many blamed the (summer residents) for this outburst of speeders, parties and those driving under the influence.

If you ask an old time police officer, he'll say they contributed to the unrest of others but much of it involved locals too. Today our officers face local pool parties, cookouts and the now admitted full moon syndrome. They face this season after season. Consider most of the force are local men and have lived in town most of their lives.

It's a great town for celebration, but all too often the parties get out of control. A neighbor complains, and the police follow through. Arriving on the scene there's a fight, and all too often the officers leave the scene battered, bitter or bruised and there's verbal abuse that can't be printed.

One incident I observed last summer was a car bouncing off a parked one downtown. An officer arrived on the scene to find an old school buddy bombed behind the wheel. Being parked close by, I overheard some of the officer's and offender's conversation. Was the police officer doing his job? I assumed so as the offender, a young woman wasn't happy and again the verbal abuse can't be printed.

Now someday, this young officer may be a police chief. I sit here thinking, what does this abuse do to one over a period of years: the stress of threatening letters, bad auto accidents, suicides, murders, domestic disturbances etc. and why do so few officers desire that top position of police chief?

I myself looked into the police department as a career in 1957. I decided against it. Have a nice vacation Chief Feola, you earned it!

School Board Gets Good Mark On Budget

By Judith Epstein

The Advisory Board gave the School Committee good marks on the new school budget of $3.5 million.

The Board withheld in depth comment on the budget because it had not been fully discussed. Advisors indicated, however, that the percentage increase of the budget was close to those of other town departments.

Patrick Hurley, chairman of the Advisory Board, said his chief concern was the impact of the Governor's spending cap message, if it is passed by the legislature, and if it is passed in time for Town Meeting.

"If the Governor's message says that we can't spend more than last year, how can the School Committee share in the cap?" Hurley asked.

Supt. John Maloney said that in the event of a state imposed zero increase, the School Committee would be faced with the same problem it encountered with the first draft of the requested no-increase budget proposed last December.

Maloney noted that the budget had undergone changes since that time, particularly in the area of maintenance, and that if level budgeting were enforced, "trade-offs" would have to be made within the budget. The 1979-1980 budget is now $83,128 over last year's budget, which represents a 2.4 per cent increase.

School Committee Chairman Doris Golden said, "In that first draft of the budget maintenance was omitted and that's what we've put back." Golden commented that it would be difficult, if the Governor's legislation passed between now and Town Meeting on April 7, to realize "at the 11th hour" that a zero increase budget was needed.

School Business Manager John Raftery said that the Governor's bill was only one of 36 proposed to cut spending, and although it is the one that has received most publicity, it would probably take at least six months before it is voted on by the legislature. Hurley suggested that areas of the school budget may be exempt from the Governor's plan because of the department's automony.

The two boards left the topic with a feeling of confusion and uncertainty as to what would happen if the spending cap plan were law. Raftery commented later, "No one knows what will happen, we are at the mercy of the legislature."

One area of the budget that was scrutinized by the Advisory Board was Special Education. Board member Jean Cotton questioned the per-pupil costs that have risen from $900 to $1120 when enrollment was down to 90 students from 110 last year. She queried how this portion of the budget would affect the per-pupil costs overall.

Maloney explained that deciding enrollment had been responded to in the area of Special Education by the decrease of an aide. Figures are misleading, he said, when staff costs with negotiated salary increases are constantly going up and down while some teachers leave, reach maximum pay and come in at the first step. Also the necessity to retain a teacher even though enrollment has dropped will reflect in a higher per-pupil cost, he said.

The 1976-1977 overall per-pupil cost in Cohasset was $1814; last year's figure has not been published yet by the Dept. of Education. Maloney believes that the quoted per-pupil cost is below the median for a high socio-economic community but that it is higher than the state figure.

At the conclusion of the board's meeting, Advisory Board member Osborn Ingram commended the School Committee for having "thoughtfully put together" the budget.

"We haven't taken advantage of our autonomy," Golden responded. "For six people who don't agree on the time of day, we have reached a happy medium," she said.

When Chief Feola Returns Shift Changes Will Be Remedied

Lt. Stockbridge has one more week to serve as the man-in-charge of the Police Department, if Chief Feola returns to duty March 6 as planned.

In past weeks there has been massive confusion as to the exact nature of Stockbridge's appointment. The time of day he would work, the pay he would receive, and the duties he was responsible for, all seemed highly moot questions and required the advice and decisions of lawyers from the town and Civil Service.

Finally last week, Stockbridge's assignment was outlined — he was officially appointed by Selectmen to perform the duties of the Chief as lieutenant-in-charge of the Department — after a ruling by Charles Humphreys, counsel for the town. Apparently, however, relief that the matter was settled was not complete as there remained complaints within the Police Department.

Attorney Humphreys explained his ruling. Fundamentally, duties in a rank structure devolve to the next officer when a senior officer is absent and is part of the job. "There are, however, particular statutory obligations that relate to the Chief, head of the department, or his designee," Humphreys said.

A formal designation was required, in writing from the Selectmen, if Stockbridge were to perform the Chief's duties as man-in-charge. That accomplished, the collective bargaining contract governed the stipulation that appointed duties of higher responsibility command a corresponding salary, Humphreys explained.

Humphreys believes that the Selectmen's rationale was to move Stockbridge to daytime duty because that is the time of most active police work. If the Selectmen were to leave Stockbridge in his old shift of 4 p.m. to midnight, he would probably run up overtime far exceeding the Chief's salary. A chief's salary is 1.8 times the maximum patrolman's rate of pay, Humphreys said.

A chief has no set shift, Humphreys continued, he must be at the Police Department whenever needed. As a result of Stockbridge's switch to a daily schedule, Sgt. John Rhodes has been transferred to the 4 p.m. to midnight shift from his regular 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. shift.

Humphreys said the men in the Police Department have been trained to accept changes of shift assignments and have little trouble dealing with the transition. The matter of adjusting to a change in shifts may not prove personally troublesome, yet apparently Rhodes is disturbed because he feels that his shift change creates yet another vacancy, now making two, in the 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. shift, leaving the department short of working police officers during this time.

When Chief Feola returns the men will resume their regular shifts and the problems revolving around temporary assignments and shift changes should be alleviated.

Feola

"My health at the present time is excellent, I feel very good. All I needed was a short rest in the sunshine," Chief Feola attested. "At present I'm riding my bike five miles a day, swimming and doing light erercises. In fact, it's the best I've felt since my hernia operation. I will return to duty on March 6, 1979."

Feola said that since his return to duty last year on April 20 after his vacation and recuperation from the hernia operation that was performed in Florida, he has not taken a day off except for his current vacation. During this period, Feola claimed he has worked on his days off around the clock, for a total of 78 days and that he had not taken any sick leave since his appointment as Chief.

Feola concluded his reply by requesting that Selectmen investigate the possibility of increasing his vacation days.

The Chief feels that his vacation days have been curtailed because he doesn't receive the same benefits given to regular personnel, Selectman Arthur Clark said.

Clark remarked that he was pleased with Feola's response, that it ended the uncertainty of his status and that it answered in writing the question of how the Police Department was to be manned, at least for the near future.

Choral Art Society Begins 21st Season

The Choral Art Society, now in its 21st season, has begun rehearsals for a May performance of Mozart's "Solemn Vespers" and Handel's "O Praise the Lord with One Consent." The Society is actively seeking new members, and talented amateurs, semi-professional and professional singers are invited to join the rehearsals which are taking place every monday evening at 8 p.m. in the music room of Marshfield High School.

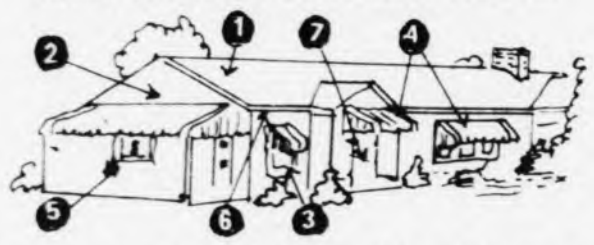
WGBH To Start Soliciting

WGBH, Channel 2, Boston's public television station, announces the start of solicitation of merchandise, art and antiques for this year's auction, to be aired on Channel 2 June 1 - 9.



Cohasset merchants, artists and private collectors have given generous support to the auction in past years. They will be contacted again this year by a team of 14 local "go-getters." Cohasset go-captains are Susan Shumaker and Pat Baird.

Special attractions for artists are the regional and Prudential Center art and antique shows preceding the auction. Works contributed by Cohasset artists will be shown at the Hingham Public Library April 8 - 29, along with those of other South Shore artists. The show, composed of art selected from the regional shows, will begin in mid-May.

Art sales are a big part of the money-raising effort of the auction. Contributions of art and antiques from new as well as former contributors would be greatly appreciated.

Artists and collectors who have not given in the past and would like to do so this year should call Susan Shumaker at 383-1443.

Cohasset Boy Scout Troup 28 has had paper drives for the past 25 years to support its activities. In 1955 a trailer truck was parked in Wheelwright Park, and in the next six years they collected 12 tons of paper. Two drives in 1965 netted over 30 tons. The late Eustace James made his garage available to the Scouts and intake jumped to 45 tons annually. In 1972, the operation expanded to the town dump. Since then, a quarter of a million pounds are collected each year. More than 2.6 million pounds have been recycled in the last 25 years.

Straits Pond

Jerusalem Road in Cohasset and Atlantic Avenue in Hull.

Wednesday night both towns agreed to submit articles in their warrants. Hull will hold a Special Town Meeting on March 12; Cohasset's annual Town Meeting will start April 7.

Beni said that the difficulty in evaluating Straits Pond and projecting the outcome of the study was partially due to the lack of "hard-core data" or limnological information about the pond and its environs. He was, however, enthusiastic about the completion of the DEQE study and indicated that a Coastal Zone Management (CZM) grant will be applied for in March, and if additional work needs to be done a Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC) grant will be sought.

"If this study (DEQE) will be the foundation for other studies and grants," Beni said, "then it will be worthwhile." Beni said the DEQE study would encompass Phase I, the examination of the pond's characteristics but would probably not be able to resolve all the conditions afflicting the pond.

The Pond may ultimately need dredging and a tie-in with the town's sewerage system, Beni said. "There is raw sewerage from Hull and Cohasset coming into Straits Pond via storm drains," he said.

Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray said that two Cohasset health agents had previously denied this source of pollution. Beni maintained that the problem exists as a joint problem between the two towns.

Eventually, if other grants are obtained to implement corrective measures for the Pond, an automated floodgate may be constructed to change the water's salinity.

It is thought, Beni said, that a change in the pond's salt content might destroy harmful vegetation and insects, such as midges. Beni noted the Pond's potential for use as a fish hatchery, clam breeding, light fishing and recreational purposes.

A standard article requesting a sum for the town's share of the cost of insect, vegetable, and animal life in the pond will also be heard at Town Meeting.

Cohasset Savings Invests Assets Locally

Cohasset Savings Bank has invested nearly 80 per cent of its total assets in real estate and mortgage loans right in its own deposit community, helping homeowners, businesses and individuals to finance their purchases, officers of the bank reported at a recent dinner meeting of Corporators and Trustees held at the Cohasset Legion Post quarters.

"We believe the record of Cohasset Savings shows that it is carrying out a principal function of a mutual savings bank which is to put the depositors' money to work for the benefit of their neighbors," Osborne F. Ingram, president, told the group. "At present we have over $22 million invested in local real estate and personal loans, helping the bank to do the other part of its job, to earn a return for depositors on their savings."

The program of the meeting focused on the bank's use of its depositors' money through investments in mortgages and personal loans. An earlier meeting centered on the source of the bank's funds through 11 types of savings accounts. A future meeting will discuss the bank's investments in securities.

Robert Magner, vice president and mortgage officer of the bank, reported that Cohasset Savings now has over $20 million invested in approximately 900 individual residential properties. Virtually all of the mortgages are of the 20-30 year level monthly payment amortizing type.

In recent years, he pointed out, the proportion of bank funds going into real estate loans has risen from about 60 per cent to approximately 70 per cent of assets. There has been a proportionate decline in the amount invested in securities.

A combination of non-availability of funds and the legal ceiling on the percentage of deposits going into mortgages, has kept Cohasset Savings out of the mortgage market recently, but Mr. Magner said he anticipated that increased deposits will soon make possible the resumption of mortgage lending.

He stressed that Cohasset Savings felt it could offer much quicker decisions on mortgage applications than larger city banks because bank officers are thoroughly familiar with local property values. The bank, he pointed out, also is a member of a credit information network that enables it to get a credit check on loan applications in a matter of minutes.

In addition to the residential real estate loans, Mr. Magner reported that Cohasset Savings has made substantial commercial real estate loans to a number of local businesses.

"Right now," he said, "we have nearly $500,000 invested in five successful Cohasset businesses that employ over 120 people and have total annual payrolls of nearly $1 million. We believe that is another example of how depositors' money is put to work for the benefit of our community."

Margaret Santacroce, Assistant Treasurer, reported on the bank's activity in making personal loans, noting that the bank currently has $2.1 million now invested in collateral loans on passbooks or securities, in automobile loans, in unsecured personal loans and in home improvement loans. The total represents nearly 8 percent of the bank's total assets and is an area which has developed over the past seven or eight years.

"We are not allowed by law to invest more than 20% of our deposits in personal loans, which means that we could increase our total now to $5 million," Miss Santacroce said.

She pointed out that one advantage to a bank in personal loans is that there is a relatively fast turnover since the terms are much shorter than those of real estate loans. This permits an adjustment of rates to the current market. Cohasset Savings' loan rates, she said, are competitive with those of other lending institutions and all include a life insurance coverage.

Outlining the procedure for servicing the loans, Miss Santacroce reported that during 1978 the bank made 477 personal loans totalling $1.4 million, charged off $12,000, but made subsequent recovery of $9,000, so that the net loss to bad debts was only $3,000.

Maloney Proposes Grant Writer Post

Supt. John Maloney recommended last week that Selectmen consider the appointment of a town grantsmanship writer. No decision is expected until Selectmen review the request with members of the School Committee and Advisory Board.

Maloney had initially included the recommendation for the employment of a person who would obtain federal and state grants as an alternative in the proposed school budget. It was voted down two weeks ago when it went before the School Committee as it was felt the position could be shared with other town departments.

Maloney's original premise for establishing the new position was that the securing of external funds to offset inflation and negotiated salary increases would ensure the maintenance and excellence of school programs. This position can be extrapolated, according to Maloney, to cover town departments wherever possible.

Another reason for the position, Maloney said, is the potential return of large amounts of external money from otherwise unknown sources. "We're (the School Department) doing it now only as it comes to our attention," Maloney said. "We're up against communities more affluent than we are, who employ two or three individuals who do this type of work, and correspondingly they are setting up new programs."

Maloney believes the grantsman would return more than enough to the town to cover his own salary, but Selectman Henry Ainslie didn't quite agree. "That is the argument often given for that type of position," he said. In fact, the Selectmen seemed reluctant to take on a new position as they feared availability of grants is decreasing.

Maloney responded later, "I can't guarantee there would be a crop to harvest, but I have a very strong feeling that there's money there. We need a person who can ferret it out."

The position would be full-time with a twelve-month work year. Maloney's suggested salary was $14,000, benefits included $1,200 for travel expenses and parking, and $800 for more miscellaneous expenses, for a total of $16,000.

A two-year commitment to the position was proposed by Maloney in his outline to the School Committee. The first year would be devoted to reviewing legislation, literature, and making contacts — in short, discovering where and how grants are available. The second year would hopefully yield more money after the position had been researched.

Maloney said that he would be willing to oversee the grantsman for both the town and the School Department. It is his intent to house the employee in a school office and give general direction. The position would require, Maloney said, a person who is a go-getter, and who can devote his entire energies to reading, research and writing, and who is capable of being absent from the school system for several consecutive days if necessary.

By Joan Pinkham

At long last — March. Faced with blustery winds and the final throes of winter, what we don't need right now is another problem. Yet, sometimes it seems psychiatrists go out of their way to create neuroses for us. Now they warn that we all need lessons in how to use our leisure. Seems they're concerned that we might become bored, lonely or depressed.

One solution will, of course, cost money, for Constructive Leisure, a Los Angeles consulting firm, is making a business of showing their clients how to spend their free time wisely. Chances are, their first bit of advice would be to get a hobby.

Joan Smoot's interest in cooking began in her mother's kitchen when, as a girl, she was given a free hand as long as she cleaned up afterwards. The interest she developed has gone beyond the hobby stage to the point where she now presents small gourmet cooking classes in her Norwell home. Joan has just returned from a strenuous week of lessons at LaVarenne, a French cooking school.

"It's not a beginner type thing — they put you in the kitchen and with the help of interpreters, the chefs who come from all over France make you work like dogs," she says. These respected pros not only teach how to cook, but instill in their pupils the French people's love of good food. A full week of lessons found young people from all over Europe making pastries and preparing meat and fish. Joan will be looking for other enthusiasts to accompany her next year when she returns to Paris.

Volunteer work is always waiting in the wings for those with free time. Just a few hours a week can make a difference in your life as well as others. One of the by-products of volunteer work is being swept up in a common effort and sharing the work with others. If ever there was a supportive group, it was the one I chaired for the last Community League luncheon. Above and beyond the call of duty were the hours they spent preparing the Valentine Day's luncheon we served to 50 League members and guests. Eleanor Freeman's centerpieces, Hope Poor's marketing, Meri Paine's waitressing and Mary Kirkland's myriad duties were all appreciated. Esther Bailey did the dessert, Yvette Egelhoff the quiche and Marge Clark this molded salad — delicious all. This Cranberry Raspberry Salad Mold serves 12.

1 large pkg. [6 oz.] raspberry jello
1 small pkg. [3 oz.] lemon jello
2 c. boiling water
1 pkg. [10 oz.] frozen raspberries
1 jar, [14 oz.] cranberry orange relish
1 can, [1 lb. 4 oz.] crushed pineapple

Dissolve gelatine in boiling water. Add frozen raspberries and stir until melted. Add rest of ingredients and mix well. Pour into mold and chill until firm.

Getting the most satisfaction out of your free time means different things to different people. For some, escapism is getting lost in a good book, while to the more energetic, tennis, jogging, or racketball spell fun. To spend an evening with friends, enjoying each other's company and sharing a pleasant meal is always appealing and desserts such as Grace Carty's torte, can make any meal a pleasure. This serves 12 and may be made the day before, adding topping before serving.

1/2 c. sugar
1/4 c. butter or margarine
1 1/2 c. graham cracker crumbs
Line 13 X 9" pan with mix. Cream together:
2 eggs
1 [8 oz.] pkg. cream cheese, room temperature.
1/2 c. sugar
1 tsp. vanilla

Beat eggs, add cheese, sugar and vanilla, beating well. Spread over crust. Bake for 20 min. in 350 degree oven. Cool. Spread pie filling of your choice over top and chill well. Before serving, top with whipped cream.

Cong. Church Approves Record Budget

Members of Cohasset's Second Congregational Church have approved a record budget of $55,401 for 1979 following a successful Stewardship Program carried out by the Finance Committee of the church.

In its report to church members, the Finance Committee stated that details of the expenditures outlined in the budget were acceptable and that the total was capable of being met as a result of the successful Stewardship Program which enlisted 115 pledges from 218 members, many of whom are in a two-member household. Other congregation members make their contributions through Sunday offerings.

The budget represents an increase of approximately 10 percent over the prior year's budget and is an all-time high in the history of the 157-year-old church. It includes an allocation of $3,300 for general benevolences and missionary support in addition to individual contributions which may be made for such purposes.

Members of the Finance Committee are H. William Adams, Robert C. Jordan, Jr., and Geoffrey E. Nothnagle.

Other officers of the church for the current years are: Moderator and Chairman of the Church Committee, Philip C. Shockman; Clerk, Herbert B. Marsh; Treasurer, Mrs. Howard Bates; Assistant Treasurer, Arthur L. Lehr, Jr.; Financial Secretary, Mrs. Donald Haase; Assistant Financial Secretary, Mrs. Gordon Flint; Historian, David LeDoux; and Auditor, Gordon Flint.

We could become a society of prisons. If that 24-year old boy in Boulder, Colorado wins the suit against his mother and father for "malpractice of parenting," there'll be none of us loose.

The young man has charged his parents with neglect of his needs for clothing, food, shelter and psychological support "at critical periods." Who among us will not be incarcerated if this catches on.

The case hasn't been tried yet but it will be. Though it's too early to panic — plan which bunk we'll tease for in the cell, it's high time we recognize how vulnerable parents are.

No wonder fewer people are having children. The baby in the cradle could bring you to court. We're liable.

Watch for these legal pitfalls:

PATCHES

By Lois Martin

Your request to a child to take out the garbage may be in violation of the child labor law. "Borrowing" your daughter's skirt may result in a charge of grand theft, with additional penalities if you finally return it with a snagged zipper.

A mere misdemeanor may come of your using the teenager's name brand shampoo, especially if the cheap store brand was available to you.

Your insistence on using the bathroom when your son's been in there for three-quarters of an hour may be a violation of his privacy.

The child whose croup turned into pneumonia might decide to sue his mother for ineffective medical treatment. (Mind you he probably was jumping up and down in puddles with his sneakers on between the illnesses.)

A neglect suit could be brought by a 13 year old if his parents went to an R movie and refused to take him along.

The judge might determine parents had failed to provide proper clothing if the third child shows up in court with the jacket handed down from his oldest brother.

The child who believes he's had to do more housework than his siblings might pursue litigation on complaints of unfair labor practices within the home.

If your little girl is refused new jeans because she doesn't need them, a d you meanwhile have bought a pair for her brother, she may charge "You don't love me." Prepare for an alienation of affection suit.

When children appeal their case before you in a show cause hearing saying, "Everybody else gets to stay out till 11," and you still refuse permission, you may have denied their basic human rights, constitutionally guaranteed.

Don't send them to their rooms without supper; don't threaten to wash their mouths out with soap; don't make them take a bath. You don't need a charge of cruel and abusive treatment lodged against you.

And for goodness sake, don't force a teenager to take his younger brother or sister with him to the movies or there'll be two warrants out for your arrest.

But hold on before you answer those charges. If the case of the child against the parent has merit, is there not warrant for a countersuit. What child reared within the history of mothers and fathers has met all expectations (on the report card); filled all commitments (to clean his room); kept all promises (to stay out of trouble).

I know one woman who said, "I still don't have my children doing what I want them to do." And her babies are full-fledged adults. What's the charge for failure to follow the path in life your parents outlined for you? Is there a breach of promise action parents will pursue if they drop out of college or don't pass an exam?

Can a father sue a son if he can't use his own car anymore and gets it back only when the gas tank is empty? Shall parents and children take one another to court for embarrassment they cause one another? A mother could sue the child for humiliation if he slurps his food in a restaurant. And he could file suit when she tells everyone about it.

But we musn't do this. Being a family member carries an inherent responsibility to tolerate one another. You have to show mercy when someone eats all the meat that was for supper. And if it's privacy one hankers there's little in an active family.

Who would be the judge in courts where children and parents tried one another. The judge himself would be vulnerable if he had been either a child or a parent. So would the jury. Surely an "Amicus Curiae" (Friend of the Court) would remind us we're pretty lucky for the most part and should be acquitted from guilt.

Let the evidence show that for every time we're entitled to complain, there are countless days we owe a vote of thanks to family members. Few of us owe one another apologies in court otherwise for what we've tried to do in growing and in being grown. The basic law governing family behavior is simply to love one another. Happiness is dependent on the wise application of that law. And it's one of the few that can't be legislated or enforced. It's only a gift, from parents to children.

What we don't need is a prison for parents with visitation rights from the children's jail on Sundays. Besides there'd be no paperboy to deliver the Sunday paper and no Dad to drive him in foul weather.

Two Hats Officially In Selectman Ring

Two candidates — Lester Hiltz and Glenn Pratt — are officially in the race for the single seat on the Board of Selectmen in Town Elections Saturday, April 14. Three others — George Adams, Rocco Langelle and Doris Golden — all have taken out nomination papers but haven't formally established their candidacy. Profiles of Hiltz and Pratt follow:

Lester B. Hiltz of 9 Cushing Road has announced his candidacy for the three-year term on the Board of Selectmedn.

In his first bid for office last year for Selectman against a very strong and popular incumbent, Hiltz received over 25% of the vote. This was a significant endorsement for Hiltz to again seek the office.

As a resident of over 36 years, Hiltz relates with many townspeople who are deeply concerned about the perplexing issues having serious overtones of a personal or political nature.

He is competing for the Selectmen's post because of his sincere interest in the growth and development and general direction in which the town is headed. In this regard, he offers a good common sense approach to solving the numerous problems, deciding the sensitive issues, and planning for Cohasset's future.

Hiltz served for 20 years in the U.S. Air Force and is now seeking to serve his community.

With his formal training and years of experience as an Air Force Communica-

Glenn A. Pratt, Chairman of the town's Planning Board and active in Cohasset town affairs for the past 10 years, has announced his candidacy for a three-year term as Cohasset Selectman to succeed State Representative Mary Jeannette Murray who is not running for re-election.

"I am a candidate for Selectman because I believe that my background of education, past service to the Town and business experience will enable me to help significantly in the management of town affairs," Pratt stated.

Pratt is a life-long resident of Cohasset, graduated from Cohasset High School and attended Northeastern University while employed with W.C. Vaughan Co., Boston, a builders' hardware supply firm.

In 1973, he became a co-owner of Suburban Contract Cleaning Co. of which he is now vice president in charge of its operations. The firm, with headquarters in Weymouth, employs 400 persons and provides cleaning, custodial and maintenance service to a large number of bank offices and industrial and commer-

A Distinguished Season Finally Ends

Midnight came early Tuesday for Cohasset High's basketball team.

The Cinderella Skippers' waltz through the Division III South Tournament was ended by Boston's Cathedral High, as Cohasset lost 44 to 54 in the semi-finals.

Mark Goff led the scoring with 12 points followed by seniors John Howley and Matt Salerno with 11 points each.

Cohasset ended its finest season ever with a 17 and 6 record.

Local 766 Gets High Marks

The School Department received high commendations this week from the Division of Special Education for meeting all the requirements outlined by Chapter 766 for special needs students.

The report was the culmination of a two-day monitoring of Cohasset's special needs programs and activities. In mid-January, the review team interviewed and observed those involved in the special education program to determine whether compliance with state requirements had been met.

Those interviewed were staff members who had prepared the program plan, randomly selected regular and special education professional staff members, and randomly selected parents.

Random reviews were taken of special needs students' files as well as of structural and staffing arrangements to deliver special education services.

It was determined that 74 categories within seven areas of the District's Annual Program Plan — Child Identification, TEAM Evaluation, Services, Facilities, Transportation, Personnel and Personnel Development, Finance — has been fulfilled by the School Department.

The review team cited the exemplary results of the team teaching approach which afforded the children an opportunity to attend regular classes while receiving instruction and attention from a special educator, and the overall resourcefulness and professional zeal of the special education staff as a whole.

A special accolade was extended to

Alcohol Program Includes Students

By Judith Epstein

The alcohol education program sponsored by the South Shore Council on Alcoholism and implemented by the Social Service League, has recently introduced a new segment for high school students — Alcohol Drug Alternative (ADA).

Dr. Max Munro of Cohasset, a psychologist for the Council and man-in-charge of this portion of the program, explained that ADA's title stands for the ideas he hopes will become instilled in the students. That is, that life offers alternatives which will more than fill the need to get high from alcohol. It is essentially a prevention program.

ADA classes and meetings are held solely in-school on Mondays and Wednesdays and are financed by a three-year grant from the Dept. of Mental Health for $10,000 annually, unlike the other components of the alcohol education program which are financed this year by money given to the Social Service League by Turn-Off Drugs, Inc. (TOD).

ADA didn't always meet within the walls of the high school. Dr. Munro worked all last year in many towns along the South Shore — outside of schools — with young people who were, for the most part, already involved with alcohol and drugs.

"ADA was originally designed to take an intervention program to these kids," Munro said. "We were supposed to cover the whole South Shore."

Instead weekly meetings wound up at St. Luke's Church in Scituate where they received the biggest reception, as many as 30 or 40 youths regularly attended. Other meeting places were supplied by churches in Hingham and Cohasset, but aside from the gatherings in Scituate, youths who were in need of the program or who were court referrals were visited individually, sometimes in barrooms and automobiles.

The Scituate meetings consisted of small group talks, what Munro termed "reality therapy." While the idea of the program seemed to be helping a large number of people, Munro said, they couldn't receive any real therapeutic counseling.

Grant manager Debra Munves of the Dept. of Mental Health suggested that Munro's team focus on containing the program within Scituate and Cohasset

Code, Plans, Need Deciphering

A tangled web still clings to the fate of the Town Hall and its proposed renovation.

Last week, in an effort to solve the puzzle of whether or not the Town Hall can be renovated at all or, as proposed by Donham and Sweeney Architects for the Town Offices Space Study Committee, two meetings are held to unravel the mysteries of the Building Code.

The Town Hall was recently certified by both the State Building Code Commission and the Massachusetts Historic Commission as a partially preserved building. A battle has since ensued between Building Inspector James Litchfield and Architect Donham concerning the section of the Code which governs the change in use.

Litchfield claims that building's certification precludes any change in use and occupancy; Donham believes the building is now exempt from certain requirements of the Basic Code. On Tuesday, Litchfield, Donham, Chairman of the Study Committee Daniel Cotton and State Building Inspector Jospeh DiCicco

July 1980 Target Date

Police Chief Selection Goals Set

The Police Chief Selection Committee snapped into action last week after Chief Feola's plans to retire were determined. Their proposed plan for the next 17 months was approved by Selectmen.

The Committee informed Selectmen that Feola's planned retirement date of July 28, 1980, the day he will become 65 years old, is their "target date" for the completion of the police chief selection process. This process includes both the Committee's work in providing the Board of Selectmen with the names of three candidates for the post, and the Selectmen's final selection of a new chief.

The plan formulated by the Selection Committee was submitted by Chairman John Benbov for the Selectmen's perusal; it outlines the Committee's procedures in the search for candidates:

The Committee's first step was to meet with Selectmen, Chief Feola, and Town Counsel Blake Thaxter, as well as consulting a wide range of sources to better understand the role of chief of police.

A government document, 'Police Chief Executive,' has been the most instructive source in aiding the Committee's understanding of their task and establishing their procedures. A copy of the document is available at the public library for community reference.

Whether the new police chief should come from within or outside the Police Department is an open issue with the Committee.

The Committtte is currently seeking the opinions and insights of the townspeople, the Police Department, other town departments and elected officials concerning the job of police chief. The Committee isn't concerned with an assessment of the management of the Department under the current chief, but rather invites the community to express its aspirations and expectations for a future chief.

Following Town Meeting, the Committee will initiate a series of open meetings to provide a forum for public discussion.

The Committee intends to maintain frequent communication with Selectmen in order to provide them with information they will need in selecting a new chief.

Committee members Rev. John Benbow, Chairman, John Keefe, Margaret Lynch, Richard Silvia, and John Thompson, offer the following tentative schedule, barring unforseen change in Feola's retirement date:

—Oct., 1978 - March 1979: Preliminary study.

—April, 1979 - June 1979: Solicitation of community input through interviews, open meetings and letters.

—Sept., 1979 - March 1980: Formal selection procedure; interviews with applicants.

—Early spring, 1980: Submission of the names of three qualified candidates, of whom the Selectmen will choose one to serve as Chief of Police when the position becomes open in July 1980.

Chairman Golden Steps Down After Six Year Stay

Doris Golden, Chairman of the School Committee, announced at Monday night's meeting that she would not be seeking reelection to the board.

"It took six long hard years to realize that we all want the same common denominator," she said, "a good education for our children." Mrs. Golden has served the committee for two terms and was elected chairman for five of those years.

"This is not a happy occassion," Mrs. Golden said as she noted the many memories she will bring away with her retirement. She extended her appreciation to Supt. John Maloney and the school administration and her hope that future members will enjoy their work.

Supt. Maloney commended Mrs. Golden on her courtesy, objectivity and sincerity and expressed regret and sadness at losing such an experienced member.

Stephen Hart, administrator of Special Education in Cohasset, whose leadership and efforts to involve and support parents of special needs children, the review team stated, has insured their investment in their child's progress in the Cohasset Public Schools.

Superintendent John Maloney praised Hart and the School Committee for their contribution to the department's success. "We are doing what we should be doing for the town as well as what is outlined to us by statute," he said. "The whole school system comes out with a bouquet of roses."

Hiltz

tions Superintendent, Hiltz has the necessary managerial, administrative and leadership background to perform effectively all of the duties and responsibilities of a Selectman.

Being semi-retired, he has ample time as well as the desire to work diligently for the Town.

As Director of Civil Defense and Emergency Preparedness and Director of the Auxiliary Police Unit, Hiltz has demonstrated by his actions, particularly during the Blizzard of 1978, that he is a capable and responsible individual. Over the years in the above capacity, he has become thoroughly familar with the operations of all Town Departments; and he believes that in the interest of good town management, the need exists for a closing working relationship between the Selectmen and the Department Heads at the department level.

Through his experience in the building trades and knowledge of the topography of the town, Hiltz has the capability to make prudent decisions on matters relative to the building codes, health rules and regulations and zoning laws including the controversial proposals regarding the Sewerage Treatment Plant and Town Hall.

As a civic minded and involved citizen, he realizes the importance of appointing competent people with the Town's best interest truly in mind as members of the various boards and committees.

By his nature alone, Hiltz has willingly and unselfishly helped his fellow neighbors, young and old, and sincerely welcomes the opportunity to assist his townspeople as a Selectman.

Hiltz, his wife Barbara (Dion) and their daughters, Donna and Darlene, all attended Cohasset schools. In addition, Hiltz attended the University of Maryland and University of the Philippines.

He is a member of the American Legion, George H. Mealy Post 118 and Veterans of Foreign Wars, Satuit Post 3169.

cial facilities in the Greater Boston and Southeastern Massachusetts areas.

Pratt served in the Mass. National Guard, achieving the rank of First Lieutenant, and for three years was aide to the Commanding General.

His town service began in 1969 as chairman of the Veterans' Memorial Committee which developed the Memorial at Cohasset Harbor opposite the Legion Post.

He was a member of the Town's Personnel Committee and the By-Law Study Committee in 1970 and is a member of the Committee to Study Central Purchasing and chairman of the Village Study Committee. He has been a member of the Planning Board since 1976 and became Chairman last year.

In other civic activities, Pratt was an Eagle Scout with Scout Troop 28 of Cohasset, is currently on the Scouts' Sustaining Membership Committee and is past vice president of the Cohasset Jaycees.

He and his wife, the former Kathleen Mulcahy, live at 482 King St., and are parents of a daughter, Megan.

School Committee Favors Reduced Board Size

The School Committee voted 3-2 Monday night to support a reduction of the board from six to five members.

Chairman Doris Golden explained that she had led the citizen's petition endorsing such a change which was submitted as an article in the town warrant. Several School Committee members had signed the petition, she said.

This week the board was asked by Richard Silvia of South Main Street to state their feelings about the change, so that he could report back to the Committee to Study Town Government Structure which was meeting the same evening.

A motion was made to support the reduction in number of members. Golden said that she had surveyed the school committees of surrounding towns and found that most had five members, one had seven, and another would have more than five. She noted that in the years she had served, the number of six members had often been questioned, and that stalemated votes that had occurred had been frustrating.

Committee member Josephine Mahoney said that more members on a committee doesn't necessarily insure better representation and that often they are cumbersome in decision making. Member John Langmaid disagreed, "An even number of members forces a compromise, a one person majority in a five member board isn't strong enough." He added that the School Committee shouldn't be required to vote formally on the matter.

Committee member Pat Walsh said that the vote should come on the Town Meeting floor and needn't come from the School Committee at all. It was agreed that an informal poll of the committee members was all that was required to inform the Study Committee of their decision, but because a motion had been made and seconded, a vote had to be taken.

met at the Town Hall to discuss this major disagreement concerning Section 429 (historic buildings) of the Building Code.

All agreed that the factor of the building's safety was their greatest interest, Donham said, but the meeting ended at an impasse when the matter of the Code couldn't be resolved among them. The next day they sought guidance from Paul Moriarty, Chief Counsel for the State Building Code Commission and David MacArtney, a staff engineer for the Commission, procedures were set for the continued review of the renovation plan.

Litchfield said it was decided that the Study Committee must first obtain approval of the completed version of the reno vation plan from the state Historic Commission. If their plan is approved, it is passed on to Litchfield for further review.

"Section 429 is still in question," Litchfield said. "They (the Committee) have a lot of obstacles to get over within that Code book. I can't commit myself until I have a complete set of structural drawings."

Donham said that the plan is essentially the same now as it was when it was last publically proposed. The changes it has undergone include the enlargment of the offices of the Selectmen, the Selectmen's Clerk, and the Town Clerk, as well as the moving of the conference room so that it adjoins a narrow file room.

Donham said that he was confident the proposed plan would be compatible with the Historic Commission's opinion on the changing of the Town Hall. The exterior of the building, the portion that most concerns the Historic Commission, Donham said, would be left almost the same, with the exception of an access ramp on the parking lot side.

Should the plan be forwarded to Litchfield, Donham said, a written amendment will be included describing the plan's fire safety features and interpretations of applicable portions of the Building Code. Litchfield will then be required to respond in writing as to whether he agrees to the plan or not.

If all goes well, there will be a meeting with the Historic Commission at the end of this week to discuss approval of the plan. If disagreement ensues thereafter, a resolution will be sought from the State Building Code Commission once agan.

Water Complaints Down But One Trickles In

The number of water complaints has vastly decreased in Cohasset since late fall and early winter, but one more trickled past Selectmen last week.

Majorie Anderson of Brewster Road stated that for over three months the water in her home has been deplorable and that numerous individuals in the same situation have received negative responses to their requests for help or an answer to the problem.

Anderson claimed that she had to wait several weeks for a repairman to replace her tankless water heater coil, which cost $45 because so many other Cohasset calls of the same nature monopolized repair services. She noted that her water bill for 1978 cost $266, which she sound "an exhorbitant price for such poor service."

Edwin Pratt, Superintendent of the Water Department, responded early this week to Anderson's complaints. There have been marked improvements in the water system over the last few months, he said, with little or no complaints.

The water system's woes of discoloration and presence of sediments in the water have been attributed to the reversal of flows from the installation of the new water treatment plant last spring, the January draining of the town's standpipe and the antiquated pipelines within the system.

"Every attempt has been made to answer every individual call," Pratt said, but noted that emergency calls during the cold spell were answered first.

Pratt couldn't find any record of Anderson having called the Water Department. As for the cost of her water bill he had no comment, because he had no way of knowing what her water needs were.

Pratt added that state public health chemists are satisfied with Cohasset's water.

Any problems associated with the system, are all a part of the transition to the treatment plant and reservoir, he said.

Foster's Car

MBTA Director Robert Foster, who's not yet the darling of the Boston press, was embroiled in another controversy last week, this time over his $7000 car that came equipped with a trailer hitch. It was bought with "T," i.e. public money.

The sharpshooters are off target this time. As a high-ranking official who is paid less than his peers in the private sector, Foster is as entitled to a state car as much as any other chief in the King Administration. And the trailer hitch is nothing to get apoplectic about.

This particular tempest in a teapot is interesting only because it points ouit that Foster, despite being the administration's principal advocate of public transportation, needs a state car to get to work. As a resident of the South Shore who contributes tax dollars to the ballooning MBTA deficit without receiving an iota of service in return, he is part of the unwilling expressway mob that chugs in and out of Boston everyday.

After a few months of chugging under the worst driving conditions in Massachusetts, he may be inclined to push harder for "T" service to the South Shore. And if that happens, his car with trailer hitch will wind up a drop in the bucket.

School Board Size

Cohasset voters would do well to favor the article in the town meeting warrant calling for a reduction in the size of the School Committee from six to five members.

Action by the committee has been hampered in the past by having six members when three-three ties have arisen and nothing can be done one way or the other.

When the committee is dealing with a multi-million dollar budget and making policies that affect all Cohasset public school children, it is imperative the board have more decisiveness built into its structure.

It's true that with a five-member committee that every third year only one seat is up for grabs, but that would seem to make little difference if the overall operating efficiency of the committee were to be improved by the change.

Intrinsically Valuable Building

Letters

To the Editor:

On the premise that the Town Hall, as a partially preserved building, will meet mandatory safety and other requirements of the State Building Code, I would like to suggest that this intrinsically valuable and strategically located historic edifice continue as the home of our Town government. This is important to us and to future generations.

The decision we are facing is not peculiar to Cohasset. Many, in fact probably most, towns in New England have 19th or early 20th century town halls, post offices, churches, libraries etc. Many of these structures were designed by leading architects, built by competent men with top grade materials and placed in strategic locations. As stated in a recent article, these buildings "express the best aspirations of our ancestors who built them and they are part of our continuity as a culture and as a nation."

Recycling should result in a completely modern interior combined with the richness of an historic shell and in this way the result is the best of both worlds.

The key in this regard is to be constantly aware of the intrinsic value that we have and avoid the mistake of discarding that value under the guise of potentially greater efficiency.

Let us not overlook or minimize the irreplaceable values of such civic structures.

Health Board Needs 3rd Member

To the Editor:

After 14 years of dedicated service to the Town of Cohasset, Rene Chiasson has decided not to run for reelection to the Board of Health. Rene has been an invaluable servant of the Town for the last 14 years — invaluable for his professional plumbing experience and invaluable for his practical insight into Board of Health matters. Dr. Stephen O'Connor and I will surely miss his very commonsense approaches to Board of Health problems.

At the time of this writing, I am given to understand that to date there have been no papers filed for nomination to his soon to-be-vacated position. It is essential to the democratic workings of the Board of Health that we have a third member in order to present the diversification of ideas and cast that all important deciding vote.

Although the qualifications for election to this post is left entirely to the voters, I would suggest that the common working knowledge of a plumber or engineer would be an essential addition to the Board's present composition, i.e. two working physicians.

I would encourage any person who might have these qualifications, and who can devote every second and fourth Monday evening to civic responsibilities, to get out and run for this position. It has been my experience that the members of the Board of Health and the Health Agent are a cooperative body, being in a position to assist the people of Cohasset, with an attitude that we are elected to serve the people and not to present obstacles to their plans.

To the person who feels he is qualified to fill this position, I can almost guarantee a very rewarding three-year experience, and if you are good, and if you are lucky, perhaps the voters will return you also for 14 years.

Sincerely,
Roger A. Pompeo, M.D.

Combine Gas & Plumbing Jobs

A suggestion that the positions of gas and plumbing inspector be performed by one person was logged at the Selectmen's meeting last week.

Building Inspector James Litchfield complained that gas inspector Nelson Patrolia and plumbing inspector Charles Patrolia failed to keep accurate accounts of inspections and that one of the men has been keeping records at his home. Litchfield said that he is responsible for the performance of these duties and that inspection records should be kept in his office.

Litchfield also noted only six inspections have been taken since the beginning of the year and that one of the men is rarely in town while going to school. When asked by Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray if he was pleased with the job done by the present inspectors, Litchfield replied that he was not.

Assistant Building Inspector Donald Clark remarked, "You need two inspectors, but the same person should be both the plumbing and gas inspector with an alternate to take over for the regular inspector.

Clark's comments met with approval, and Litchfield said he will check with the Patrolia brothers to determine if they are still willing and available to handle the jobs. The Patrolias have failed to attend two meetings arranged to discuss the matter.

"If they don't have the time to put in with the new state requirements," Litchfield said, "I will attempt to have another arrangement made."

CHS Jazz Ensemble To Participate In Jazz Festival

The CHS Jazz Ensemble under the direction of Anthony Hyde is scheduled to participate in the 11 annual Jazz Ensemble Festival at Berklee College of Music April 28th. The Festival consists of clinics and workshops and will end with a concert at the Berklee Performing Center by the finalists competing for the best band trophy. Citation award and $5,000 in tuition scholarships for study in music will be awarded.

In the Kiwanis International Youth Hockey Tournament, the Norwell-Scituate-Cohasset PeeWees won an 8-1 victory over Neponset. Dave Hoitt and Joe Hoffman scored two goals apiece and put the game away early with five first period goals. Tim Curran, Tim Whitlock, Jeff Neville and Rick Martin also scored during the sixth annual traditional tournament.

In the 5-6 Grade open space classroom at the Deer Hill School, the students presented 27 hand-made story books to the first grade students of the Joseph Osgood School. Supervised by their teachers, Joanne Magoun and Lawrence Shultz, the pupils in a month long project, composed, proofread, drafted, set up galley copies, colored, printed, laminated and bound the books. Each book was about two inches thick and ring-bound. On presentation day, the students enacted skits in costume for the first graders to guess the titles. Presentations were also made with sock puppets and scroll theatres.

A birthday luncheon was hosted by Marie Johnston of Fair Oaks Road for Linda Holloran on Monday last. Attending were Helen Berrigan, Roberta Raffa, Elaine Stannard, Sally Toppan, Jane White, Sally Woods and Ellen Woolf.

The mood will be informal and the event is a good opportunity for those not familiar with the Art Center to become acquainted with its members, plans and programs. For further information, call the above number during office hours which are 12-4 Monday through Friday.

Mrs. George Gurnis of Cohasset is in charge of the supper; artists Virginia Avery of Marshfield and Mary Smith of Pembroke are in charge of the exhibit with assistance from Children's teachers Marcy Baskin and Syma Komarin; artists Liz Crosby of Cohasset and Carolyn Rayburn of Hingham are in charge of the opening reception.

Members interested in league bowling may contact Jim Drysdale at 383-6661 or Daniel O'Connell at the center.

schools. They went to Scituate High first because of the previous year's high turnout at the beginning of the school year, where the program was accepted by the School Committee. Fortified by the success of Scituate's program, Munro approached the Cohasset School Committee in mid-January with a similar proposal. It was unanimously accepted.

For the time being, Munro said, the focus of the program is on the Jr./Sr. high school students. Munro and part-time staff, Annette Marquis and CETA workers Pat Martek, John Gibbons and Mark Bartoloni have established largely two parts to the ADA program — "awareness" sessions which invite large numbers of students and teachers to attend films and video tapes on announced topics and "in-class" visits which are in return extended to Munro's team.

"This type of program starts out slowly," Munro said, "but once the administration says you can have a pass to go down to the auditorium during a study or when a teacher allows a class to come down, it mushrooms." ADA sessions are not mandatory, he added.

Al MacDonald, director of the Alternative School, Munro said, has been a tremendous help in introducting ADA sessions into the classroom and next week Munro will visit MacDonald's classes. Munro explained that when ADA is invited into the classroom, a topic is designed to fit the class. For instance, last week Paul Deignan of the Council and director of the 'Troubled Employee' program there, spoke to Doris Lahage's business class on working and drinking.

'Elm Street,' a popular film depicting a young girl who grows up in an alcoholic family, is a good example, Munro said, of a program that not only opens up discussion but also supplies teachers with topics to which students can respond in writing.

Within ADA individual counseling is offered students referred by the guidance department. Munro or his staff may speak with these students once and then further counseling must be approved by parents. Talks with students often remain informal or "on the radiators," Munro said laughingly, that is in the corridors, cafeterias and smoking courtyards.

"The school administration gives us pretty free rein," Munro said. "We're neither fish nor foul, and that's a good position to be in. We're a private agency and we have earned the right to be in the school. We are in the school, not of it. We have been very well received."

So far, Munro said, he has seen the benefits of ADA in the willingness of the students to come to sessions without prodding. And in several instances, family involvement with other portions of the alcohol education program has resulted from the child's interest in school.

Watercolor Workshop

A special Watercolor Workshop taught by Virginia Avery is enrolling now for Saturday, March 17 at the South Shore Art Center.

The intensive session will start at 9:30 with a brief demonstration of watercolor techniques by the instructor to be followed by a painting session with guidance and critique for the participants. This is designed for beginning, intermediate and advanced students who should come with supplies and ready to paint. The half-day session will end at 12:30 but another workshop will be offered later in the Spring if there is sufficient demand.

Ms. Avery is a well-known watercolorist who has exhibited widely on the South Shore and in the Boston area and is a frequent prize winner. She is a graduate of Massachusetts College of Art and teaches at the North River Arts Association, the South Shore Art Center and privately in her own studio.

Peter Sterling Guest Speaker At Hist Society

Peter Sterling, director of the USS Constitution Museum in Charlestown, will be the featured speaker at a dinner meeting of the Cohasset Historical Society.

The meeting will be held in Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House Tuesday evening, March 27. The public is invited and reservations at $5 may be made by calling Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, Historical Society president, at 383-0773.

The new museum has been established in buildings of the former U.S. Navy Yard in Charlestown to house relics of the famous naval vessel which is berthed there, as well as other mementoes of the early days of the Yard and Boston's marine heritage.

It was established several years ago when the Navy discontinued the Yard and a citizens' group determined that a wealth of artifacts associated with the vessel and the Yard should be preserved and displayed. The museum thus became a part of a developing complex of institutions at the Yard giving a historic panorama of Boston in the early days of the nation.

The Cohasset Historical Society itself maintains three museums in the Village Center, including a Maritime Museum which displays a great many artifacts and mementoes of Cohasset's maritime history.

Clothing Sale March 17

Another unique clothing sale will be held Saturday March 17 from 10 to 2 at the Mormon Church, 379 Gardner St., Hingham. These clothes, all new, from a nationally known sportswear house, are in Jr. Miss and small Misses sizes only. Some are imperfects but are repairable.

For more details call Polly Doggett at 383-1847.

Cohasset Skippers Land In Tournament Semis

By Steve MacQuarrie

Cohasset arrived in the tournament semifinals with a pair of contrasting wins over Diman Vocational and Martha's Vineyard. Tuesday's first-round victory over the Fall River trade school was largely decided by halftime as the Skippers, behind the unconscious shooting of junior Mark Goff, outscored the Benglas 16-4 in a 3 minute second quarter stretch.

That gave Cohasset a 42-26 halftime lead which they expanded to 69-44 in the fourth quarter to remove all doubts as to the outcome. Co-captain Matt Salerno led all scorers with 16 points, followed by Goff's 14 (in less than 4 minutes) and senior John Howley's 12.

Friday's quarterfinal win was as feverish as the previous game was temperate. For the first 20 minutes, Martha's Vineyard looked no tougher than Diman, despite the islander's sparkling 18-2 record. Shooting at an ordinary (for them) 55 percent accuracy rate, the Skippers ran off to a 30-19 half-time lead.

Midway through the third period, Martha's Vineyard began to pressure the Skippers more, using 9 third quarter Cohasset turnovers as the springboard to 13 straight points and a 40-40 tie early in the last quarter.

Cohasset had gone through similar late game clumsy spells in losses to Middleboro and Duxbury, and the specter of history repeating itself must have loomed in their minds. "I believed they'd come through, though," reflected coach John LeVangie after the game. "I just felt that the monentum would swing back at us. I told the kids to be patient — and they were."

Indeed. Six times Martha's Vineyard scored in the last period (4 of them on offensive rebounds). And six times Cohasset came back with a basket, the last one being a driving layup by co-captain Paul Farren that dropped through the net with 4 seconds left after the Skippers had calmly stalled away 42 of the last 46 seconds. "We'd run that play off the stall over and over in practice," said LeVangie, "but you never know how it'll work out in a game until you have to use it." Cohasset was also fortunate that Martha's Vineyard missed 6 of 8 foul shots in the last quarter and 12 of 20 overall.

Farren and fellow co-captain Salerno had 12 points apiece. The balanced Skipper attack also had Goff and Howley in double figures with 11 each while senior Brian Keating added 7, 5 in the hectic final period.

Sheehan Finishes Second

Edward Sheehan Jr., chairman of the History Department at CHS finished second in the Heptagonal 500 meter race at Dartmouth College on Saturday evening, February 24th. The senior philosophy major at Harvard College posted a time of 14 minutes 35 seconds in the gruelling three mile race in Dartmouth's Leverone Field House. Ten Ivy League Colleges were competing.

Sheehan travelled to Princeton, N.J. as one of Harvard's two-milers in the IC4A meet last weekend. In the recent Greater Boston Indoor Track Championship Meet, he finished second in the two-mile event with a time of 8 minutes 48 seconds.

A strong distance runner, Sheehan has won his Varsity "H" at Harvard in cross country, indoor track, and spring track for the past two years. Last season he won the coveted Helmus Award naming him one of Harvard's most improved trackmen.

Pack 38 Treating At Aquarium

Cub Scout Pack 38 will treat cubs, drivers and den chiefs to a field trip at the New England Aquarium, March 17. The trip is being financed from proceeds of pen set sales.

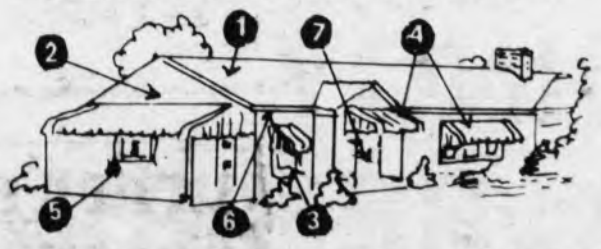
Cubs and den chiefs should meet at the Deer Hill School at 8:45 a.m.

The next committee meeting will be March 25, 7:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House.

The annual Pinewood Derby race is scheduled for March 28, at 7 p.m. in the Town Hall. Parents should note the time change due to the race.

During the January pack meeting Den III presented the flag ceremony and under the guidance of den leader Susan Twofoot also presented a humorous barbershop skit. In addition they earned the Eagle Award for uniform inspection.

Also displayed were coat hangers and letter openers made by Den I and wooden key holders made by Den VII.



Merle Brown, Pack Chairman, explained how the Pinewood Derby model should be made and he set up the track for a trial run with last year's model so new cubs and their families could be familiar with the derby.

Awards went to: Larry Desmond, a silver arrow; Christian Richard, Jamie Davenport, Heath Larson, John Grant and Craig Martin, Bobcat badges.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

When lettuce sells for 99 cents a head because of a labor strike and hamburg costs skyrocket, it's time either to stop eating, cry, or resort to Yankee ingenuity. Seen coping in true pioneer fashion was a hardy little group braving the soggy beach sands after last week's nor'easter. Quahogs were theirs for the taking at low tide and, just as the early colonists discovered, there's nothing like New England Clam Chowder. The natives sometimes call it "chowdy," but actually, the word "chowder" derives from the French "chaudiere," meaning pot or kettle and "chaud," meaning hot. Here's how it goes.

1/4 lb. salt pork, diced
2 medium-sized onions, diced
3 c. potatoes, diced
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
2 c. boiling water
1 qt. clams (or ground quahogs) with liquor
1 qt. milk
2 T butter
1 pt. light cream

Cook salt pork in pan until crisp. Remove pork and add onions, potatoes, salt and pepper. Saute 10 min. Cover with water and simmer 15 min. Add clams and their liquor. Cook 20 min. Add milk, butter and cream. Heat and serve.

Hank Dunbar, owner of the Brant Rock Fish Market, has quahogs for those who shun the gusty, raw winds along the beach. Like a true Yankee, nothing goes to waste in his emporium. Fish frames for making a good stew are yours for the asking. You might want to ask him to introduce you to some of the less popular types of fish like tautog, cusk and pollack - so good for chowder. Quahog fritters are delicious in place of meat in your dinner menu.

1 pt. quahogs — chop fine
1 small onion, chop fine
1 egg, slightly beaten
1/2 tsp. baking powder
Pinch of salt and pepper

Add enough flour to make batter consistency of whipped cream, mixing well, thinning with quahog liquor. Drop into piping hot frying pan, using bacon fat, Crisco or Spry. Do not use deep fat. Fry slowly.

Usually about now our thoughts turn to the joys of fresh vegetables and fruits. But now we learn the California strikes probably will affect the price of carrots, broccoli, asparagus and melons. Before a Yankee Pot Roast is priced out of sight, let's all try Sharon Cadwallader's recipe which goes like this.

1 1/2 lb. section of pot roast [more if desired]
2T flour
3 T oil
1 small yellow onion
Salt and pepper
1/2 tsp. thyme
1 c. beef broth
2 large carrots
1 large potato
1 small turnip

Sprinkle meat lightly with flour and brown in deep, heavy pot.

Quarter onion and set on top of meat. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and thyme. Pour over beef broth and cover. Simmer for 1 1/2 hours, then add a little water. Liquid should be kept about 1/2". Add carrots and simmer for 30 min. Add potato and turnip. Simmer another 20 min.

Runnery Clinic For School Runners

The Runnery of Hanover will sponsor a free clinic for all high school track competitors. The program, which is to feature a film and a panel of four speakers, will begin at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 8th in the Norwell High School Auditorium. Names will be drawn for door prizes including shoes and T-shirts.

Randy Thomas, fifth place finisher in last year's Boston Marathon, will be on hand to speak. Randy's marathon time of 2:11:25 ranked him eighth among the world's best marathoners. He represented the U.S. in the summer of 1978 in a track meet against the Russians, and will represent the U.S. again this coming spring in the international cross-country championships in Ireland.

Bob Hodge, who works at the Runnery, will also speak. Bob holds the record in the wellknown Mt. Washington Race. He finished fourth in the 1979 national 10 KM road race championships, as well as fourth in last year's Labatt's Freedom Trail Road Race. Bob was eighth place finisher in the 1978 Falmouth Road Race.

Charlotte Lettis, 1978 champion in the New England indoor mile will be present to offer some tips to the girls. Her recordtime of 4:44.04 set at the Harvard indoor track remains the best today. Charlotte won the New York City Bonne Bell in 1975 and finished fourth in the Boston Bonne Bell 1977. She is a four time winner of the New England Cross-Country Championships. Charlotte will lend some of the expertise gained in her many years of coaching women's cross-country and track teams of 1977 and 19789.

Joh Macik, a sports physiologist, will be present to discuss running injuries: their prevention and possible cures. Joh did his graduate work at the Human Performance Lab at Ball State University, where he obtained his master's degree. He currently works as an exercise physiologist for New Balance Athletic Shoes, Inc. He is also a sports physiology consultant for the XIII Winter Olympics, Lake Placid.

The evening promises to provide plenty of inspiration to get the 1979 spring track season off to a proper start. With the use of a 500 seat auditorium, the Runnery hopes to see all area teams well represented.

SAFETY FIRST — Noel Ripley, left, and Joseph Hamilton check how to keep town records safe in vault.

Town Records Get A New Home

Town records — largely the historic or "permanent" papers kept at the Town Hall — are about to inhabit a new home.

A vault for town papers was recently completed at CHS in a room beneath the cafeteria near the old Civil Defense headquarters.

Town Archivist and Historical Commissioner Joe Hamilton explained that the vaults at the Town Hall, located on each floor ensconced within the structure of the building's brick chimney, were inadequately safeguarding the town's oldest records. Furthermore, the vaults weren't in compliance with state requirements for the keeping of permanent records.

Hamilton started sorting through town records in 1977 and determined a new location for their safekeeping was needed. His discovery of the original 1770 Town Charter and a December 1776 copy of the Declaration of Independence italicized this need.

A vote by Town Meeting two years ago supplied the money to rehabilitate the 12-by 24-foot room in the CHS basement, found to be the best available space in town for conversion to a vault. A four-hour fireproof door was installed, shelves for materials were salvaged from Pratt Library's renovation, brick partitions were removed to enlarge space and the walls were painted to prepare the room to receive some of the town's finest literature.

Golden, Laugelle Throw Hats In Ring

Four In Selectman's Race

Doris Golden and Rocco Laugelle this week officially announced themselves candidates for the office of Selectman. That brought the total to four since Lester Hiltz and Glenn Pratt declared their candidacy last week.

Doris C. Golden, chairman of the School Committee for the past five years, has announced her candidacy for a three-year term as selectman.

She said, "I believe my public record speaks for itself in the areas of availability, leadership, fiscal accountability, knowledge of government, but perhaps most importantly, the ability to work with people both young and old and from all walks of life. Isn't that what government is really all about in the final analysis?

"Having been responsible for the education of our youth was a very serious matter," she said. And my ongoing concerns for the taxpayers to fund the learning process have always been a grave concern to me. After all, we have a large number of semi-retired and retired persons living on fixed incomes residing in town."

Mrs. Golden said governmental decisions are numerous and often complex, and she said she would like to put her experience to work on behalf of the townspeople in budget planning and presentations, labor negotiations, personnel evaluations, state legislation, contract purchasing and warrant approval, employes grievances, administrative duties, state and federal grant procedures, parliamentary rules and a basic understanding of effective government.

In her attempt to control expendi-

Rocco F. Laugelle of Norfolk Road has announced his candidacy for selectman.

One of 12 children, Laugelle was born, raised and educated in Cohasset. He is a Marine Corps veteran of the Second World War, and for the last 25 years has worked for the Brockton Edison Co. in the Cohasset office.

He is a member of the Water Commission, and has held that elective office 12 years. In addition, he is a member of the Government Island Study Committee.

Laugelle has also been long active in civic affairs. He is a two-term past commander of the George H. Mealy Post 118, American Legion, and is a member of the post executive committee. In addition, he is a member of the boards of directors of the Cohasset Community Center and the Cohasset Sailing Club.

In announcing his candidacy, Laugelle stated he is seeking the office of selectman because he feels qualified for the position based upon his life long involvement with the town, its government and, most importantly, the people of Cohasset. He stressed the fact that his employment keeps him in and around the community on a daily basis. Additionally, he said he demonstrated a desire and an ability to lead and serve the town, and the office of selectmen affords him the opportunity to expand and continue this leadership and service.

18 Year Olds Retain Many Rights

Eighteen-year-olds may have lost the right to drink in this state, but they do have just about all the other rights of an adult — those were highlighted at the senior class assembly at CHS last Wednesday.

The town was also 33 voters richer after those seniors who were 18 registered to vote.

Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson defined what being 18 in this state means. At 18 and over a person is no longer a minor, he is of full age, an adult, and at the age of majority. In other words, at 18, one is entitled to a lot of rights and the responsibilities they bring.

Those rights were also enumerated by Henderson. Probably the most well-known and waited-for right (aside from the use and purchase of alcoholic beverages) is the right to vote.

An 18-year-old can run for municipal offices and certain state offices. The Congress, Senate and Presidency are offices still bound by age: 25, 30, 35, respectively.

As of Jan. 1, 1974, Henderson said, an 18-year-old's rights include:

Property rights — to buy and sell property without the benefit of a guardian; professional rights — to become a medical doctor, lawyer, certified public accountant, dentist, veterinarian, physical therapist, optometrist, and embalmer if the licensing and educational standards are met; business rights — to be an incorporator in a Massachusetts corporation, a stockholder and a partner in a business.

(Henderson advised the 18-year-old businessmen to refrain from ordering martinis during board luncheons.)

Eighteen-year-olds may also become school bus drivers, projectionists, real estate brokers, jurors, executors of trusts or wills and a slew of other posts. One must be 19, however, to become a state policeman.

Town Clerk Charles Marks was also on hand to register seniors who were

Cohasset's Second Town Hall

By Judith Epstein

A peal of laughter erupts from a corner of the Log and Line.

Rocco Laugelle and the guys from the Edison crew stride in and pour themselves cups of coffee.

Doris Golden appears after tennis for her bran muffin.

The door from the kitchen swings open and the cook, Carmine, lumbers out to wisecrack with a customer.

Roger Pompeo reads the results of a lab test to a person who didn't have the time for an office visit.

Mary Jeanette Murray gives advice on how to insert an article in the Town Meeting warrant.

Ed Tower gives advice to everyone in the shop, whether they want it nor not.

Such are the sounds that fill the air of the local shop, the Log and Line on Ripley Road. The shop has opened at 6 a.m., townspeople waft in and out, along with the delicious smell of fresh coffee. Some stop to have breakfast or lunch or to drink of that dark liquid kept ever-warm in two pots by the cash register.

Although the Log and Line offers a variety of breakfast and luncheon specials, conversational rapport is their best seller. But more than that, beyond the atmosphere conducive to good talk, is the feeling of spontaneity and candor.

SOUR STORY — Harbormaster Harry Ritter checks at Town Hall on the state of his taxes.

Village And Harbor Ass'n. Annual Meeting

The following is the report of the Annual Meeting of the Cohasset Village and Harbor Association held March 8.

The agenda included reports by the President and Treasurer, action to fix the number of Directors for 1979-80, Election of Directors for 1979-80 and report of the Nominating Committee.

The following names have been placed in nomination by the Nominating Committee. Additional nominations could be offered from the floor. Officers of the Board are elected at the first meeting of the Directors following the annual meeting.

Members were: Erwin Cone, Red Lion Inn; Connie Parker, Cohasset Historical Society; Ann Hamilton, Corner Light House; Bonnie Piedtrowski, Kit & Kaboodle; Eugene Price, Lamplighter Realty; Bobby Cox, Wee Spinnaker; Betty Reddie, Dr. Michael Equi, Cohasset Jaycees; Tom Chamberlain, Bruce McClain, Cards & Shards; Larry Fone, Cookworks; Richard Henderson, Thaxter, Beckwith, Humphrey & Henderson; Louis Watson, Cohasset Hardware; Marianne Hawker, Greenhouse Restaurant; Ed Jacombe, Community Center.

The meeting was presided over by Ann Hamilton, president.

The slate of 16 board members was unanimously accepted as read. Ann discussed the purpose of the CVHA — stressing that the primary interest at the moment was litter control. Long range projects include emphasis on more flowers, shrubs and trees in the downtown area.

Attractive (one was on display) new permanent trash receptacles have been purchased by the organization and will be placed around town soon.

These programs, it is hoped, will help sustain Cohasset Village and Harbor as a pleasant and attractive area in which to live, meet, conduct business and shop.

About 30 members attended the meeting.

The new board will elect officers at their next meeting April 5th.

Ann, who is retiring as president after 3 years, thanked her board, in particular Ed Atkinson and Betty Reddie. "Betty is why the Association has survived — we are lucky she lives in our town," Ann said.

Newcomers Meeting Due

The Scituate-Cohasset Welcome Wagon Newcomers Club next meeting is scheduled for Monday, March 19 at 9:30 a.m. in the Unitarian Parish House, N. Main Street, Cohasset.

The guest speaker will be Josephine Mahoney from New Life Women's Health Spa. Josephine will be demonstrating some "shaping up" exercises. Newcomers will participate in these exercises (if you wish), so please dress in very casual clothing. The New Life has both individual and group programs, inlcuding disco and a diet group.

Cohasset's Second Town Hall

Georgie Jednick invites us all back to his place for clam fritters.

Two self-employed young men meet up with each other, decide to heck with work for the rest of the afternoon, and take off for the Barnside.

Randy Feola saunters in, says "Hiya sweetie" to the females in the shop and Lord-only-knows-what to everyone else.

Although official town business is heard by the town's governing boards, the unofficial, and usually the first word, is heard at the Log and Line, the second Town Hall. And there is controversy as to whether current issues should be let out of the bag before they pass through doors of the real Town Hall.

"If you want to keep abreast of town news, its the place to go," attested Harry Ritter. "It's the old cracker-barrel, the place where you mug up with a cup of coffee and . . ." The end of Harry's statement is far too salty to print.

Arthur Clark arrives, not at all out of breath from a bike ride from West Corner. He does not see the discussions at the Log and Line as ingredients in a political melting-pot. "I enjoy it here, I enjoy meeting the people, my friends, there. It's a gathering place where people socialize and take a coffee break."

Peter Laugelle refrains from comment, in his usual cooperative fashion.

Owner Peter Kulterides attest, "I've worked all over, Framingham, Natick, Needham . . . and this is the best place, with the best people." Peter himself is engrossed in conversation with a patron, displaying once again that the clientele makes the Log and Line what it is — success.

TM Articles Attract Attention

Town Meeting articles are the center of attraction these days, and the order in which they appear in the warrant is also an attention-getter, in more ways than one.

Selectmen voted to swap the position of Articles 75 and 76, the last two articles on the warrant, with Nos. 15 and 16.

Daniel Cotton, chairman of the Town Offices Space Needs Study Committee, was disturbed that the article which proposes his committee's renovation plan came as the next to last article on the warrant, Article 75. Cotton said he would like to see the article in the first part of the warrant, or in the teens, to insure consideration of the article when the meeting was sure to attract a quorum and when the committee and architect who prepared the plan would be able to attend.

"All nine members want to be present," Cotton said. "We have worked over two years, we have had 30 meetings." Cotton felt his committee had more fully researched and had kept better records of their proceedings than had any other town board he has served in the past.

Selectmen indicated the article had been placed at the end of the warrant to keep people coming to the meetings. They stressed there was no deliberate effort for the article to receive inadequate consideration by placing it at the end of the warrant.

Cotton said he understood the Selectmen's dilemma but found it ironic to think the Town Hall article would be thought of as the controversial item that would keep people at the meeting, when the committee purposely worked to keep the issue unemotional.

The article submitted by Cotton and the next and last article in the warrant, the article which requests money to buy the professional building on Rte. 3A for use as a Town Hall will now appear within the first third of the warrant.

Town Hall Renovation

Cohasset Building Inspector James Litchfield and State Building Inspector Joseph DiCicco traveled again this week to the state Building Code Commission to discuss plans to renovate the Town Hall.

Litchfield said the modified renovation plan, submitted by the Town Offices Space Needs Study Committee, were further reviewed by the commission Monday and were not approved.

"The plans weren't approved because they lacked information on specifications in all areas," Litchfield said. He added that the plans were without sufficient clarity and didn't signify elevation and detailed dimensions to conform to building code requirements.

The most recent changes the committee's plan has undergone include enlargement of the first floor offices of the Selectmen, the Selectmen's clerk and the town clerk, second floor elimination of a file room and a change in the proposed location of the conference room.

A basement plan for the Recreation Department was also noted, relocating that office from what is now the side of the front foyer to a small kitchen under the stage area in the basement.

Litchfield said he plans to submit a letter of his findings, corroborated by commission staff engineer David MacArtney and Dicicco, to chairman of the study committee, Daniel Cotton, to assist in that committee's meeting later this week.

Clean Up Common

(The following remarks by the Rev. Edward Atkinson were excerpted from the weekly newsletter of the First Parish Church. Ed.)

Perhaps it is because I spend so much time working in a building that borders the Cohasset Common that the condition of the Common has become such a major irritant to me, but it has.

No, it is not the young people playing ball and listening to music that bother me. I think that is terrific. The Common should be a gathering place for people of all ages and it should be a place for play and enjoyment. I would be the last one to suggest we ever make the Common a place so delicate and fragile we have to say, "Look, but don't touch!" Few signs are less becoming to a public park than the ones announcing, "Keep Off The Grass." I am also aware and appreciative of the work that Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle puts into the care of the Common. But the fact remains that the Common is a mess, littered almost daily, the reflecting pool filled with mud and garbage, the grass badly worn and automobile tire tracks zig-zagged across the mud.

Where is our sense of civic pride? Here we have one of the most unique and attractive of the many town commons in New England and yet we cannot seem to find the means to provide trash containers for the Common and empty them regularly, to restore the lawn, to clean and seal the pond and to identify and prosecute those who drive their automobiles recklessly.

Yes, I know there are more important issues in the world today — hunger, war, human rights. But somehow for me the condition of the Common illustrates the world's problems in microcosm.

Executive Secretary Recommended

The Committee to Survey the Structure of Town Government has voted to recommend to a future town meeting the establishment of a professional position of an executive secretary in Cohasset.

The committee informed Selectmen recently that, as a result of extensive interviews and meetings with town boards, committee and department officials, they have realized the need for a person to assist within the Selectmen's office to aid in the more efficient running of the town.

The committee enumerated the benefits it believes would result in the position of executive secretary including: the delegation of the Selectmen's day-to-day functions; the assurance of the continuity of the Selectmen's experience to future boards; better coordination between boards and committee; assistance to the Selectmen in pressing for a larger share of government grants and programs; better services to the townspeople and more careful expenditure of tax dollars.

The committee praised Selectmen Arthur Clark for the extensive amount of time he spends serving in his post with only modest compensation. They noted, however, that a time will come when Clark will no longer serve.

In its sessions, the committee met with a representative sample of officials from the state and other communities. These included representatives from the State Department of Community Affairs, the executive secretaries of Sudbury and Norwell and the town administrator of Marshfield.

The state officials informed the committee that roughly a third of all communities in Massachusetts today employ either a town manager, executive secretary or administrative assistant. They said the trend is toward more professional management at the municipal level when dealing with multi-million dollar budgets.

The town officials all indicated that the Selectmen are the chief policy makers in the towns and that the role of executive secretary or administrative assistant is to implement their decisions.

Provision Deleted From Water Main Article

Selectmen have agreed to delete a provision included in the warrant article to install a water main on Chief Justice Cushing Highway which would allow the assessment of betterments for users.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson later ruled that the additional wording, which would empower the Board of Water Commissioners to levy special assessments to users to meet part of the water service costs, could be added in a motion to amend the article on the Town Meeting floor.

It was the Selectmen's opinion that the Water Commissioners would approve the article if the assessment provision were included in the article. In that case, it was noted, the article need only pass with a majority vote and not a two-thirds vote.

A similar article for the installation of the water mains, which passed at the Nov. Special Town Meeting, was ruled illegal this winter because it was determined Board of Water Commissioners had refused to extend the main after being requested by residents prior to that meeting.

It was further concluded, according to statute, "If, for any reason, the Board of Water Commissioners should refuse to extend water mains or pipes into sections of the town not previously supplied with water from the town water works, a two-thirds vote for an annual Town Meeting shall be necessary to annul such refusal."

Robert Davenport, owner of a business which would become a recipient of the extended water service, informed Selectmen that he was opposed to the added provision within the article.

He said that he, personally, would go along with a betterment charge, but knows of many others who would not. He added that no betterments have been charged before for other mains added in town.

Davenport suggested that Selectmen delete the provision and submit the article without the Water Commissioners approval. "Let us take our chances with a two-thirds vote," he said.

The article now requests the appropriation or transfer from available funds $65,000 to install a water main on Rte. 3A in a northerly direction from King Street approximately 2708 feet to 110 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

King Tax Cap Doesn't Fit

To the Editor:

The long-awaited tax cap spending limit proposal which Governor King finally announced, calls for the cities and towns, in a time of unrestrained and frightening inflation, to manage on essentially the same budgets as last year. This could lead to serious disruptions in public education and other essential services in our community.

If inflation continues at its present 12% rate, the result might be a 12 per cent across-the-board cut in all of our public services. In all communities that would mean a reduction in teaching staff, textbooks not replaced, library and guidance cuts, school repairs neglected, and such items as sports, music, transportation and custodial services reduced or abolished.

Further, all public employee salaries could be frozen, which would certainly be unfair, in light of the fact that President Carter's guidelines permit a 7 per cent wage increase.

Education takes a large percentage of every community's total operating budget. It is almost inevitable that education would be the first place officials will cut under a cap/limit program.

No rational person opposes tax reductions or elimination of waste in government. Public employees are taxpayers, too, and they are as anxious as any other group to save on taxes, but before you race to support Governor King's proposal, I suggest all voters assess the possible repercussions of this program.

In addition to the possible devastation of quality education and reduction in such humane services as special help for the handicapped and disturbed child or one who requires remedial work, the governor's plan will place our local governments in a strait jacket by subverting home rule. It also represents and encourages a retreat from responsible local governments, and is an unacceptable interference into local affairs, creating more problems than it solves.

It would be wonderful not to have to pay taxes; but we cannot have services without paying for them. It's as simple as that, and unlike California, Massachusetts does not have a multi-billion dollar surplus to make up for significant slashes in the property tax.

of age to exercise one of their most valuable rights. The right hands of 33 students were simultaneously raised after their registration cards were completed, and Marks swore in the new voters collectively.

According to social studies teacher Edward Sheehan, this year's turnout far exceeded that of last year. Sheehan added that many seniors have already registered to vote, and that others have yet to turn 18. "This is a new age of political awareness," Sheehan said. "You can't keep kids away from current events."

Linda Henderson, moderator of the League of Women Voters, emphasized to students the practicality of the right to vote, outlining the interlocking elements of duty and responsibility. "Town Meetings are informative and entertaining," Mrs. Henderson said, "and a good chance to feel a part of the town's decision-making process."

Marks further explained some of the finer nuances of voting, such as the wish to declare a party ballot in a primary election if a voter is otherwise registered as Independent. Marks said simply by declaring which party ballot is desired, the vote can be cast, and an immediate switch back to Independent status can be effected.

Absentee ballots are equally easy to obtain, Marks said. If you have to be absent on the day of election, you can vote prior to that date at the Town Clerk's Office on a voting machine after the completion of an application. If a student is away at school or travelling, an absentee ballot may be sent for, or once again, a vote can be made before leaving.

Marge Izzo, Pat Gwinn and Genevieve Young of the league assisted students in the use of an electronic voting machine.

Golden Selectman Hopeful

tures with the school system that is the largest employe in town with 210 personnel and a fiscal budget in excess of 50 per cent of the town's total budget, Mrs. Golden instituted the position of business manager which she said has proven invaluable in controlling costs within established guidelines. This position is the first of its kind ever to be instituted in the town.

"I enjoy a good working relationship with town department heads and committees and appreciate their knowledge and assistance over the years," she said.

For the past 27 years, selectmen have included a woman. Mrs. Golden said this custom brings an added dimension and philosophy into the realm of decision making.

The candidate said, "The economic conditions of the times mandate the campaign issues be taxation, fiscal awareness, budgetary priorities and a stand-by energy plan for all town departments."

Mrs. Golden graduated from Mount Alvernia Academy in Chestnut Hill and Mount Ida Junior College. She has long been active in community affairs and lives at 2 Bound Brook Lane with her husband John and their two children, Karen and Cari.

Family Forum Created

A Family Forum of the South Shore group has been created to educate its members and the general public on matters affecting women and their families.

This organization is a local chapter of the Association of the W's, Inc. and/or Women Who Want to be Women (WWWW) in Fort Worth, Texas.

Adopting Edmund Burke's observation, "All that is necessary for the triumph of evil is that good men do nothing," as its motto, Family Forum is dedicated to combatting all anti-moral, anti-family and anti-Biblical forces wherever found — whether in the highest office of our nation, the halls of Congress, educational institutions, the TV screen at home or the corner store pornography shelf.

Family Forum is founded on the belief that the Holy Scriptures are mankind's guide for spiritual attainment and moral conduct; that the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution are effective instruments to provide individual rights, freedom and opportunity; and that families form the building blocks of society.

Family Forum members believe in the rights of women but oppose a unisex social structure; that it is the right and responsibility of parents (not the government) to train children and establish their values; and that innocent human life should be protected from time of conception till natural death.

Meetings are held the last Tuesday of every month at the Cushing Room of the Rockland Trust Co. in Cushing Plaza at 8 p.m. Interested persons can also write Box, 243, Cohasset, 02025, or call 383-0547

Town Meeting Preview

Cohasset will be facing a hefty warrant of 76 articles at Town Meeting April 7 at the high school gymnasium.

Many articles are routinely inserted each year, but several are expected to create discussion and debate. Over the next few weeks the Mariner will outline those articles.

There is plenty of controversy over Article 15 which requests $30,000 to be expended by the Committee to Study Space Needs for Town Offices for the preparation of detailed plans and drawings in connection with securing bids for and the renovation of the Town Hall. The renovation is expected to cost $326,000.

Article 16 requests by citizens petition on appropriation of $325,000 by taxatio borrowing to purch building known as th fessional Building at 76 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. This building would be used for a new town hall and requires also an additional sum of money for renovations, relocation costs, furniture, furnishings and equipment. Expect controversy over this one, too.

If the townspeople approve of Article 19, the Town will have a chance to use the $15,000 held for its use on harbor maintenance by the Army Corps of Engineers — in conjunction with $36,000 appropriated for the removal of rocks in the harbor.

Long range planning for the harbor is requested in Article 20 by appropriating $5,000 for Cohasset's share in a Coastal Zone Management project.

Further maintenance around the peripheries of the harbor were requested by Harbormaster Harry Ritter in Article 21 to rehabilitate those seawalls by sandblasting, chinking and guniting. The front and side of the Sailing Club wall; the wall to the left of Government Island Pier to the Mill River bridge; the wall along Border Street from Veterans' Memorial Park to and including the three walls at Lawrence wharf; and a section of wall on Margin Street require repairs at a cost of $15,000.

Ritter also requests in Article 22 a $20,000 appropriation for a municipal water way improvement and maintenance fund.

The Fire Station Study Committee submitted Article 24 and they request the Town to appropriate money to construct, equip and furnish a new sub fire station, to be located on the northeasterly side of Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

Waste Systems

A South Shore conference on innovative sewage systems will be held in Cohasset March 31.

Conference speakers will outline case histories of several New England towns which solved their sewage problems in unconventional ways.

Speakers representing the EPA and the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering will explain funding and regulating innovative systems. New techniques to extend the life of an on-lot septic system will also be examined. In addition, exhibits sponsored by companies manufacturing innovative systems will be displayed.

The conference, open to all South Shore residents will be located at St. Stephen's Parish Hall by the Common from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The conference is cosponsored by the Cohasset League of Women Voters, Council of Garden Clubs and the wastewater Study Group.

A very special "hello" to Mrs. Essie Shumaker, a Cohasset grandmother who reads the Mariner from her home in Morgantown, West Virginia. Mrs. Shumaker has a son, daughter-in-law and two grandchildren here: Lisa in 4th grade at the Deer Hill School and David in the Joseph Osgood third grade. For the past eight years, on every holiday, she sends dozens of delicious home-baked cookies to the two schools, Lisa's Girl Scout Troop 372, her son's law firm, the Community Center nursery school, the Muscular Distrophy sale in the summer and the Unitarian Church Sunday School. Each cookie is shaped appropriately for the holiday and individually wrapped. She has hundreds of cookie cutters. We look forward to tasting the St. Patrick's Day cookie which Susan Shumaker promised us - one of the famous "Grandma Cookies"! Mrs. Essie Shumaker sends about 300 cookies to Cohasset every holiday. It's her way of saying "I Love You" to her grandchildren and their lucky friends and neighbors.

The South Shore Art Center held their "Spring Festival" display of painting, photography, and children's works. Clement Micarelli opened the event with a portrait painting demonstration. The brass Ensemble from the South Shore onservatory gave a recital while members, briends and guests enjoyed wine and cheese. Mrs. George Gurnie was in charge of the catered supper. Syma Komarin and Mary Baskin, children's art teachers, hosted the exhibit. Liz Crosby was chairman of the opening reception.

Robin McCarthy of Bancroft Road, a sophomore at Colby-Sawyer College, represented her school at the National Entertainment and Campus Activities Association Conference held in Kansas City, Mo.

Josephine Mahoney of the New Life Women's Spa will demonstrate some shaping-up exercises to the Newcomers Club on March 19 at 9:30 a.m. in the Unitarian Parish House. Joan Failinger, Winnie Kuhn, Barbara Cucchiarilla, Christine Cilmour and Janet Herring will be helping in the kitchen for the meeting. Rita Strong, the chairman of the nominating committee submitted the following names for he new slate of officers: Mary Ann Devine, president; Jean Morrison, first vice president; Barbara Turnbull, 2nd vice president; Sandi Bieryla, secretary; Maryse McGuirk; treasurer and Jean Dormer, historian.

Frederic Wood, Jr., owner of Petersen Realtors of Cohasset, and Diana Kornet, a Realtor associated with the Petersen office, participated in the recent Thayer Academy Career Seminar Program. A series of seminars was held at the Thayer campus recently for juniors and seniors to explain to them the career opportunities available. In their hour long presentation, a short film was shown and Mr. Wood and Mrs. Kornet spoke about careers in real estate. Booklets were distributed dealing with the real estate business and there was a question and answer period.

Phillip Brownell of Beechwood Street has received his first promotion in the U.S. Air Froce. He completed technical training at Chanute AFB in Ill.

Director of Special Education Steven Hart received commendation from School Supt. John Maloney and school committee members for his department, which was recently determined by the state division of special education to be in full compliance with federal and state regulations. The Cohasset system was commended on its team teaching approach for the opportunity it gives special needs students. Also praised was the resourcefulness and professional zeal of the special education staff and the leadership of Mr. Hart.

John Martin led the church ervice on Sunday when the econd Congregational Church honored several of its members active in the Girl Scouts. Lay reader for the service was Dorothy Bates, active in scouting since 1919. Leaders and members of the Scouts wore their scouting uniforms.

Cohasset Patrolman Gerard Buckley of Hugh Strain Road was appointed to the police department. Buckley worked for the Cohasset department full-time as a permanent intermittent officer in 1977, when he was appointed a permanent officer. A graduate of Northeastern University, Buckley has a bachelor's degree in criminal justice. He has also taken a combat training course, an emergency medical technical course and attended Brockton Police Academy. His duties for the Cohasset department include record keeping, assigning overtime and private details and booking prisoners. He has also done substitute teaching in the Scituate and Hingham school systems.

At a meeting of the town's appointing authority, consisting of the chairman of the board of selectmen, the chairman of the advisory committee and the moderator, the following appointments were made to the fire station study committee: Francis X. Johnston of Fair Oaks Lane and Robert Naki of Duane St. They will fill the vacancies made by the resignation of Joseph Frates and Donald Smith.

The town is seeking permission from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, New England division, to dredge Cohasset Harbor. Colonel John Chandler reports that silt will be removed from the area aound the town dock at Government Island. Material removed would be disposed of at the town disposal site.

Mrs. Kempton Churchill, Mrs. O.W. Goodrich and Mrs. Robert Knowles are members of the Women's Exhibition committee for the New England Flower Show. The show begins this year on St. Patrick's Day, March 17, and is sponsored by the Mass. Horticultural Soiety. The name chosen for the gardens in the Women's Exhibition Committee jurisdiction is "The Family Park", the family referred to being that of plants. The liliaceae family, which includes the lily and the hosta, is the choice of the Cohasset Community Garden Club. Mrs. Ellery W. Stone, chairman, and the members of the Community Garden Club, are planning to show a partly shady corner of a garden where one may sit and enjoy a cool drink and admire the plants.

Boosters Fete Local Athletes

The Cohasset Boosters Sports Banquet was held at the High School cafeteria last week. Clark Chatterton, Athletic Director of CHS was Master of Ceremonies and Fr. Keohane gave the benediction at the spaghetti supper and award program attended by 425 athletes and their families.

Student athletes who received awards based on team spirit and enthusiasm were chosen by their teammates. Varsity letters and certificates were also awarded.

Diane Maloney was the winner for girls basketball; Rick Hobson won for wrestling; Ruth Ann Sargent tied with Gaye Ripley for girls gymnastics; and Jimmy McCarthy and Billy O'Brien tied for boys basketball. Tim Smith won for ice hockey.

Athletes selected for the South Shore League All Stars team were Brian Keating and Paul Farren in basketball, Diane Maloney in girls basketball, Larry Evans and Freshman Dominic Campedelli in ice hockey. It is an honor for a Freshman to be selected for this team, and Campedelli is to be congratulated.

There are nine South Shore League teams, and each team selects 10 of its best players. From this list, athletes are selected by teams other than their own, so it is a singular honor.

Cohasset High School ended the Varsity winter sports season with high standings. Boys basketball finished third and played three post season games. The team went as far as the Massachusetts State Tournament, making the semi-finals in District I South. Ice hockey finished second and the girls gymnastics finished second, winning the All-League meet. Girls basketball finished sixth.

This year was a record-breaking winter Varsity sports season for Cohasset High School.

New Vault

"Some papers have been treated in the past, but some are in pretty tough shape," Hamilton said. "The ancient material will be more under control here. Older stuff will be enclosed in acid-free envelopes and cabinet space will be available."

Sliding map drawers already contain some school materials, as the vault is also intended to house records for all town departments.

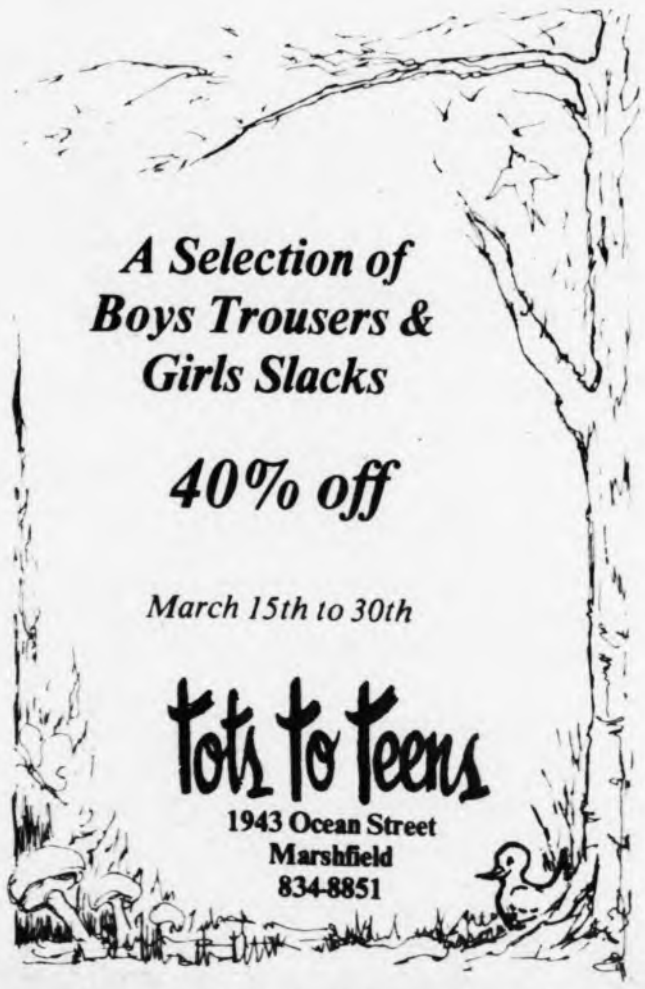
"Nobody knows when a new Town Hall will be available or ready, so whether the town cares to look at this arrangement as permanent or a stopgap measure is anybody's guess," Hamilton said. "I look at it as permanent. He added, however, that the fire door can be reused in another location."

Selectman Arthur Clark views the vault situation as temporary. "We had to get a special permit from the Secretary of State's Office as it is, he said, referring to the new vault's four-hour fireproof door. "We're supposed to have a six-hour fireproof door."

The heating pipes that pass through the room will help to keep the temperature constant, Hamilton said, although Clark was concerned that the room would be too warm in the summer. "We'll wait on adding air-conditioning and de-humidifiers," Hamilton said.

Current records will still be kept at Town Hall, Hamilton said. The Accounting Department, for one, must hold three years' worth of records for ready perusal at Town Hall.

The moving of the records is anticipated to begin this week. "A lot of these materials are just interesting things," attested Noel Ripley, chairman of the Historical Commission.



The bill of sale for the town clock and the record of the conscription of money to have the clock mounted are two valuable pieces of history for the town, and personally for Ripley, who engineered the renovation of the four-faced clock on the Common.

Hamilton hopes to have all the records cross-indexed, so they can be traced with the vault and back to the department were they originated.

Sleeping Skipper Hoop Giant Awakened

By Steve MacQuarrie

In the 1920's Cohasset had a superb basketball team. Led by Nathaniel Hurwitz, Hugh Murphy, Paddy Grant and Frederick Grassie, this professional club capped a brilliant 44 game victory streak by winning the New England championship.

Since then, however, the sport has been asleep so long here that it makes Rip Van Winkle look like an insomniac. Until this year.

In 1979 it was a high school team, and this time the names were Paul Farren, Matt Salerno, Brian Keating, John Howley, Mark Goff, Tom Higgins and Rich Tibbetts. And while the Skippers' longest victory streak was but six games, their 17 and six record is the best in the school's history and they came closer to winning any basketball tournament than a Cohasset team has since 1922.

The Skippers' advanced to the semi-finals of the Division III South tournament, losing by 10 points (after trailing by two with less than two minutes to go) to Cathedral, the tourney winner and a heavy favorite to cop the state championship this Saturday.

They got that close to the Boston school without Keating, their second leading scorer and rebounder, and a player whose skills under the basket could have penetrated the wall of bodies that Cathedral positioned inside.

Reaching the semi-finals, however, was no small accomplishment, especially for a team that was five and 11 a year ago. The recipe, for those who believe that anyone can be a Henry Higgins, just by using a formula, runs like this:

1. One coach (John LeVangie) who knows what it takes — AS AN ORGANIZER, A TACTICIAN, AND A PERSON — to win.
2. Six seniors (co-captains Farren and Salerno, along with Howley, Tebbets, Higgins and Billy O'Brien) whose self confidence and energy transcended the school's poor basketball tradition.
3. Six underclassmen (Goff, Bill Kurtz, Bill Taylor, Jim McCarthy, Tom McMahon, and Jimmy O'Brien) who had tasted success as J.V.'s last year and were eager for the full course.
4. One dash of luck (the arrival in the fall of transfer student Keating).

The real key was LeVangie's ability to mold a team that, unlike many other high school outfits, depended on no single player for its accomplishments. Nine different players started at least one game.

The old cliche about the character building attributes of school sports is largely bunk. Yet in Cohasset this year LeVangie's players learned that they didn't have to keep losing — that with hard work, confidence, preparation, and a knowledge of what they were doing they could be winners. It is a lesson that may not be entirely clear to them now, but one that will crystallize in the future.

The future should also bring more success to Cohasset basketball. The sport is now awake here and the five decade wait should not recur.

Old Ironsides Program

How the USS Constitution Museum in Charlestown serves as a showcase for memorabilia connected with "Old Ironsides" and as a platform for increasing understanding of our maritime history, will be described at a public dinner meeting of the Cohasset Historical Society Tuesday, March 27, at the Unitarian Parish House.

The presentation will follow a catered dinner to be served at 6:30 p.m. The public is welcome and reservations at $5 each may be made by calling Mrs. Edna Pratt at 383-1672 or Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, 383-0773. Deadline for reservations is Friday, March 23.

The speaker will be Peter Sterling, director of the USS Constitution Museum, who will illustrate his talk with slides. Sterling became director of the museum last August after being director of group visits and educational programs at the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation in Virginia. In that capacity he was responsible for developing instructional programs for students, adults and special groups totalling over 300,000 a year.

For the past 15 years he has been involved in teaching and museum education. He was a teacher and administrator at New Hampton School in New Hampshire before returning to his alma mater Davidson College in North Carolina as director of co-curricular activities in 1970. Since entering the museum field, Sterling has spoken at many national gatherings of museum organizations

Recreation Roundup

Fun Run May Become Weekly Program

The Recreation Department is considering conducting a weekly "Fun Run" program to be held on a weekly basis, probably Saturday or Sunday afternoons throughout the spring.

The program is designed for all age runners, novice and expert. The department will set up three courses: one course of two miles, one of five miles, and one of 10 miles. Participants may choose whatever course they would like to run, meet at a designated time and place, start off together and receive individual times as they cross the finish line, from a Recreation Department supervisor.

The program will meet each week and a chart will be kept for each individual so that they may compare their own times as well as their time to other participant's times.

Individuals, of all ages, who feel they might be interested in this program should call the Recreation Office at 383-6791, as soon as possible. The program will require a minimal registration fee and is planned to begin in early April.

The possible formation of a formal jogging club will also be considered if participation levels indicate.

ADULT DISCO

Registration for Adult Disco lessons will be accepted via phone from now until March 30.

The fee for the six week instructional program, taught by Andrea Palardy, is $5 per person. The program is designed to teach fundamentals of disco dancing to people 21 years of age and over. Current classes will finish the first session Saturday evening, March 17; interested individuals may drop in that evening at the Town Hall Auditorium (8-9 p.m.) to observe the class.

This program is specifically designed for the adult beginner or advanced beginner dancer, i.e. has had none or very few prior disco lessons.

If interested call the Recreation Department Office at 383-6791, before March 30. Classes will begin Saturday March 31, at the Town Hall Auditorium, from 8 p.m.-9 p.m.

DOG OBEDIENCE TRAINING

The Department is planning again this year, to conduct Dog Obedience Training classes on the Town Common, beginning the latter part of April. Due to the success of last year's programs the department will register this class early in order to determine how many individual classes will be needed.

Dog Obedience is an eight-week, one hour per week, program designed to teach any dog at least six months of age (by April 1) basic obedience and command training. Class time will be spent teaching proper training techniques and procedures. Participants will be expected to work with their dogs during the week, on their own, in order for the dog to obtain full benefit of the program. Dog handlers who will accompany dogs to class must be at least 12 years old.

The fee for the eight-week program is $15 per dog. Early registration, by calling the Recreation Office, is suggested as class sizes will be limited. Classes will be filled on a first-come-first-enrolled basis.

GUITAR LESSONS

The Department will accept registrations, via phone, for guitar lessons taught by recording astist Mark Mincolla.

Classes will be offered for beginner and intermediate adults (age 16 and over) and youth (grade 4 to age 16). The fee is $8 for six, one hour classes that will be held Monday evenings beginning March 26.

If interested please call the Recreation Office at 383-6791 before Friday, March 23. Classes are limited in size and will be filled on a first-call-first enrolled basis. Non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis for $1 extra charge, on Friday afternoon, March 24, only.

GYMNASTIC LESSONS

Late registrations for Grades 4-12 gymnastics program will be accepted by calling the Recreation Office immediately.

Classes will be offered in beginners, advanced beginners, intermediates and advanced levels of instruction. The program is open to both girls and boys who are currently in Grades 4-12.

WOMEN'S FITNESS

Registrations, via phone, will be accepted for Women's Fitness Classes. Classes will consist of use of the Universal Weight Training Machine at CHS, and group exercise, on an alternating basis. Also, for those who are interested, organized jogging will be implemented into the program.

Catherine McArdle will instruct the eight-week program designed for women of all ages over 15 years. Individual work-outs and exercise programs will be designed to meet your specific needs and abilities.

The program fee is $6 and will meet Thursdays starting March 22, at 7:30 p.m. The first class will meet at the Town Hall Auditoruim and the second clas, March 29, at the CHS weight room. Classes will alternate each week from the Town Hall (group exercise) to CHS (universal weight machine).

If interested please call the Recreation Office at 383-6791, before Tuesday, March 20.

CO-ED GRADE K-3 KICKBALL

Again this spring, the Recreation Department is interested in conducting Co-ed kickball for Grades K-3. In order to conduct this program, a number of adult and high school age volunteers will be needed to coach teams. The program will meet one afternoon per week (for coaches) after school, at the Osgood School field.

If you are interested in helping out with this program, and can spare a couple of hours of time per week for a 6-8 week period, please call the Recreation Office as soon as possible.

Sweeney Announces Candidacy

Marilyn Sweeney of Elm Street has announced she is a candidate for a three-year term on the Board of Health.

Mrs. Sweeney a summer resident since 1953 and a permanent one 12 years, is vice chairman of the South Metro Council, an advisory sub-regional council of the Health Systems Agency for Greater Boston. For the past three years, Mrs. Sweeney has been on the board of the council and during the last year, has been its consumer vice president. In addition, she was appointed by the governor to represent the Health Systems Agency on the state Health Coordinating Council developed to review health systems plans of the state and a state health plan.

As a member of the Health Systems Plan Committee, a plan was developed that encompassed the various sectors of health care and its delivery systems into a plan for Boston and its five regional councils. The agency has received its full designation under the law based on that effort. Mrs. Sweeney said in her announcement statement she is committed to promotion of good health and disease prevention techniques.

Mrs. Sweeney holds a certificate from Northeastern University as a family/community health worker and is working toward a B.A. degree at the UMass. College of Public and Community Service. While at Northeastern, Mrs. Sweeney was on the Dean's List. Her field work was at the Roxbury Comprehensive Health Center and the Brockton Multi-Service Center.

Mrs. Sweeney and her husband Bob have three children, all either now attending or who have attended Cohasset schools.

Mrs. Sweeney is a part-time secretary for the Water and Sewer Departments. She has been a library aide at the Osgood School and a member of the Communications Council of the Deer Hill School. Mrs. Sweeney was a kindergarten and lower school teacher at the First Parish Church and worked on curriculum for the primary grades. She was also the church's representative to the annual fair on the Common. As a member of the League of Women Voters, Mrs. Sweeney participated in the school study done in 1968-69 by the league. As a young mother, she helped form the first Baby-sitting Cooperative in Cohasset, which still functions. And in 1967-68, Mrs. Sweeney was hospitality chairman of the Cohasset-Scituate Newcomers.

Business Assoc. Notes

A cocktail party and business meeting was held at the annual meeting of the Cohasset Village and Harbor Association.

Other business included the report of the treasurer, action to fix the number of directors for 1979-80, report of the Nominating Committee and the election of directors for 1979-80.

Merchants Attack 3A Zoning Pla

By Judith Epstein

Vehement objections erupted Thursday night at the Planning Board's open hearing over an article proposing a change in the zoning by-law governing the Rte. 3A Highway Business district.

Members of the business community violently opposed the changes which would require future business lots to be a minimum 40,000 square feet in area, an increase from the current requirement of 10,000 square feet and in addition increase frontage to 200 feet from 50 feet.

Eric Pearson, owner of Cohasset Motors, questioned the Board's rationale in raising the area and frontage of business lots by four times.

He said he has seen professional plans for 25 years for which thousands of dollars were spent advocating further business development on Rte. 3A.

He questioned in particular the most recent study completed last fall by Roberta Leary, ex-board member and planner, hired to examine alternatives for zoning changes and business growth along Rte. 3A, her qualifications and why none of the options she proposed were being considered by the board.

Pearson was informed by board member Patricia Facey, that a consultant had been employed to offer development plans, not recommendations.

Facey added that the changes proposed in the article were for future businesses only, and that new area stipulations wouldn't affect present businesses. The reason given for the amount of increase in area recommended is to limit the number of curb cuts or entrances and exits along the highway, she said.

Robert Dwyer, owner of Dwyer's Cleaners, and Pearson both reacted strongly to the board's reasoning, pointing to the inevitability of their land and property becoming non-conforming should the article pass by the needed two-thirds vote at Town Meeting, and to what they felt was exclusion of their opinions in the planning of Rte. 3A.

Pearson added that he hadn't seen one public notice for the hearing, nor

Drama Club Wins Again

Cohasset High School Drama Workshop members were winners at the State Drama Festival semifinals held at Duxbury High School on March 17. The cast will participate in the State Festival at John Hancock Hall in Boston on March 30 and 31.

The entire 11 member cast was named to the all-star cast.

The Drama Workshop performed an excerpt from Story Theater the performance which has brought them winning success not only at home but also at the Emerson College Theatre Arts Festival and, now, in state-wide competition.

Story Theater is an imaginative adaptation of Brothers Grimm Fairy Tales and Aesop Fables, and mixes mime, music and comedy to create a contemporary enactment of ageless stories.

Director Ron Emmons said of the Workshop's recent win, "It's an honor. I am pleased just to get them to Boston." Emmons noted that last year was the first year they competed and even then made the semifinals.

They will compete in the State

School Land Sought For Sewage Plant

The School Committee met with the Board of Sewer & Water Commissioners this week to discuss the proposed site location for a new sewage treatment plant on land originally intended for school purposes.

The Commissioners are requesting at Town Meeting in Article 35, that the Board of Selectmen transfer land originally designated for school purposes to be used for a sewage treatment facility.

This land is located southwesterly of land owned by the Penn Central Railroad and is bounded by land owned by the South Shore Playhouse Assoc. (Music Circus) and Smith Place.

Chairman of Commissioners John Hobbs described the 10-acre parcel as the best site for the treatment facility.

Within this area, he said, the plant could be relocated in future plan modifications. He reminded the Committee that this article would allow the drawing of further plans and specifications only, not construction.

Hobbs further defended the site as a location that would result in the least inconvenience to the greatest number of residents and that it is the most isolated of all sites considered. He noted that the plant would be 300 feet away from the nearest home.

Know Your Warrant: Water & Sewer Articles

The Town Meeting warrant now stands with 78 articles to be addressed at Town Meeting April 7 at the high school gymnasium.

The Mariner will continue this week and next to outline the articles expected to create discussion and controversy.

Article 28 is already well-known as the one which will request the appropriation or transfer from available funds $65,000 to install a water main running in a northerly direction from King Street to 110 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

If the Board of Water Commissioners amend the article from the Town Meeting floor to include a provision which would empower their board to levy special assessments, or betterments, to users, then the article can pass with a majority vote. If, however, the article remains as it now reads, a two-thirds vote is needed.

Article 32 considers the age-old argument to reduce the School Committee from six to five members. Many members of the current committee have endorsed the citizen's petition; their argument is that stalemated votes would best be avoided by the establishment of a five member committee.

Five thousand dollars is needed for Cohasset's part in an engineering study of Straits Pond, in a combined effort with Hull, and is so requested in Article 34. The study would examine limnological data and ultimately lead to vegetation and pest control. Once this study is done, both towns may be eligible for further state and federal grants to rid the pond of pollution.

The Board of Sewer Commissioners seek, in Article 35, to transfer a 10 acre parcel of land from the Board of Selectmen for school purposes, to be used for a sewage treatment plant. This land was taken by eminent domain at a 1969 Special Town Meeting for school purposes; however, the Commissioners have determined that it is the best site for the implementations of the sewage treatment facility as planned by Metcalf and Eddy Engineers.

Article 36 requests an appropriation of $235,000 to supplement the previous appropriation of $265,000 for working plans and specifications to extend the existing system of sewerage, drainage and sewage disposal to many areas of town.

To meet the supplemental appropriation the Treasurer, with the approval of the Selectmen, may borrow $153,000 in accordance with the Federal Water Pollution Control Act of 1972, if the article passes.

Article 37 asks to amend the by-laws of the town by repealing all presently existing municipal bylaws except those governing the Personnel Classification and Compensation Plan and the Historic District. Substituted in their place will be the revised bylaws that will appear in the printed booklet accompanying the warrant.

The next three article request, respectively, amendments in the Personnel Classification and Compensation Plan, in the Historic District bylaw, and an appropriation to defray the cost of the printing the town bylaws in an indexed loose-leaf form listing legislative acts adopted by Town Meetings, Zoning Bylaws, and all other regulations.

Planners Meet Tonight On New Map Proposal

The Planning Board will hold an open meeting to discuss a proposal for a new town map Thursday, March 22 at 8 p.m. in the Board's office at 43 Elm St.

The request for the map has been made in an article in the Warrant for Town Meeting April 7.

The map would be the base for an accurate street map, property lines and would include topographical features of Cohasset for drainage purposes and would provide exact information on location of physical characteristics such as houses, and watershed and floodplain information.

The cost of the proposed map has been estimated at $103,200 and is considered a valuable tool for town departments and boards as well as residents and developers.

Barbara Power, chairman of the mapping subcommittee, will give the details of the project, explain the precedure and show examples of similar maps which have been prepared for other towns.

Maloney Announces $131,998 CETA Grant

Supt. John Maloney informed the School Committee this week that Cohasset had been awarded a CETA Special Training Program grant for $131,-998.

The grant, which becomes effective this week until March 14 next year, will employ and train 10 individuals in custodial and maintenance areas of the school. These employes are entitled to all the benefits of regular employees, Maloney said, and will not interfere with regular personnel shifts or the hiring of summer help.

Maloney said the head custodians will be serving as supervisors in the training of the new employees, nine of which have already been interviewed and hired by Business Manager John Raferty. Raferty said that their jobs will include carpentry, ceiling and roof repair, retiling floors and painting as well as other custodial duties.

The committee commended Maloney on the application and award of the grant. Raferty will submit a detailed plan of supervision for the workers.

Sewage System Conference

A South Shore conference on innovative sewage systems will be held in Cohasset March 31 from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at St. Stephen's Church.

Speakers for the conference, which is open to all South Shore residents, will outline case histories of several New England towns which solved their sewage problems unconventionally.

Funding and regulating innovative systems will be explained by speakers representing the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering. New techniques to extend the life of an on-lot system will also be explained.

In addition, exhibits sponsored by companies manufacturing innovative systems will be displayed.

Another Winner

"Coach" Ron Emmons is probably less heralded in Cohasset than John LeVangie, the man who led Cohasset High School to its best basketball season in nearly 50 years. Mr. LeVangie, in reaching the semi-finals of the Division III South tournament, deserves all the bouquets he gets.

So does Ron Emmons.

As coach — director — of the CHS Drama Workshop, Mr. Emmons has cajoled, pleaded, led and probably raised his voice an octave or two in leading Cohasset to the finals of the state Drama Festival in Boston March 30 and 31 at John Hancock Hall: mark it on your calendar.

In winning the semi-finals in Duxbury last week, all 11 members of the Cohasset Drama Workshop were named to the all-star cast. The kids performed Story Hour and obviously performed it well.

Last fall, when School Supt. John Maloney commented that Cohasset Schools operate like a 17-jewel watch, we silently hooted, doubting any school anywhere can run with such precision. But a high school that can produce a winning basketball team and a first-rate drama club in the same semester has to be doing something right. If nothing else, it proves the school has depth.

So a well done to John LeVangie, and to Ron Emmons, too.

The Common Revisited

This past Sunday during services of the First Parish Church, the Rev. Edward Atkinson was explaining the Offertory to some young parishioners. It's more than what goes into the "plate," he said. It includes the choir, flowers and ushers, among other things.

His own offering Sunday was a large, green plastic garbage bag, filled with Cohasset Common trash, that he collected before church. The unsightly state of the Common had upset him, and he wrote about it in the Church newsletter (which was excerpted in the Mariner).

He hadn't included any suggestions for citizen action, however, and consequently decided to launch a "Common Care" program with his own first offering. He asked the congregation to "make a pledge, a second kind of offering" by signing the "Common Care" sheet and by collecting an offering from the Common every Sunday through July.

Church participation in "Common Care" offerings, he said, "might say something about us, our church, and might show others how we think about our town."

It might also prompt others, church goers or no, to do the same. It might even prompt people from using the Common as a Village dump.

Wheels Turn Toward Professional Management

The Committee to Survey the Structure of Town Government met with Selectmen last week to review the possibility of establishing a professional management position for the town. The committee agreed to submit a detailed report outlining the position.

Chairman William Weeks said his committee wished to share the results of their research with most of the other boards in town. There is, he said, a strong feeling to have a professional managerial position set up.

He enumerated the benefits the committee believes the position would create, including: the delegation of the Selectmen's day-to-day functions, the assurance of the continuity of the Selectmen's experience to future boards, better coordination between boards and committees, assistance to the Selectmen in pressing for a larger share of government grants and programs, better service to the townspeople, and more careful expenditure of tax dollars.

The committee wanted the support of the Selectmen, Weeks said, in their pursuit for a position which would aid future boards. It was noted that the daily management of the Selectmen's office by Chairman Arthur Clark wouldn't always be available.

Weeks suggested that an executive secretary or appropriate professional be gradually implemented in the Selectmen's office or phased-in over a period of time to insure continuous management.

Donna Magee, the committee's secretary, apprised the board of the salaries and lengths of positions held by officials of three towns interviewed by the committee.

The town manager of Sudbury earns $30,000 a year and has held that post since 1972. Sudbury, of the three towns visited, is the most socio-economically comparable to Cohasset.

Guy Lapriore, Marshfield's first town administrator, appointed two years ago, earns $28,000 annually. It was noted that Lapriore has obtained a million dollars in grants for his town.

Norwell's David Hughes earns $22,000 as executive secretary/accountant, a combined position which has been considered by the committee for Cohasset.

Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray responded to the suggestion that the professional assistant could draw grant money to the town. "It's going to be home rule all the way," she said. Federal grants and programs, she feels, are going to be withheld from Cohasset, especially if the town has benefited from them in the past.

Selectman Henry Ainslie said that the availablity of federal grants boils down to the amount of time a person can devote to finding them.

Ainslie disapproved of a combined manager/accountant position. "You can't be the administrator and watchdog of the accounts at the same time," he said.

He continued, "Whether we do it now or in the future, it is certain to me we will have an administrative assistant, or whatever you want to call it. It is a matter of time."

Committee member Philip Bowditch advised the board that it would be unconscienable of them to leave the position Clark has been filling "to serendipity." He referred to the position as an entity to be a surrogate board and a depository of its knowledge.

Murray was still unconvinced of the feasibility of the position and said she was wary about an appointed "centralized authority," who achieved his post with no input from citizens of the town. She was worried, she said, about employing someone who would divorce the Selectmen's office from the people.

Clark said he had no opposition to the creation of the position and agreed that it was "something to work toward." He added, "I agree, I'm not a permanent fixture."

History Needs Help

Commentary

By Judith Epstein

If you read the literature the Cohasset Historical Society offers at the three adjacent museums on Elm Street, you will be struck by what is described as undaunting efforts to preserve the information, documents, relics and antiques that mark the history of the town.

That is, if you read the literature.

For if you gained entrance to the museums as I did in the middle of March, with the permission and guidance of Curator Robert Fraser (the museums are open during the summer months only) you would note that preservation and restoration did not mark many of the town's relics in these charming old building. You would also freeze your tootsies off.

As we walked through the Historic House, the Maritime Museum and the Independence our breath was visible, hanging in the air of the rooms that seemed surprised to contain off-season intruders. Fraser said the buildings couldn't be heated because they lacked insulation — as well as the money the Society would need to sink into a very costly project.

"The cold is not as damaging as the heat," Fraser said. "In the summer it gets toasty, and that is worse for the records. I've seen it 130 degrees in the summer and 20 degrees below zero in the winter.

These extreme temperatures and their concomitant fluctuations in humidity must surely be prime factors in the deterioration of the materials the Historical Society has taken such pains to collect and arrange so beautifully. There are state laws which protect public documents in carefully controlled atmospheres, within fireproof walls, where dehumidifiers and constant temperatures help to insure the longevity of precious records that give a clue of what went on before.

Why has not a better safeguard been practiced by the Historical Society, if only for the purchase of a vault (given the paucity of funds) to protect the most tender of these relics?

Granted, the Lothrop House is being restored and will in the near future house the gowns from the Independence and some of the museums' valuable papers, books and documents. However, in the meantime and certainly for many years past, the contents of the museums have been subjected to other ravages of time besides the polarities of temperature.

There were photographs fading to nonexistence and books with leather bindings crumbling away onto the shelves. There were documents and papers obliterated by the yellow of age and the green of mildew. There were maniquins, whose faces were deformed by the grime of dirty air and again, mildew, modelling once-gorgeous gowns left fully exposed to the wear and tear of an admiring but careless public. And there was the vestige of an appresively hot day, illustrating just how hot it must get in the second story of those places: a curled and twisted candle stood grotesquely in its antique candleholder.

The Historical Society and the people of Cohasset should take steps to better preserve the contents of these museums. I know, having once studied library science, that restoration centers exist, such as the one in Andover which is run by a Captain Cunha — where papers and books of historical societies and libraries can be taken by enterprising individuals who will be taught efficient and inexpensive restoration techniques before their materials deteriorate away forever.

Fraser said he fears fire and theft of the treasures more than their lack of preservation and supposed he will continue doing what has been done — nothing, until the Society gets more money. Before the money arrives, however, something can and should be done, at least to check the more silent, insidious marauders of decay.

Merchants Attack

had he received a phone call apprising him of the changes the Planning Board was recommending. He claimed that the Town doesn't contribute to the maintenance of his property, particularly snow removal, and expressed outrage at what he termed a lack of courtesy to the Town's largest tax-paying entity.

Wayne Sawchuck, former Planning Board member and chairman, suggested that the board withdraw the article. He said that the state oversees the number of curb cuts allowed on a state highway and that townspeople needn't be concerned that all future lots will be only 10,000 feet. He felt that the proposed restrictions were far too severe for an area so heavily developed already.

Board member John Bradley, chairing the meeting for absent chairman Glenn Pratt, pointed out to the 70 people in attendance that the hearings on the proposed zoning changes gave townspeople an opportunity to air their views. He maintained that the board desired an orderly development along the highway and felt an area of 10,000 feet for a business lot was too small and that unless change was made 3A would become a series of small lots.

Other changes proposed for the highway business district would increase width from 100 to 200 feet, front yard from 50 to 100 feet, side yard from 20 to 30 feet, rear depth from 20 to 50 feet and coverage from 50 to 30 per cent. The height requirement remains at 35 feet and a buffer zone of 50 feet between business or multi-family dwellings also would be required.

Another article proposing changes in area regulations for the Downtown Business zoning by-law would increase area from 0 to 5,000 square feet, frontage from 20 to 50 feet, width from 20 to 50 feet with the rest of the requirements remaining the same.

It was noted that if the change is made, existing businesses again would become non-conforming and property values would decrease. Harbormaster Harry Ritter questioned the intent of the board to restrict the building capabilities of a piece of property and referred specifically to the plot between the Corner Market and Curtis Compact which is under 5,000 feet in area as a blight to the town.

Bradley commented that land not built on should be subject to regualtions. The Planning Board, he said, will vote on the article changes which also include common driveways and repairs in wetlands, and will make their recommendations on the Town Meeting floor.

Treatment Plant

Thomas Hintz of Metcalf and Eddy Engineers, the firm hired to plan the facility, said that the plant would be situated 1500 feet away from the Deer Hill School and approximately 600 feet away from the Osgood School. An access road to the plant, they said, would be at Smith Place with no entrance available from the school area.

From an engineering viewpoint, Hintz said, there is some ledge rock in the higher ground bordering the area and wetlands in the lower elevations. The actual facilities, he said, would be placed on level land. The site was also described as being within a type of natural ampitheater.

Supt. John Maloney said he was concerned about on-shore winds carrying any possible odor from the plant to the elementary schools. Similary, Committee member Pat Walsh questioned the possible danger of vapors escaping during the sewage treatment process and affecting school children.

Hintz emphasized that all treatment units would be enclosed with many of the cleaning units contained underground. He anticipated neither noise nor odor from the facility. He said, "The biological contactors" used in the treatment process would prevent the creation of gasses or aerosols.

School Committee Chairman Doris Golden questioned the availability of land to build onto Deer Hill School should Joseph Osgood School close in the future if the treatment plant were constructed at the proposed site. Committee member Frank England also queried whether the School Department would have any further use of the land as an athletic field.

Mary O'Brien, a concerned parent, said she was familiar with the land where the treatment plant would be built and commented that it was the flattest area of the 10 acres and felt it would make a good athletic field. She questioned the legality of the Commissioners planning on this land which she understood to be used only for school purposes.

Maloney said that the Board of Sewer Commissioners were proceeding in the proper manner by seeking the required Town Meeting vote to transfer land taken by eminent domain for school purposes at a 1969 Special Town Meeting.

Hobbs invited the Committee to join the Commissioners and the consulting engineer for a walking tour of the site. The Committee said it would plan to take up the offer at a future date and postponed further discussion on the site.

Selectmen Favor Town Meeting Article Removing Police From Civil Service

Selectmen commented last week at the request of the Committee to Survey the Structure of Town Government, on the proposed article in the annual town meeting warrant that would exempt future policemen from Civil Service.

"Civil Service is unnecessary," said Selectman Arthur Clark. "We have unions and collective bargaining now. Civil Service is too bulky and unwieldy a thing to work through. It's the most mixed up mess you ever saw up there."

Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray took a similar stance. "It took us eight months to get a permanent intermittent list. Their computer is always broken down, and the men in the Police Department are being hurt, as well as the town for being minus police officers because it takes so long for names to come down."

Selectman Henry Ainslie agreed, and commented that a Civil Service exam ination isn't going to yield a person better qualified than if hired solely by Selectmen. He noted that the passing grade for the Civil Service police officer's test is still being decided in court.

Selectmen said they would develop a testing system for determining the qualifications of a police officer as well as periodic physical and psychological evaluations. They plan to include with the article regulations for police officers not hired under Civil Service.

Clothing With A Flair For The "Young" Woman Of Any Age
Stop By and See Us

Hi, Friends:

We have found a very capable person to do our jean hemming. We will be able to have them finished for you within a day or two and the cost to you will be only $1.50. We will pay the rest as a gift to you.

Two salesmen, one from Oscar De La Renta and the other from Emily were in the shop last week. They both volunteered very positive information regarding the Gloria Vanderbilt jeans. One told me about a manufacturers' survey in which the Vanderbilt jeans finished #1 for fit. The other commented that they are by far the best for fit and durability. I hope you will stop by and look at the new jeans and sea spray colors we received last week. They are both super.

Hope to see you soon,
Janet

To Some Computer An-math-ma

By Lois Martin

It's ironic. The survival of old-fashioned arithmetic will be left in the hands of people who avoided calculus like the plague.

Don't blame us. It's because of the calculator and you math-minded people who couldn't wait to get one. We who mastered our multiplication tables, struggled with our algebraic equations and conquered our geometric tangents got out of the whole mathematical mess as soon as possible.

For us words were more understandable than figures. We weren't inclined to pursue anything dealing with numbers beyond checking the milkman's bill. That's not been true of others who's eyes light up when challenged with a complicated physics problem.

But the survival of arithmetic has been threatened in the process. Because some people hankered for yet more and quicker math, they took to the computer like the rest of us reach for a typewriter. In so doing, they may have surrendered their own memory banks of multiplying and dividing to say nothing of their square root.

PATCHES

Now it's up to us to remember how to do those dratted things. We'll be taken out of nursing homes at the turn of the century to recant the tables. It'll be a folksy art, like embroidery, brought back like woodcarving. My grandchildren will come to me and tease to hear about substracting like we used to do it in the olden days.

And what'll they do with the pencil. It's only used to dial the telephone or punch the calculator. When a youngster starts school, he'll get his little calculator kit with extra batteries instead of paper and pencils.

Last week at a School Committee meeting, parents and teachers were discussing the need for a computer program in the high school. They're right, of course, what with most of the world feeding information to a machine for feedback instead of to one another. But during the conversation, one man said "The computer has become ubiquitous."

That presented a dilemma. Not only was I put in the position of gleaning the concept of the computer, I had to go look up the word ubiquitous. Apparently that means being present, or "seeming to be everywhere. . .omnipresent." The man who said that was adroit (right on) in his analysis. The fact that he "figures" at MIT gave me pause. I'd not have taken exception to a word he said.

I've never had a knack with figures. The difference between calculator and computer escapes me, except I suspect one is the actor is the super star, or beer to champagne. I had no trouble paying homage to Einstein on his birthday last week, it's just that I never understood what he did during his productive lifetime. You math people don't realize there are a lot of us around still marveling at telephone transformers.

Of course there's a bit of jealousy here too. Everyone has a snappy looking calculator except me. No sense my having one. I'd be like a toddler lugging around a book in case someone might want to read it to me.

Women open their purses and whip out swish calculators housed in shiny gold cases. Office workers have them on their desks, plugged in like they use them. Students get them for Christmas and trade them in on more sophisticated ones as they move through school. It makes me nervous, all that silent exchange with a coded machine made in Texas. What kind of a person understands "MC," "MR" and the big red "C."

I'm the only one in my house who neither owns nor fathoms the calculator. I remind them, however, that I'm also the only one who understands recipe abbreviations. So far as I know they still value a cake from my oven to a total on that little black box.

One of the young men is inveterately smitten with the world of calculators and computers. He bought a super calculator that he prizes for its capabilities. He said to me, "You've got no idea what this thing can do."

Darn right I don't. Someone's got to stand by to go over his multiplication tables with him. If he thinks a calculator is going to get ubiquitous in my kitchen, he's miscalculated.

D'Angelo Concert Director

Paul J. d'Angelo of Plymouth, a music teacher in Norwell schools, will direct the Falmouth Interfaith choir and accompanying chamber orchestra in a performance of the contemporary masterpiece "King David" by Arthur Honegger with a number of area musicians as soloists and orchestra members. The concert will be at St. Peter's church on Court in Plymouth, April 1 at 3 p.m. Admission is free, donations welcome.

D'Angelo has chosen as narrator for the oratorio Michael Helfen who taught English at Norwell High School in the early 1970's where he and d'Angelo teamed to produce "West Side Story."

Helfen is now teacher of English and theater at Falmouth High School

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

This week's column is a hodgepodge, for though a young man's fancy turns to love in the spring, mine rivets on the mundane.

All of a sudden, there's an urge to throw out things, tidy closets, get things squared away before it's too nice to be indoors. Getting rid of clutter pays off, for I'm finding recipes I haven't even used. Not that more aren't always welcome — we're waiting for your favorite still.

Here is Carol VanOsdol's recipe for those who are looking forward to the day when we unveil ourselves for that first appearance on the beach or poolside. Whenever Carol and fond husband decide it's time to diet again, this is the type of dish that is both tasty and slimming. It serves 6.

1 egg
6 oz. cottage cheese
Garlic powder, salt & pepper to taste
1 oz. grated cheese to sprinkle on top

Spray casserole dish with PAM (non-fattening) and bake 35 to 40 min.

Although we'll probably be greeted by biting East winds rather than balmy breezes as we head out today, the calendar happily proclaims it's spring.

So, see if you can stop doing cartwheels around the kitchen long enough to prepare these Sour Cream Pancakes, a recipe Hope Warren recommends.

1 egg, beat the white slightly, add yolk
1 c. sour cream
1 c. buttermilk
Sift together twice the following:
1 c. sifted flour
1 tsp soda
2 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
1 tsp. sugar

Add dry ingredients to liquids. Stir lightly. Batter should be lumpy. Cook on griddle until bubbles appear and turn to cook other side.

Everybody who collects recipes has a batch cluttering up the kitchen drawer. I'm certainly no exception. While spring cleaning, I unearthed some old clippings and a notebook passed on to me by Edna Phillips. One yellowed Marjorie Mill's column had suggestions for hanging out clothes and readers were advised to heat their clothespins in the over before venturing out into the cold. Another reader from Gardiner, Me. suggested putting the hot clothespins in a cloth bag and hanging it around one's neck as a warm chest protector: A third tip for those days before the advent of the dryer recommended wiping the clothes line with a solution of salt and water to prevent the clothes from freezing. On warm, windy days we can all save on electricity by hanging our wash on the line. Our reward is the fresh, clean smell of the laundry and a few minutes to browse around the garden to see what's coming up. Back in the kitchen again, we might try preparing David Shain's Cauliflower Au Gratin. It served 4 to 6.

1 large cauliflower, divided into flowerets, boiled, drained.
½ tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. white pepper
1½ c. white sauce
⅓ c. coarsely grated sharp cheddar cheese

Preheat broiler. Arrange cauliflower on an ungreated shallow casserole. Season with salt and pepper and cover evenly with sauce. Sprinkle with cheese and drizzle with 1 T melted butter. Broil 5 inches from heat until cheese melts.

Meet Sammis McLain... Illustrator

By Joanne Young

Sammis McLain has the spirit and enthusiasm of some of the characters in the books he illustrates. When he talks about animating the woodchucks in "Uncle Ben and Maude," one feels the energy and care that went into interpreting these rather unattractive animals.

When you finish the book, you have met two of the most appealing woodchucks ever to grace a child's bookshelf. What you may not be aware of is the research at the Museum of Natural History that went into these charming characters.

Sammis McLain, son of Mr. and Mrs. David McLain of Elm Street, grew up in Cohasset. He has happy memories of a life which eventually led him to his present career, and gives credit for his interest in art illustration to many friends and mentors. In the Cohasset schools, Sam was always dawring and receiving encouragement from his teachers. He fondly recalls his fourth grade teacher, Alice Daunt.

At the Cohasset Common Art Festival, he displayed and sold watercolors, acrylic paintings and pen and ink drawings. He won first prize at the South Shore Plaza competition with his 4x8 canvas of "The House of Usher."

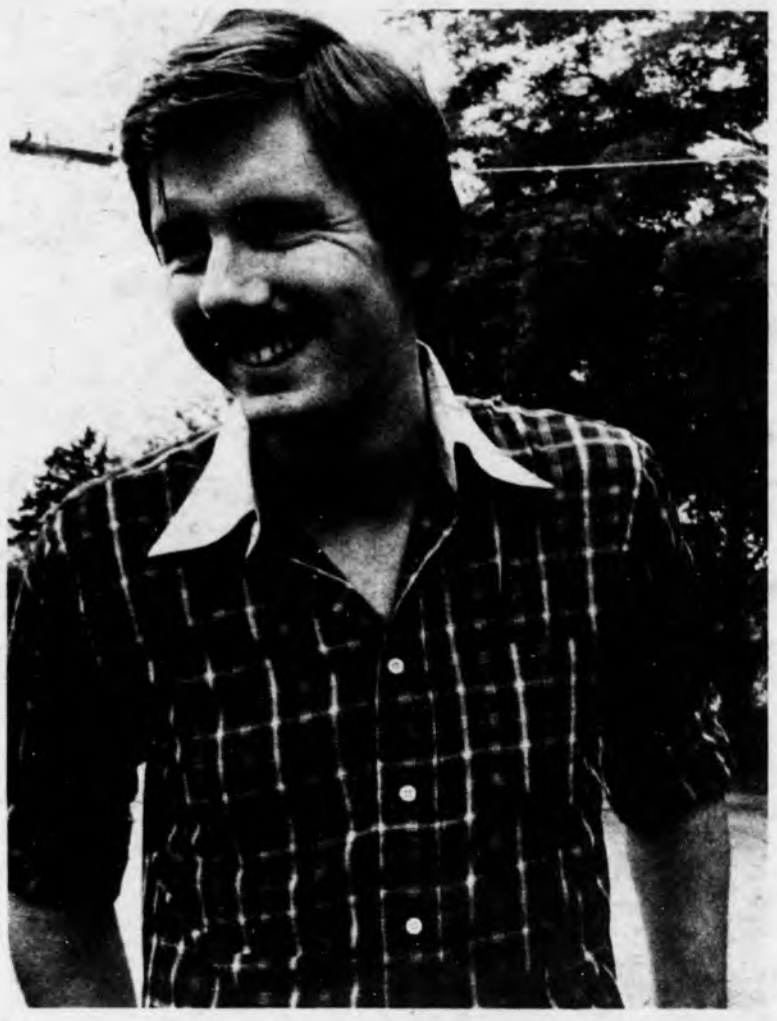
His grandmother generously supported his efforts, and offered to match the prize money he received. With this, he spent eight weeks in Paris.

He was a productive member of the Cohasset Dramatic Club and apprenticed to Sheldon Ripley, designing sets. He remembers all productions which required his favorite Victorian stage settings. The year Sam graduated from Cohasset High School, the scholarship awarded by the Dramatic Club was not offered. The Club, realizing the help he had given for so many years, reversed their decision and on the day of his graduation, Sam received the scholarship. He is still warmed and pleased by that honor.

McLain entered Boston University, planning to major in set design. After two years, he transferred to the Art Institute of Boston to major in art illustration. He had decided that theatre production required too much of one's time, devotion and energies, whereas illustration was more of a collaborative effort. He realized "In drawing a picture you are more in charge of your craft."

In 1970, when he graduated from the Art Institute, he found little work for an illustrator in the Boston area, and after working for his parents, he left for New York City. "I decided to do illustrating or stop thinking about it." There were more picture books published in New York, and within six weeks, he had his first drawing in the New York Times "Week in Review" section.

In his own charming fashion. Sam tells this story: "I received the assignment on a Wednesday, and submitted my drawing that Friday. I was not sophisticated in New York prices and had no idea of the market. I finished the pen and ink drawing and would have been grateful for any amount. The editor said 'I can pay you only $150.00 for this work, we do not pay very much at the Times.' Little did he know how pleased I was!" For the next year, Sam continued to draw for the Times travel section.



During this time, Sam produced films for the program Seasame Street, and founded a company called "The Producing Group." This involved moving about camera and heavy construction equipment. More assignments followed, as "The Producing Group" received permission to film in New York. He managed live crews of professionals and non-professionals and discovered a talent for organization.

In 1977, he produced "Old McDonald Had a Farm" for Sesame Street, for which he scouted locations. He doubled as a set dresser and designer of the story boards. The filming and editing was done by his partner. He still wanted to illustrate children's books. He had always wanted to produce Walt Disney type films and extravaganzas, and today his illustrations reveal this interest from a cinematic point of view. In his mind's eye, he has a learned film technique and cites works which have influenced him, such as the Trauffaut book on Hitchcock.

Science fiction and Frankenstein films have appealed to him and the illustrations for the manuscript of "Super Spy K 13 in Outer Space" are jewel-like in their conception and color. He used photographs of the human body for references when drawing the characters. He hopes the book will be ready for the Booksellers Convention in May, as it takes about a year from the time a book is conceived to publication, and the eventual return of his art work.

During his work for Sesame Street Sam McLain met Northern Calloway (who plays David of that show), who became intrigued with a picture of a Black boy on Sam's drawing board. Calloway interested Carol Hall (who currently has her play "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" on Broadway) in writing a book and from this collaboration came "I Been There." Sam illustrated, Northern edited and Carol wrote the book, a very happy effort.

In September of 1976, Northern and Carol took a copy to their manager, who sold it to Doubleday Publishers. So Sam McLain came "through the back door" to his first love, illustrating children's books. His next contribution to Sesame Street will be to illustrate a story, delightfully titled "My Mother Shops on Fourteenth Street."

Sammis McLain

"Super Vroomer," Sam's second book, is an actual story of Northern Calloway's childhood spent in Harlem and Central Park. Sam also illustrated for Sesame Street and Electric Company magazines. His intention now is to do magazine illustrations and book covers that are adult-oriented. His portfolio includes paperback books and figures for T.V. Guide. He particularly likes to do drawings of people thinking, as it presents a challenge to his imagination.

One of the most interesting details of the interview with this talented and successful Cohasset native concerned his personal relations to his work. When commissioned to illustrate the children's books now completed, his part was to give form and credibility to an idea in the author's mind. An illustrator can become possessive of his creation so that the characters in the story become his as originals, not an extention of the manuscript. This is why many illustrators try their hand at both writing and contributing the pictures.

After talking with Sam McLain, we are sure that if he decided to write a story for children, his positive outlook on life and his talent for relating to what piques a child's curiosity and flowers his imagination would produce a wondrous tale, enhanced by his fabulous illustrations. As the protagonist, Jesse, in "Super Vroomer" says: "Sometimes winning is gettin' a medal. And sometimes it's just plain knowin' you the best in the race. And they ain't always the same thing."

Conflict Of Interest Charges Leveled Against Three Officials

By Judith Epstein

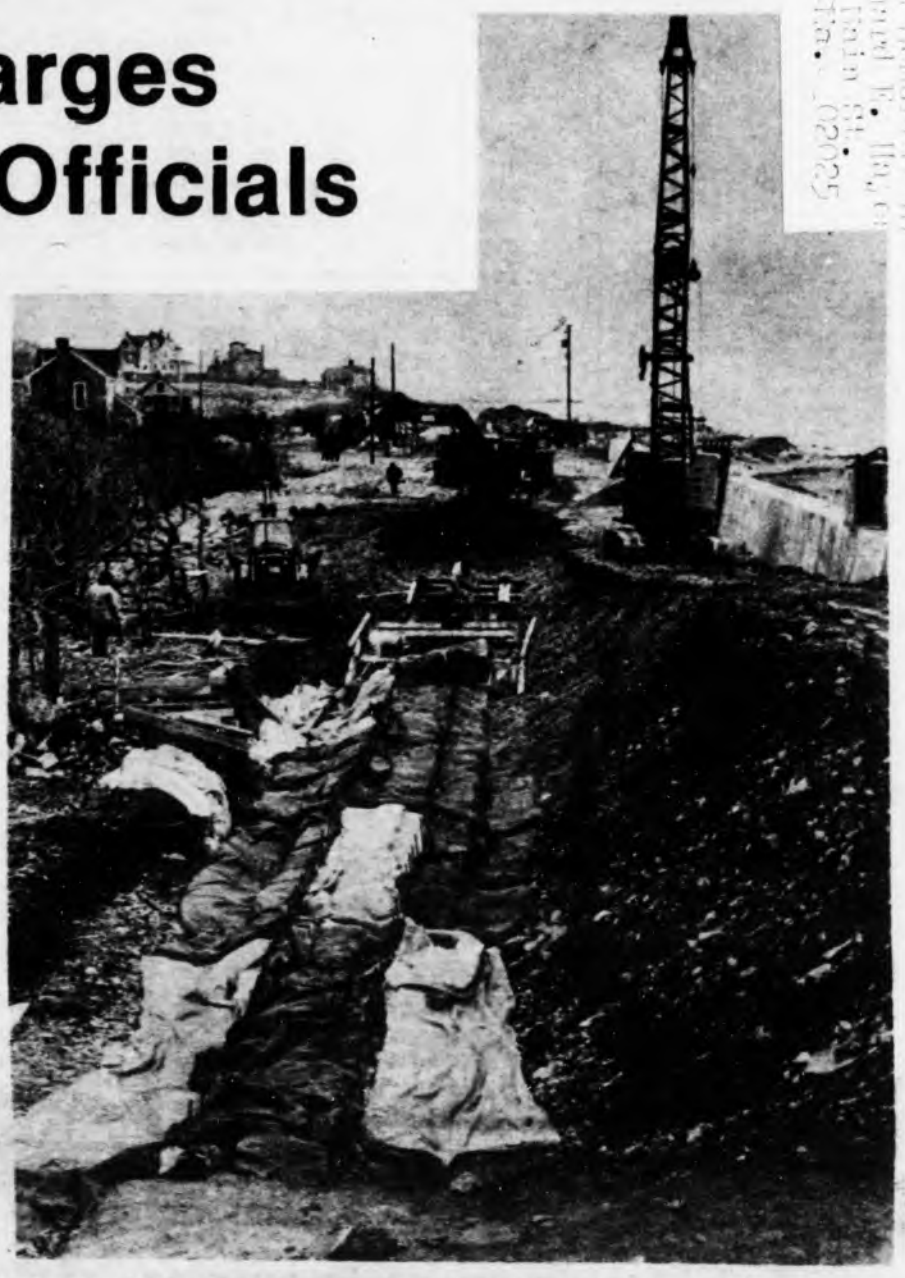
Conflict of interest allegations against two members and a former member of the Planning Board were still being considered by Town Counsel this week, after consideration was deferred by Selectmen last week.

Building Inspector James Litchfield and Eric Pearson, owner of Highway Motor Sales, requested in separate letters a determination of possible violations of the conflict of interest law by John Bradley, who is vice-chairman of the Planning Board.

Pearson also directed allegations concerning the possible conflict of interest charge at Glenn Pratt, Chairman of the Planning Board and candidate for Selectman, and Roberta Leary, former member and consultant to the board.

Pratt and Leary have categorically denied the allegations. The Mariner was unable to reach Bradley for comment before press time.

Litchfield said in his letter that Bradley, an attorney with a Boston law firm, served as an agent for William Pinkerson of Ohio, owner of a lot on Surry Drive, in obtaining a permit for a sewage disposal system to be installed on that property. A disposal works construction permit was issued by the Board of Health Feb. 12.



(This action has met with considerable controversy as questions have been raised over the suitability of the land to contain a septic tank system. The Kuhns of Surrey Drive, who own the property abutting the Pinkerson lot, represented by Atty. William Golden, obtained a restraining order March 15 to prohibit any construction from taking place on that land. The order was issued against Litchfield, Thomas Sweeney, William Pinkerson and three members of the Board of Health. An April 9 trial at Dedham Superior Court will be held to review the complaint.)

Litchfield said that subsequently a building permit application was submitted to his office on March 7 by the potential owner and contractor, Thomas Sweeny of Assinippi, who sought to build an eight-room colonial house on the property. Litchfield issued a building permit on March 15, he said within the 30 days he had to act under the provisions of the Building Code since receipt of the application.

On the afternoon of March 15, Litchfield was served with a summons from Atty. Joseph Hurley of Braintree on behalf of the Pinkersons (who had not yet received the issued building permit), with the complaint that Litchfield, as Building Inspector and individually, had wrongfully withheld the permit when all requirements for it had been met.

Litchfield said he than contacted Eugene Price, the real estate agent for the School Budget Up 2 Per Cent

The School Committee voted to reduce the new school budget from 2.4 per cent to 2 per cent this week. The decision was made at the conclusion of a public hearing on the new budget, which attracted approximately 20 people.

The $13,900 reduction, to be taken from the unemployment compensation account, will yield a final budget figure of $3,531,451.

Business manager John Raftery said that this year's appropriation of $30,000 for unemployment compensation, an account kept at the suggestion of Town Accountant William Signorelli, was way too high; only $1,200 had been spent so far. Raftery sanctioned the committee's move to reduce next year's account of $25,000.

School Supt. John Maloney outlined a broad overview of the budget, which he said, has responded to a declining enrollment by eliminating two elementary teachers, one high school mathematics teacher and one part-time elementary vocal music teacher.

The declining enrollment trend, he said, is well established in Cohasset and through projections based on past experience, the numbers of students currently in school, and estimated population figures, class size can be computed. Class size is easiest to

Cohasset Seeks Scituate Harbor Help

Selectmen met last week with Scituate Harbormaster John Simons and Town Administrator Richard Bennett to discuss concerns over the use of Cohasset Harbor by residents of both towns.

An imprecise boundary divides the Towns of Scituate and Cohasset through harbor waters from Government Island Pier to the first dolphin buoy at the breakwater. This invisible line also divides Norfolk and Plymouth Counties.

Selectman Arthur Clark expressed concern about Scituate boats routinely moored in Cohasset Harbor, both in and out of Scituate waters, and asked how Scituate intends to contribute to the maintenance of the harbor.

"We do everything," Clark said. "We do all the work, we supply the ramp to put the boats in the water and parking for Scituate residents. We have spent a lot of money dredging the harbor. What is Scituate going to do with their money?"

Clark further enumerated services rendered to Scituate in the harbor including use of water and electrical outlets for work and repairs made on boats, flood lighting, police night patrol and maintenance and inspection of mooring tackle.

Bennett said he and Simons had worked out a tentative proposal which offers Cohasset the return of half the mooring fees on Scituate boats in Cohasset waters. Mooring fees are $1 per linear foot per boat, except for commercial craft, Asst. Scituate Harbormaster Harry Ritter said.

"The total liner footage of Scituate boats is 1587 feet," Ritter said. The $790 that would be coming in as Scituate's contribution of half their mooring fees won't serve to help in a $25,000 harbor budget."

Brown, Gjesteby, Kinchla In School Race

Four candidates are seeking to fill two three-year seats on the School Committee in Town Elections on Saturday, April 14. Announcing this week were incumbent Irene Brown, Martha Gjesteby, and John Kinchla. Gerard Reed announced his candidacy the previous week.

Diana Davis Kornet is an unopposed candidate to fill the Committee's one-year vacancy.

Irene Brown

Irene Brown of 35 Norfolk Road has for the past 10 years worked as a Girl Scout leader, school volunteer, Communications Council member, Youth Hockey treasurer, Recreation Commissioner and for 18 months as a School Committee member. She believes her service to youth has familiarized her with their parents and educational goals and thus is also announcing her candidacy for a three-year term.

Martha Gjesteby

Martha Gjesteby of Old Pasture Road has announced her candidacy for a three-year term on the School Committee.

She is on the Capital Budget and Joint Regional Transportation Committees. Her other community activities include: chairman of the School Communication Council Steering Committee, co-chairman of the Senior

Roadrace By-The-Sea Coming Sunday

The Cohasset Jaycees are sponsoring the third annual Roadrace By-The-Sea Sunday April 1 at 1 p.m.

The 10,000 meter or 6.2 mile race will be run along Elm Street, Margin Street, Atlantic Avenue, Jerusalem Road, Forest Ave, North Main Street, Highland Avenue to the finish line in front of the Town Hall.

The first three finishers in each class will earn gold, silver and bronze medals, respectively, which will be awarded by Selectmen. The Jaycees will also present the first 200 runners with T-shirts.

Three classes of runners, those under 18, 18-39, and 40 and over may register late and check-in at the Town Hall between 10 a.m. and noon Sunday morning. Explorer Post Medical Aid will provide assistance as will the Boy Scouts.

So far several hundred runners between the ages of 8 and 61 have registered for the race. Five hundred to 1,000 runners are expected to participate.

The Cohasset Police have again offered their help in traffic control. A request has been made of residents to restrain their dogs from 1 p.m. to 2:30 the afternoon of the race; compliance will be appreciated.

Mark Duggan, a national class runner who won the 1977 race, said that the Roadrace By-The-Sea is the most beautiful course he has ever run. David McGilverey, the young man who ran across the country for the Jimmy Fund will be among the running this year, as well.

Town merchants are supporting the race with prizes and gift certificates. Autohaus is donating a vehicle as the pace car, as Spensley Chevrolet did last year. Cohasset News and Dwyers Cleaners are assisting with advertising.

Cohasset Jaycees Roadrace Committee Chairman Roy Fitzsimmons and committee members Gary Drinkwater, John Kinchla, Allen DeVito, Mike Equi, Jean DuVoisin, Sharpless Jones, Tom Fiore and Dick Audet want to thank everyone for their great support.

Kindergarten Orientation

An Orientation Session for parents of Joseph Osgood School Kindergarten enrollees for September will be held at the Cushing Room of Cushing Plaza April 5, at 10 a.m.

Among those present and commenting to the group will be Dr. John Maloney, superintendent of schools, Dr. Robert Sceery, school physician and Dr. Lawrence Lieberman, education consultant.

The Kindergarten teachers will discuss in detail the Kindergarten program and an opportunity for questions will be provided. Sign-up sheets will be available for parents to indicate their choice of dates for their child's participation in the student screening program described below.

The Screening Program will be held April 23, 24, 25, 26 and 27. The procedure will include each child's participation in a two and one half hour session as part of a group of ten students becoming familiar with the life of a Kindergartener. At the same time the parent will participate in an interview dealing with the developmental history of the child.

Harbor

Bennett reminded Cohasset Selectmen excise taxes are paid to the town where the boat is moored, according to new legislation that takes effect July 1.

In the past, Ritter noted, boats were assessed in the town where they were stored on land as of Jan. 1; consequently Cohasset lost out on the payment of taxes on boats which would occupy Cohasset waters druing the summer, but wintered elsewhere.

Clark commented that because many of Scituate's commercial boats (for which no tax assessment is collected) are moored in Cohasset, the town will still fare poorly. He added that the law also states that 50 per cent of assessment must be spent for harbor maintenance.

Bennett said that he had two purposes in mind in dealing with Cohasset — they were to take responsibility for his town's waters and to be fair to Cohasset. He said that Scituate in now undergoing an expansion movement to increase moorings and therefore the number of boats and revenue coming to his town.

Charles Fink, chairman of the Cohasset Harbor Committee said Cohasset Harbor can contain 425 boats, and that the harbor would be hard-pressed to increase its moorings with the 32 acres of water left at low tide.

Pratt, Leary Deny Conflict Charges

Chairman of the Planning Board Glenn Pratt and former board member Roberta Leary have denied allegations that they may have been in conflict of interest while serving the board.

Pratt said that his handling of a local real estate development did not come under Planning Board jurisdiction and that he had not taken part in any Planning Board consideration of it.

"The charges are completely false and represent a basic misunderstanding of the Planning Board's role in such matters," Pratt said in a statement released this week.

"The development in question so thoroughly and clearly met existing zoning by-law requirements that the Planning Board had no jurisdiction and was required by law so to state. To be certain, however, that there could be absolutely no question of improper action. I did not take any part whatsoever in the consideration of this routine matter."

Mrs. Leary, who was hired by the Planning Board as a consultant to draw up business zoning schemes for potential development of Route 3A, also responded to the allegation of conflict of interest made against her.

"My attorney advises me that my consulting, rather than prohibited, is clearly permitted by law. What the law doesn't allow is my appearing before the board on behalf of an applicant for subdivision, site plan or other board approval."

Conflict Of Interest

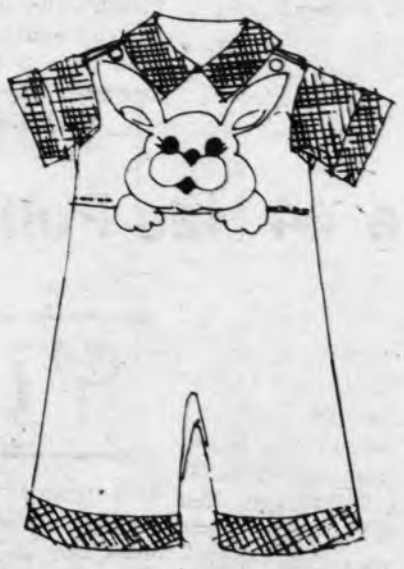
sale of the lot from the Pinkersons to Sweeney, to ask him the meaning of the court order. Price returned Litchfield's call within 15 minutes, the letter states, and informed him that Bradley would have the complaint dropped if he issued the building permit.

The next morning, Litchfield continued, Attorney Hurley called Litchfield, and told him the charges were being dropped. Hurley explained that he had been under the impression that the application for the building permit had been filed in February rather than March, and that Littlefield had been deliberately holding up its issuance.

Pearson not only questioned the actions of Bradley as an agent — while a Planning Board member — for persons purchasing and developing tracts of land in Cohasset, but also the actions of Glenn Pratt, while a member and Chairman of the board, and of Roberta Leary, as a former member.

Pearson noted that Roberta Leary was paid $900 for consulting services to the board for plans outlining the development capabilities of Route 3A. She was hired after resigning from the board — before two years had elapsed, a period of time which the law requires that former town employees must wait before resuming business with the town.



Pearson alleged that Pratt, a candidate for Selectman, has been purchasing and is currently developing land known as the Bigelow Estate, as a business.

A question as to the legality of the hearing held by the Planning Board on March 15, was raised by the businessman, as well. Pearson said that the Board failed to notify the Town of Scituate by mail of the hearing regarding proposed changes in the Highway Business area of Route 3A. Pearson also mentioned that the towns of Hingham and Hull may not have been notified.

Pearson had voiced objections to the proposed bylaw changes which would affect his business on Route 3A at the March 15 meeting. He also claimed that the mimeographed notice apprising him of the meeting had been legible.

(A legal notice appeared in the Patriot Ledger Thursday, March 22 announcing another hearing on proposed bylaw changes Friday, April 6.)

Spring Has Sprung!

TM Warrant Review

Town Meeting-goers will address 78 articles beginning April 7 at the high school gymnasium. The Mariner has been and concludes here a preview of those articles that are controversial.

Article 44 should create a stir in requesting the town to empower Selectmen to petition the General Court to exempt future members of the Police Department from Civil Service regulations.

Selectmen approve of the article and have voiced their opinion Civil Service is too unwieldy a process to work through, especially when awaiting eligibility lists and appointments for available position. Selectmen feel Civil Service tests have been outmoded and that their board can determine qualified testing systems.

Police, however, generally view Civil Service as an important and viable recourse, in the event the town takes action against an officer and to examine the circumstances under Civil Service law — the last word in the dismissal of a police officer.

The next 27 articles deal with proposed zoning by-law changes. Most amend use and area regulations in various sections within the zoning by-laws, particularly wetlands and business districts.

Article 71, submitted by the Planning Board, will probably receive the most attention. The proposal requests a change in required area of a Highway District business lot from 10,000 square feet to 40,000 feet. An increase in frontage from 50 to 200 feet is also included as well as many other increases in area requirements.

Merchants already established on Rte. 3A are outraged at this article which would force their land and property to become non-conforming and they claim less valuable. They have their opponents, however, who feel 10,000 square feet for a business lot is too small, and that it would encourage the development of many small businesses along 3A which is already too congested and riddled with curb cuts.

Article 64 again cited dramatic changes for the area of a business lot in the Downtown District which would increase area from 0 to 5,000 square feet and frontage from 20 to 50 feet, width from 20 to 50 feet, with the rest of the current requirements remaining the same.

The Planning Board has been trying for some time now to have the town topographically mapped properly with aerial photography. These maps would show land contours, streets, property lines, drainage patterns, flood plain and watershed protection areas and physical structures.

A similar article asking for $50,000 was voted down last year, and the prognosis for this year's consideration of the article remains clear because of the price tag of $63,000. Last week's hearing disclosed that the lowered price for the maps, which initially was set at $103,000, would exclude an assessor's map but would allow for the topographical base maps.

Article 75 requests that the town appropriate $7,200 to train six firefighters as Emergency Medical Technicians. EMT's have helped considerably in aiding residents safely to hospitals and saving lives of those who may otherwise have been victims of choking or heart attacks.

Editorial

See How They Run

The Cohasset town elections lack drama. With less than three weeks to go before voters decide who to put at the helm, the campaign has proved about as interesting as a TV test pattern.

The lack of fervor to date is disappointing. With crowded races for the School Committee and the Board of Selectmen, the two most important elected bodies in town, one might presume that enthusiasm would rule. So far it hasn't.

All that could change quickly if the candidates take steps to publicly articulate their positions. We would like to know, for example, how the candidates for Selectman feel about removing police from Civil Service. What is their position on hiring an executive secretary or a town administrator? What would they do about Cohasset's paucity of cemetery space? With five candidates running for one seat, there have to be different answers, and the voters ought to know what they are.

The present School Committee is a relatively conservative body, determined to keep a tight rein on spending. How do the candidates stand on the money issue. What are their philosophies on education? We think the voters ought to know and the more they know the better.

Cohasset elections can stir the political pot and continue to remain fittingly appropriate for a small town. Bumper stickers and political placards are unnecessary. Public statements aimed at the issues are important if the decision-making process is to be an intelligent one.

School Budget

compute in the elementary grades, Maloney explained, when children don't have all the elective and sequential courses of a high school student. However, he added, the projected figures for enrollment have already been overestimated.

The Joseph Osgood School, which shows a reduction of $34,453 in its budget, will also be shy two non-teaching activity aides. This year's three kindergarten classes are staffed with two teachers and first-grade classes are staffed with four teachers, with class size eventually moving, Maloney said, to a ratio of 20 students to 1 teacher.

Currently Kindergarten class size is under 25 children and next year's is expected to be about 23; first grade classes this year are slightly higher than 20 and next year's class is projected for an even 20, if the same number of teachers are retained.

These grades gave rise to the most discussion at the hearing as parents voiced concern that a reduction to three first grade teachers in response to low enrollment figures, could seriously affect their children. One mother noted that the kindergarten and first grade classes she has observed are very confusing and that the teacher can't pay adequate attention to all the children.

Maloney said that he agreed with the parent and with the educators who recommend small classes in the first two year of school. He said he was bound by statute, however, to notify untenured teachers by April 15 that they will not be re-employed for the following school year, and that as of the moment it looked as though either three or four first grade teachers may be employed.

This notification procedure has been necessary in the Cohasset school system since last year, so as not to hire staff withou t first determining the staffing needs of a class, Maloney said.

Article 44 Has Police Uptight

Letters

To the Editor:

The members of the Cohasset Police Association are concerned about an article filed in the warrant in the annual town meeting in the Town of Cohasset. The specific article involved is Article 44 and proposes to remove the Cohasset Police Department from Civil Service. It is our understanding that this article has been sponsored and is being supported by the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset.

Our difficulty is that there is little or no information being made available by the Board of Selectmen as to the meaning and intent of the article and the manner in which they propose it to be carried out. At no time have the Board of Selectmen indicated to the townspeople what they would suggest as an alternative if Civil Service was removed from the Police Department. It is our understanding that both the Advisory Committee in the Town of Cohasset and the Government Structure Committee in the town, both of whom would be intimately involved in this type of article and in the administration of the Police Department, have been denied any information with respect to it. In the present era of open government, we decry any "secret plan" from the Board of Selectmen and feel they have an obligation to the electorate to explain their alternative administration of the Police Department if it were to be removed from Civil Service.

Notwithstanding the lack of information, there are certain obvious defects which we feel should be called to your attention and the attention of the citizens and taxpayers in the Town of Cohasset.

First, the present manner by which police officers are selected for appointment to the department and thereafter for promotion, is funded entirely by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts through the Civil Service Commission and the personnel administrator's office. They have been performing this process for the greatest percentage of the cities and towns in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts for many years and have accumulated expertise and ability in this area which could not be hoped to be assimilated in the Town of Cohasset overnight. The potential costs of administration therefore could be astronomical.

The quality of police service in the Town of Cohasset at the present time, in our opinion, is of the highest order. We feel that if appointments to the Police Department and promotion in the Police Department were left to political patronage, then the lives and safety of the public of the Town of Cohasset clearly would not be enhanced.

The issues involved here far surpass the basic question of job security. In fact, a combination of collective bargaining and the Civil Service statute provide that type of job security in the alternative for each member of the department. Our concern is rather a maintenance of the fifty one years of successful Civil Service administration of our Police Department as against a proposal that has no apparent alternative plan, nor realistic expression of administration.

Cohasset Police Relief
Association, Inc.

During her service on the School Committee, she has given these goals a number one priority with no little consideration to the taxpayers, especially those on fixed or limited incomes. "I believe that while a School Committee member represents the entire community at all times, his or her primary responsibility is to the children. My record has shown that I have always acted in this manner and shall continue to do so. If reelected to the School Committee, I shall continue to study all the matters brought before the Committee and act reasonably on each one. I shall continue to foster the peace and harmony that presently permeates our school system. These past 18 months have seen me serving on a Committee that has brought to the community two of the lowest increase budgets in recent years," she says. "Our children are our greatest resource and should be nourished educationally to prepare them for their future and the continued well-being of all citizens."

Communication Council, co-chairman of the Community Center Board and member of the Boosters Club.

A former member of the Planning Board, Mrs. Gjesteby has also held an appointed position on the physical education and athletic subcommittee of the School Committee and has been a co-chairman of the Junior High School Communication Council.

Mrs. Gjesteby believes a School Committee member should be primarily interested in the education of children and in continuing to improve the quality of the curriculum while being ever mindful of fiscal responsibility. Several years ago, Mrs. Gjesteby helped with the implementation of the high school math laboratory as a volunteer. It is now regularly staffed with math aides. Mrs. Gjeseteby said she has always been available for other help in the schools and has regularly attended School Committee meetings.

Mrs. Gjesteby and her husband Arne have lived in Cohasset 18 years. They are parents of four children who h ave either attended or are presently attending Cohasset schools.

Mrs. Gjesteby is a graduate of Simmons College and has done graduate work at Harvard University.

Center. He and his wife Nancy have lived at 249 Beechwood St. for six years and have two pre-school sons.

He is beginning a career as an industrial writer and has written for the Muscular Dystrophy Ass'n., Spector-Hennis Freight Systems and Evergreen East Plantations. He is also a wholesaler and retailer of Christmas trees and is a member of the National Christmas Tree Growers Ass'n.

As a former teacher, Kinchla has taught writing at Boston College High School and Taconic Comprehensive High School in Pittsfield. He has been a counselor at Mass. Chronic Diseases Hospital and with youths in Cohasset and Weymouth.

Kinchla feels his background prepares him for school committee responsibilities. As a businessman, Kinchla notes that he understands financing and budgeting. Experience as an educator, he continues, has made him aware of classroom realities. His work with youth has made him aware of the strengths of a Cohasset education and of the areas which may need improvement.

Kinchla notes that he understands the time involved to thoughtfully represent residents. He points out that he is the father of two young sons and welcomes the opportunity to help plan a school system certain to be greatly affected by declining enrollment.

According to Kinchla, the most important work of the School Committee in the next three years will be to logically and purposefully plan a smaller school system. To that end, he feels a strong and proven curriculum of the basics and the arts must be emphasized.

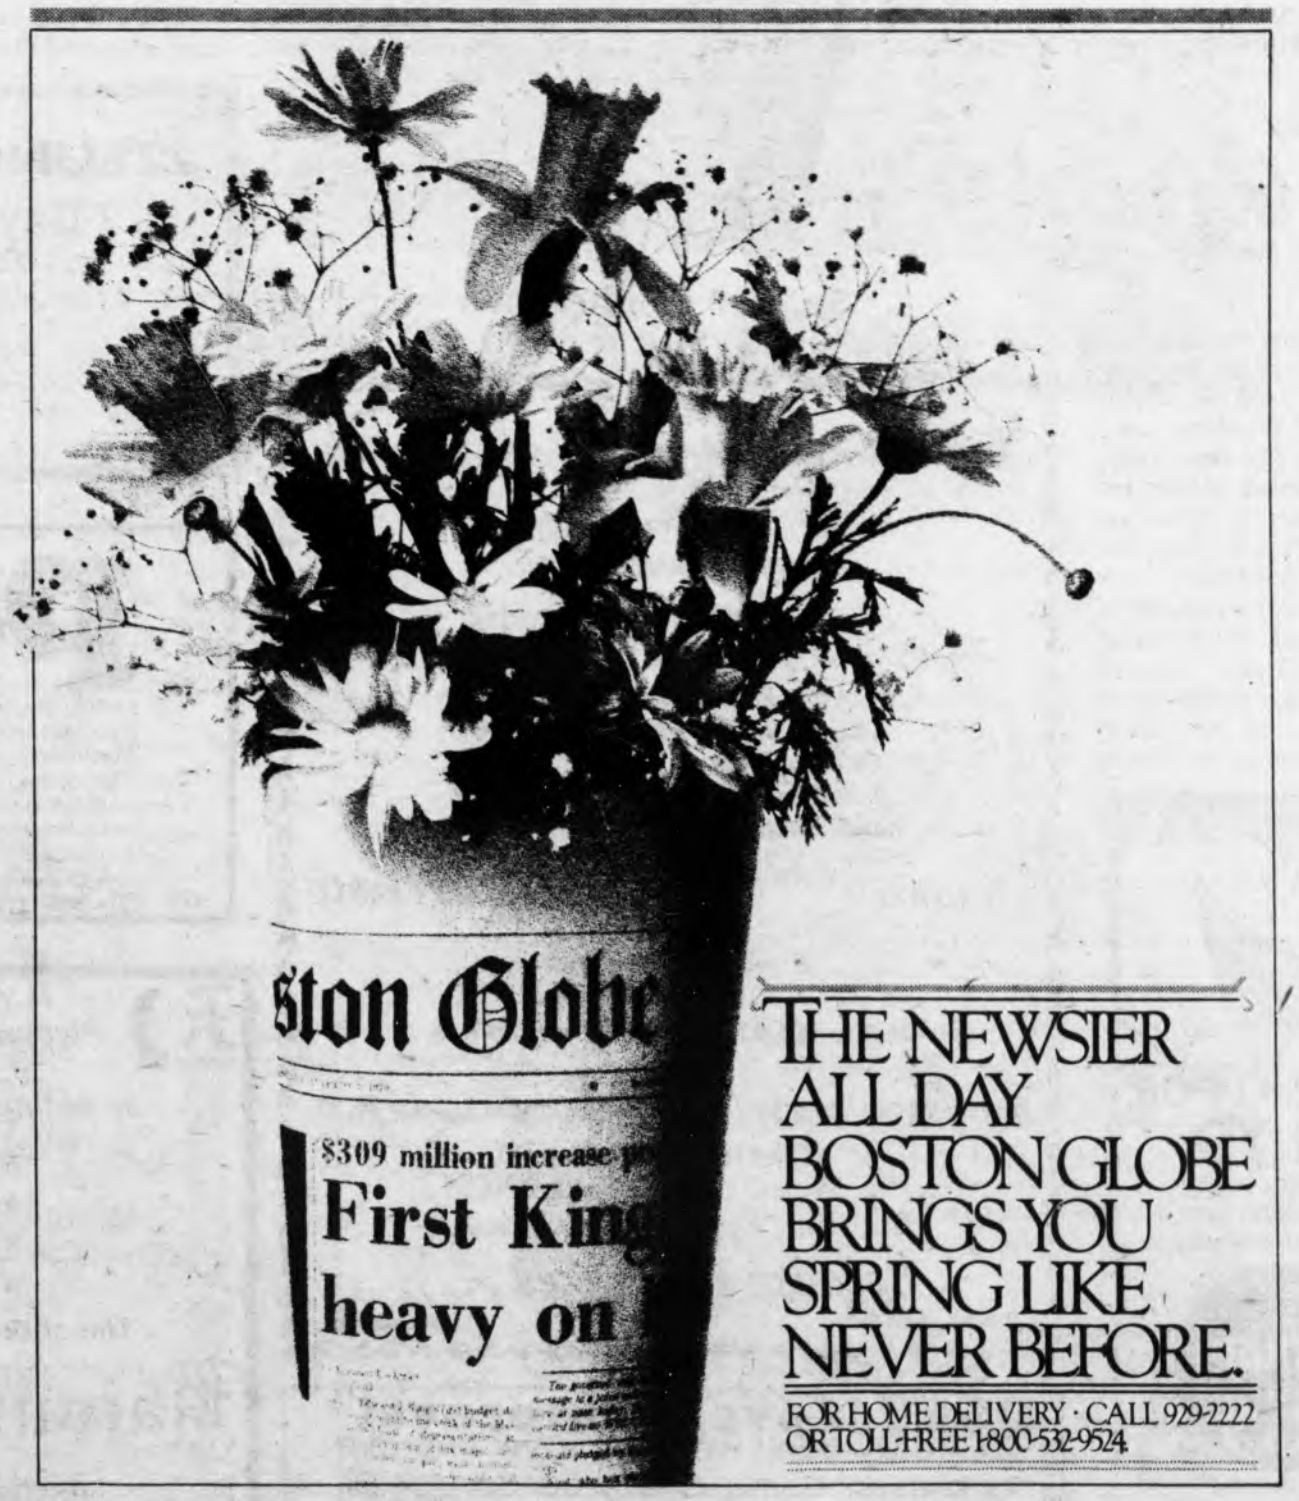
"Economics will be both necessary and desirable. We must begin now to plan the equitable reduction of teachers and staff and the utilization of school property in a cost-efficient manner," Kinchla states.

He feels that as the budget becomes an increasing concern, a better job of reporting must be done to all taxpayers. Most importantly, budget concerns have to be coupled with the determination to provide the highest quality education for our children.

Sewer Conference Saturday

A South Shore conference, entitled Sewers and Alternatives, will be held in Cohasset March 31 from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave. (by the common).

Speakers for the conference, which is open to all South Shore residents, will outline case histories of several New England towns which solved their sewage problems unconventionally. Three consulting engineers who developed the innovative approaches for disposing the wastewater will explain the operation of their systems.



Funding and regulating innovative wastewater systems will be spelled out by speakers representing the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering. The role of the Division of Water Pollution Control in semi-rural towns will also be addressed by a representative from that office.

New techniques to extend the life of a septic system through water conservation and innovative technical devices will be examined, as well as methods to avoid and correct failing septic systems.

There will also be exhibits displayed in companies manufacturing innovative systems.

The conference is sponsored by the Cohasset League of Women Voters, the Cohasset Council of Garden Clubs and the Cohasset Wastewater Study Group.

Construction Continues On Causeway

The day was warm, the construction workers were awaiting the arrival of the concrete trucks to pour the next segment of the tidal wall, and in general, the entire site at Atlantic Causeway baked in the sun.

The construction site to rebuild the Causeway seawall, tidal wall and roadway didn't always enjoy the luxury of good weather. But on this day one could clearly visualize the end of the project. Bonazzoli Contractors' estimated completion date is June 15.

The 600-foot walls will replace the old narrower ones which were devastated in the blizzard of '78 and will contain a road in the middle along the shoreline at Pleasant Beach. This stretch of road has been closed since December when digging for construction began on the sea side and when wave action undermined the path left for cars, leaving it too dangerous to pass.

Dante Salamone, resident state engineer overseeing the $450,000 federally funded project, explained the difference between and the actions of the walls. A causeway, he noted, is a road contained by two walls, raised over wet land.

The first 30-foot section was poured Dec. 14 within a mold that formed the 15-foot curve radius seawall. This outward curve in the seawall, Salamone said, will aid in dissipating wave action.

The strength of the 11-foot wall, which tapers from a five-foot width at the base to three feet at the top, is insured by the use of Boston Sand and Gravel's accelerated strength concrete. While held in place for 24 hours within the insulated mold atop the steel reinforced base and protected from temperature extremes by a plastic covering, the concrete bakes itself to solidity within a day, Salamone said.

Illustrating just how strong the wall becomes almost immediately after it is poured, Richard Bonazzoli, head engineer and president of the company, showed pictures of the site during the February wind-driven storm. Gigantic waves crashed over the first of the freshly cast seawall — without damaging an inch of it, Salamone assured. Salamone is also responsible for procuring concrete test cylinders of each segment of wall which are examined for their "crushability" or breaking point.

However, Bonazzoli said, the winter storms cost his team approximately three weeks of work time. On several occasions, when the next 30-foot segment was being readied for its pouring of concrete the sea would wash in a load of stone and obliterate the prepared footings. This would necessitate at least a day of cleanup before continuing with construction of the wall.

Bitter cold also incapacitated the workers, Bonazzoli said. Some of the men attested that there were days so bad they had to stop work before quitting time. Photos of those days depicted a barren stretch of land and a construction team so bundled up in arctic gear that only their eyes were visible.

Other hardships came in the form of ledge rock which had to be blasted, at the beginning and end of the seawall. Also, before work got underway, temporary easements had to be secured from abutting neighbors whose land would become strewn with debris during construction. Salamone said that restoration of neighboring property will be included as part of the project.

Construction of the tidal wall, which is being built adjacent to an area of marshland, is not so difficult a task, Salamone said. This wall lacks the curve of the seawall, and will be five feet shorter than the other although the same height when completed. Drains are built into the bottom portion of the tidal wall, to allow water which may splash over onto the road to drain off on the marsh side. A 30-foot segment will be poured each day until the wall's completion sighted for April 6, weather permitting, Salamone added.

A 27-foot wide road will be built up between the walls to a depth of 10 feet, leaving a foot of wall exposed on either side of the road. A steel beam guide rail will be bolted on top of both walls for driving protection, the engineers said.

Salamone praised Bonazzoli for his expertise in handling the massive job, as well as his foresight for keeping a full motorp[illegible] of equipment on site at all times. Bouquets were given, also, to Selectman Arthur Clark by both Salamone and Bonazzoli, for his daily concern and work as coordinator in obtaining funds and permits for the project.

Smith Chosen For Show House

Philip H. Smith, associate member of the American Society of Interior Designers and owner of Creation Antiques and Interiors in Cohasset Village, has been chosen again by the Junior League of Boston to participate in its Show House. This major fund raising activity of the league will be at the Forbes Estate in Milton.

This exquisite home will be completely rejuvenated from first to third floors by 50 of the most talented and celebrated designers in the Boston area. It will be open to the public April 29 to May 20.

Funds raised will be used to continue community activities. All designers involved donate their time and talent and furnish and decorate rooms at their own expense. Last year over 25,000 people toured Show House.

Smith designed the library in the 1976 Show House, also in Milton. That room has since been published in House Beautiful's 'Home Decorating' twice and is to be published in an upcoming book published by the Smithsonian Institution featuring rooms that use oriental carpets. Last year's Show House contribution was the third floor party room at Brookline's Stone Webster Estate. The party room featured a built in suana and disco dance floor.

Smith and his associates Verna Dalton and Laine Axelson have designed a Butler's Pantry for this year's Show House. The room will emphasize the importance of multipurpose areas in a home. The area will serve as a wine cellar, bar and most importantly as a storage area for fine china, linen, crystal and other appointments befitting a home of such stature.

Smith has served as president of the Rotary Club and is past chairman of the South Shore Council of Rotary Clubs. He established his design business in Cohasset in 1968. Along with professional design service, Creation offers a retail fabric, carpet (broadloam, novelty and orientals) and wallpaper showroom. Fine furnishings and accessories are also to be seen along with antique pieces.

Tickets for this year's Show House will be $4 in advance and $5 at the door.

Fashion Show Today

A fashion show on Thursday, March 29 at 8 p.m. at the Plymouth River School in Hingham will feature 18 exclusive designs from Cards & Shards. Modeling will be Sue Straley, Nancy Pottenger and Libby Wood. Designer Jerre will give a commentary on her fashions and fabrics.

Cards & Shards, the South Main shop newly owned by Sue and Dick Straley, is always a visual delight. One rarely leaves empty-handed.

Police Have Unclaimed Loot Worth $15,000

Approximately $15,000 worth of unclaimed merchandise, a portion of the loot recovered by the Cohasset Police Department last February, remains at the police station.

Since police apprehended the duo Gildea and Ostravage, who holed up a quarter of a million dollars worth of stolen goods in the Margin St. apartment, over $200,000 worth of stolen items have been reclaimed by 31 people.

Officer Paul Laugelle, the patrolman largely credited for cracking the case, said last week that residents of Scituate, Hingham, Randolph, Canton, Norwell, Boston, Quincy, Natick, Milton and Marshfield have had items returned to them.

Still unclaimed are an array of Oriental rugs, two Sony television sets, a New Haven clock, a hand-carved chess set, an assortment of clothes and jewelry, and a miniature cannon used to start yacht races. The public is invited to examine the merchandise to determine if personal itmes may have been included in the recovery.

Kevin Gildea is presently incarcerated at Charles St. Jail in Boston in lieu of $100,000 bail. Linda Ostravage is confined to Framingham House of Correction in lieu of $50,000 bail. Both have received grand jury indictments on five counts of breaking and entering and one count of receiving stolen property and are awaiting trial.

from the kitchen

A common cause, belief or interest is the basis for many a friendship, and shared enjoyment of good food draws many together. Gourmet cooking is the bond that finds eight Marshfield couples planning, preparing and savoring monthly dinner parties. It's an introduction of foods they might never enjoy with children or budget to consider. Costs are split eight ways, and everyone shares the work and brings two bottles of wine to accompany the course they prepared.

This is the month the David McQueeneys and Glenn Dobeckis will host a German meal consisting of sauerbraten, potato dumplings, sweet and sour cabbage, pea soup and a torte. Others in the group who will sample French cuisine next month are the Brian Concannons, James Lyngs, Otis Carneys, Jo Caulfields, Paul Arsenaus and Don Balconis.

Sauerbraten to serve 6 will be made as follows:

1 head of red cabbage, 5 c. shredded
4 slices bacon, diced
2 T brown sugar
2 T flour
1/2 c. water
1/3 c. vinegar
1 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. pepper
1 small onion, sliced

Cook cabbage in 2 c. salted water, covered 5-8 min. til crisp and tender. Drain. Fry bacon. Remove from pan, together with half bacon fat. Add brown sugar and flour to remaining fat. Blend. Add water, vinegar, seasonings and onion. Cook til thick. Add bacon and cabbage. Heat through. Garnish with more diced onion.

How 'Gourmet' magazine does it, I'll never know. An entire page is devoted each month to recipes they obtain from restaurants all over the world for their readers. Gloria Petrocelli wrote me that the best lobster bisque she has ever tasted was served her at the Alewife Tavern in Norwell. When she asked if I could get her the recipe, I relayed her request to Chef Roland Parent who was reluctant to part with it. So, Gloria, perhaps this old New England recipe from the Beacon Hill Sea Food Cookbook will have to do. Mary Sullivan summers in Marshfield and sent me a copy of her book which she refers to as a "work of love."

1/4 c. butter
1/4 c. flour
1 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. pepper
5 c. chicken bouillon
1/2 c. minced onion
1/3 c. minced carrot
1 leek (white part only, minced)
1 bay leaf
2 cooked chicken lobsters or
3 5 oz. cans drained lobster
2 egg yolks
1 c. of cream

Melt butter in deep kettle. Blend in flour, salt and pepper. Gradually stir in bouillon. When bubbling, add onion, carrot, leek and bay leaf. Cover and simmer over low heat 10 min. Finely mince lobster meat, reserving a few large pieces for garnish. Stir minced lobster into soup, cover and simmer 10 min. longer. Remove bay leaf. Slightly beat egg yolks and add to soup, stirring vigorously until blended. Simmer 5 min. more, stirring all the time. Gradually stir in 1 c. of cream. Add large pieces of lobster and serve piping hot.

Then there's this Quick Lobster Bisque which serves 6-8 and is no where as difficult to make.

5 oz. can lobster meat
10 oz. can cream of asparagus soup
10 oz. can cream of mushroom soup
1 c. light cream
3 T sherry, optional

Shred lobster. Combine all ingredients except sherry. Heat, but do not boil. Add sherry just before serving.

Education Is Good As Teacher

By Lois Martin

Take away your books and your buildings and you've got the stronghold of education - the teacher. Finding the clout behind solid learning is like shaking down the old coal furnace. After all has fallen through the cracks, only the live coals remain. And like those embers, a good teacher's influence kindles the minds of students long after they've left the class-room.

Mind you, I'm willing to pay homage to vital materials, instructive books, well-planned school buildings and strong program planning. But things are never so important as people. At any level of education the prime ingredient to insure the product is the good teacher. There's no higher calling, no greater challenge, no loftier goal than to play a part in the development of a child's mind.

PATCHES

Only the parent has a stronger, longer commitment. Right or wrong we still look to the teacher to inspire, to instill, to exemplify, to teach. If there's a mature leadership in the home, the good teacher underlines it. If there's strength lacking in the home, a worthy teacher provides it.

There's a-motto attached to the child abuse campaign: "A bad childhood lasts a lifetime." So does the influence of the unique teacher, the one who brought personal worth to a student through education.

Good teachers don't come out of a mold. They're special characters and they're not confined to any particular location or age level. They crop up and take root indiscriminately.

Many of my teachers were memorable. I remember Mr. Smith (James) and his relentless fondness for iambic pentameter, Edgar Allen Poe and gesticulations that got chalk on his suit. There was Mrs. Fortier (Olive) who taught us foreign languages. In addition to Latin, Mrs. Fortier instructed propriety where we were wanting. To Richard Bickford goes credit for sparking the minds of eighth graders. And with lingering intrepidation, I recall Dr. Hankins, a college professor, who put the fear of God in college freshmen who thought they knew all there was to know about English. Above all else she taught me not to raise my hand and burst forth with confidence until I was dead sure of the answer. She viewed arrogance as ignorance and proved her case often.

But of all the teachers who've worked to educate, there's one to whom I've been exposed that could get blood out of turnip, make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, teach the least of her students the most they could learn. Aunt Lote was an educator.

Lois Perkins Wessel, for whom I was named, taught school for more than 40 years and was retired with full honors several years ago. When I was a grammar school student, it was my occasional privilege to visit her school. It was a one-room school house in Sedgwick, Maine, serving grades 1-8. That little building (plenty of outside recess space) was the scene of lesson-learning at the hands of a tireless teacher.

There were surely special needs there - for the bright, the under-privileged, the ambitious, the limited. And from each mind Aunt Lote gleaned more substance than students thought they had. There was a wood stove in the room that required tending. The flag hung near her desk and was fervently addressed each morning as were the nails of the students who got a buffer course in personal habits.

She commanded the courses for study with elan, shifting the students from their desks to circles of chairs for group work. She oversaw the institution like a general training a specialized division of forces. And if you didn't learn it one way, you'd get it another. For Aunt Lote a pupil's failure to learn would have been a personal defeat. There were no cobwebs in her classroom thinking. With gusto, perseverance, studies were pursued and conquered. She was no party to ignorance or indolence.

And for that matter she'd brook no insolence. The youngster who guessed he'd fool around only did so once. They were quick learners in that school house. It didn't take them long to get it though their heads that Aunt Lote saw discipline as the direct pathway to development of minds. But they saw through her ways. They knew the same person who gave homework orders also gave compassion, special homebaked goods, a ride home.

She taught the children in her realm to expect something of themselves and she showed them how to find it. I used to marvel at the penmanship of the students. They all wrote like Aunt Lote, as soon as they could get the hang of the pencil grip, they were imitating her strong scroll.

And though her guidelines were firm, they included plenty of room for a good laugh when it wasn't at anyone's expense. A joke after all is when everybody gets to laugh.

Certainly those best qualified to honor her contributions as an educator are her students. They've done so verbally. More than that they've kept her influence going through their own children, and in some cases, their teaching.

True I was raised with people who held the teaching profession in high esteem. The necessity of sound, responsible educators was brought home to me by parents and indeed other aunts.

And in my own children I hear the echos of earlier classrooms, I can see the influences of some fine teachers being carried over into higher grades. It's true that profession no more attracts only top notch workers any more than other fields offer only experts.

But if we're lucky there are enough good teachers to go around, enough determined people to insure the learning process is handed down. If the strength of our heritage is based on responsible educators, so surely is our future.

Sitter Course

The PM Club of Hingham is sponsoring a two-session free baby-sitting clinic at the Hingham Public Library March 31 and April 7. Each Saturday session will last from 10 until 11:30 a.m., and is planned for boys and girls in grades 5-8. Students in grade 4 whose parents feel they would benefit from the instruction are also invited.

CHS Seniors Visit Cohasset Knoll

Twelve Cohasset seniors and their social studies teacher visited the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home March 15.

Members of the Class of 1979 and their instructor, Edward Sheehan, head of the Social Studies Department at Cohasset High School, had received a verbal invitation from the facilities' social director, Jan Neri.

During their eventful stay at the maximum care nursing facility, the students were briefed by Miss Neri and then participated in an informal "rap session" with 30 patients. Miss Neri, who has instituted many innovative programs at The Knoll for its senior citizen residents, informed the students of the "dire need for outside community groups to visit the Knoll to communicate with the patients there."

When the visiting teenagers and senior citizens assembled in the spacious dayroom, questions and answers flew back and forth across the room. Neither the high schoolers nor the patients had any trouble relating to one another. One of the elderly patients proudly announced that she will be "100 years old come October 4." This delighted the assembled throng and cheers and a standing ovation followed.

Some of the topics discussed during the hour long "rap session" were: the general living conditions inside the facility, the loss of personal freedom suffered by the elderly who are confined there, the isolated spot the Knoll is located in, the generation gap that divides our younger and older citizens and the role religion plays among our senior citizens.

Students who went on the unique field trip were: Peter Chapman, Brian Conlan, Peter Cook, Charles Dillon, Brad Ditmar, Keith Elam, Dave Hanlon, Bob Infusino, Steve Ramsay, Judy Vanderlugt, Jim Vivian and John Carbone.

from the Garden

By Joan Pinkham

"For, lo the winter is past; The rain is over and gone; The flowers appear on the earth; The time of the singing of the birds is come."

(Song of Solomon, Bible).

Also at an end is the New England Flower and Garden Show which graced the exhibition hall at Commonwealth Pier last week. As part of a steady stream of winter-weary visitors, we admired the lush green foliage, endless vista of azaleas and glimpses of spring-like miniature jonquils nestled beside splashing waterfalls.

Demure primroses peeked out from the shade of delicate dogwood trees. Among the window garden displays was that of the Norwell Garden Club which won second prize for a kitchen window with southern exposure filled with 26 varieties of herbs grown and arranged by the group.

"This is the year of the rose," a sign in a booth filled with miniature rose house plants proclaimed. Also popular was the African Violet booth, knee deep in admirers. Tulips were blooming, golden acacias from the Stone Estate in Manchester charmed all and everywhere, everywhere were people clutching their pussywillows or potted plants, or snapping photos of the kaleidoscope of color.

Entries in the amateur exhibit are changed three times during the show, but among the prize-winning South Shore displays we glimpsed at the show on Monday were Mrs. John Bleakie's magnificent orchid plant, Dr. Edward Wood's prize orchids and Mrs. Edward White's rosemary grown from cuttings and blue hyacinth. Also, Jean Madden's prize bouganvillia and fittonia, the latter winning a special cultural award for excellence in growing. Rita Araphoff won prizes for her terrarium, crown of thorns and a large begonia in the window-sill division.

COHASSET GARDEN Club's entry at New England Spring Garden & Flower Show is this lily garden, awarded the Beacon Hill Garden Cup for most charming exhibit.

In the fall and spring, rarely in summer, great white birds with long, black-tipped wings can be seen fishing off our coast. These gannets sail high over the sea, wherever fish abound and at the right moment shoot down into the waves with a resounding splash that sometimes tosses up spray eight or 10 ft. high. With a wing-spread of about 72", seeing one is quite impressive.

This is why the Brookline Bird Club members were excited when they spotted them off of Duxbury on a recent trip. They were also treated to a glimpse of four rough-legged hawks. The birds were seen slowly flapping their four-foot wings not far above the meadows at Dwyer's Farm in Marshfield.

If ever spring came in like the proverbial lamb, it did last week and even the birds emerged to welcome the sun's warm rays. Over at the Natural Science Center a red-shouldered hawk hovered in the blue sky, wheeling and calling, with chickadees and titmice answering. Even the robins appeared on schedule.

If the great outdoors is beckoning to you, too, you are invited to join the South Shore Bird Club's day-long tour on the 22nd of April. Myron and Beverly Litchfield will lead the outing to selected spots on the South Shore.

Members and guests will meet at 8 a.m. in the parking area of the Deerskin Trading Post on Rte. 139 in Marshfield. Bring a lunch and anyone who is interested in wild life and conservation.

Things to do this Saturday include the Merrimack Valley African Violet Society show and plant sale at Grace Episcopal Church in Lawrence. Admission is free from 1 to 5 p.m. If your morning is free, plan to attend a lecture by Ed and Millie Thompson sponsored by teh American Begonia Society at Mass. Bay Community College, 50 Oakland St., Wellesley Hills from 9:30 to 12:00.

You can wind up the day by attending the first fund-raising dinner of the newly formed Minot's Ledge Chapter of Ducks Unlimited. Proceeds go to the organization which for the past 40 years has contributed much to the preservation of our waterfowl.

For information call Larry Mitchell 545-5849, Bill English 749-9180, Ritchie Poole 826-2666, Larry Taylor 659-2623, Tom Chamberlain 383-6606, or Floyd Carlton 834-8804.

Obituaries

Eleanor Hyland

Graveside services were last Thursday in Mayflower Cemetery in Duxbury for Mrs. Eleanor Hyland (O'Brien) May, 68, of Cohasset, who died at home March 21 after a long illness.

Mrs. May was born in Boston and attended Boston schools and Garland Junior College. She belonged to the Women's City Club of Boston.

Mrs. May lived in Cohasset 15 years.

She leaves her husband, Willard; a daughter, Mrs. Madeleine Eakin of New York City; two sisters, Mrs. Constance Sylvester of Norwell and Mrs. Madeleine O'Brien of Brookline; and a grandson.

Irwin Nelson

A scholarship has been established in the memory of Irwin Nelson, owner of Nelson's Music Shop on South Main St. who died Feb. 25 after a battle with cancer.

Nelson, a teacher at Scituate High School, loved music and was dedicated to his many students.

His fiancee, Carol Bates, established the Irwin Nelson Memorial Scholarship Fund at the school for contributions in his memory to help music students in years to come.

Donations are directed to the Scituate High School Music Department, care of Donald Hermance.

CHS Drama Workshop Wins Again

The Cohasset High School Drama Workshop stunned the crowd with another winning performance last Saturday at the state drama festival in Boston.

Cohasset and Ipswich were chosen out of 12 schools in the finals to perform at the New England High School Drama Festival this month at Castleton (Vt.) State College.

Cohasset's entire 11-member cast was named to the all-state cast.

The workshop once again performed excerpts from Story Theatre, the production which has consistently won acclaim both at home and at previous competitions at the Emerson College Theatre Arts Festival and the state drama festival semi-finals.

Story Theatre is an adaptation of Grimm Brothers Fairy Tales and Aesop's Fables; the mixture of mime, music and comedy creating a contemporary enactment of these ageless stories. The workshop performed "Two Crows," "Henny Penny," "The Master Thief and "The Bremen Town Musicians" Saturday night.

Director Ron Emmons, incredulous over the troupe's win, shuffled happily through the judges' comments on the play and performances. "They're all raves," Emmons said, and indeed, superlatives more than punctuated the remarks.

Leonard Riendeay, one of the judges and a professor at Emerson College,

Town Meeting Saturday

Moderator David Place predicted a good turnout for the Annual Town Meeting, Saturday April 7, at 10 a.m. at the High School Gymnasium. A quorum of 200 voters is required to begin the meeting and consideration of the 78 articles in the warrant.

"Because there are a number of unusual, special matters in the warrant, we'll have a good turnout on Saturday and at subsequent sessions," Place said.

"We intend to let each member of the meeting be heard. The warrant substantively doesn't have more articles to be considered, though it is twice as long, than in recent years." Place was confident that matters will be disposed of expeditiously and didn't anticipate the meeting running much longer than three sessions.

Chairman of the Board of Selectmen Arthur Clark didn't share Place's confidence, however. "This is a much larger warrant than in any other year," Clark said. "The zoning articles increase the warrant size. There were 49 articles last year, there's 78 this year," he said.

"We usually get a quorum, but by the time we get to the last articles the people will be worn out," he feared.

The articles expected to bring the most controversy, Clark said, are the articles regarding the town hall, the new fire station, the reduction of the size of the School Committee and the new sewer treatment plant.

Article 15 requests $30,000 to be expended by the Committee to Study Space Needs for Town Offices for the preparation of detailed plans and drawings in connection with securing bids for and the renovation of the Town Hall. Article 16 requests by citizens petition an appropriation of $325,000 by taxation or by borrowing to purchase the building known as the Professional Building at 760 Chief Justice Cushing Highway to be used for a new town hall.

Article 24 requests the town to appropriate money to construct, equip and furnish a new sub fire station, to be located on the northeasterly side of Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Article 32 considers the age-old argument to reduce the School Committee from six to five members. Article 35 requests a transfer of a 10 acre parcel of land from the Board of Selectmen for school purposes, to be used for a sewage treatment plant.

School Board Won't Hire Untenured Teachers

The School Committee voted Monday night not to rehire untenured teachers for the next school year. School Supt. John Maloney, however, was instructed to return enrollment and class size projections as soon as possible to the committee so that reappointment of needed teachers could be made.

Maloney informed the committee that he was bound legally and officially to send notices by April 15 to all 25 untenured staffmembers alerting them they will not be rehired for the next school year. He indicated that these employes may be rehired when teaching need is ascertained by late May or early June, but also noted that this probability couldn't be put in writing to the teachers.

The law requires that all untenured teachers not so notified by April 15 will be rehired for another school year. The notification procedure has been in practice in the Cohasset School system since last year, so as not to hire teachers who may not be needed.

Committee member John Langmaid expressed concern over all the teachers enumerated on the untenured list. He suggested that the list could be narrowed down so that some teachers could be retained now rather than risk the possibility of losing them to other school departments.

"There are a lot of good teachers on this list," Langmaid said. "Both music teachers are on the list — you don't want to have no music program. There's nothing to prevent them from going somewhere else."

He explained that Kindergarten enrollment, forthcoming resignations, an immigration factor at Deer Hill School, and the number of students in high school elective courses are all unknown factors at present and all contribute to the computing of class size. These factors could be made known more definitely by early June, he said.

Committee member Frank England urged the committee to retain the hiring flexibility they would have if these teachers weren't rehired. Committee member Patricia Walsh agreed, and noted the legal liabilities the school department

Cohasset Wants To Retain Control Of METCO Program

The School Committee unanimously voted Monday night to submit Cohasset's METCO proposal to the state Department of Education outlining the School Department's intention to retain control over the program.

The proposal will state that the sum of money the School Department used for the program will be based on instructional costs, that Cohasset has jurisdiction over hiring the town's coordinator and that the School Committee will determine programming.

The committee's action came as a result of discussion started by Supt. John Maloney, who expressed concern over a bill in the legislature that would empower the METCO Central Board to hire coordinators for towns in the program. This bill, Maloney said, in combination with additional requirements of the state denotes an attempt on the part of outside agencies to gain control of the program within Cohasset.

"Cohasset has been involved with METCO for 10 years and should continue," Maloney said. "I don't believe, though, that we should lose control of the coordinator. If we lose control of the program now under the jurisdiction of the School Committee and superintendent, a dangerous pre-

200 Attend Candidates Night

Town Affairs Night, sponsored by the League of Women Voters Tuesday night, offered a platform to candidates running for town office as they addressed a wide range of issues. Issues repeatedly highlighted throughout the evening included the Town Hall renovation plan, the possibility of a new sewer treatment plant, the effects of the Governor's tax cap plan and the need for better understanding of town boards as well as better communication between them.

Candidates were asked to state their objectives for the offices they sought within a three-minute time period. Questions were then directed to the candidates from the floor. Over 200 residents were in attendance.

The School Committee race, with four candidates vying for two 3-year seats, and the Selectman race, with five candidates for one 3-year seat, comprise the largest contests in the town's election this

Meet The Cohasset Maple Syrup People

By Joanne Young

The Robert Barrow, Noel Ripley and Chartis Langmaid families have something in common. Their pancakes or waffles are very special because they are eaten with homemade maple syrup.

Their methods of preparing maple syrup differ only in the boiling — Chartis uses her electric stove, Noel his indoor Jotul wood-burning stove and Bob an outdoor 35-gallon sterilized oil drum cut in half.

Robert Barrow, the genial janitor at Cohasset High School, undertakes the most ambitious project. At his Arrowwood Road home he taps forty Black and Red Maple trees on his and his neighbor's property. Sugar Maples are rare in Cohasset, and are distinguished by plates of bark on their trunks.

The red maples have red buds in the spring. Before the sugaring season begins, he carves 5/8 inch dowels from the limbs of a maple tree, tapers and drills a hole using equipment at the high school shop. The dowels are driven 1/2 inch into the trees with a hammer, and attached to a hole cut into gallon plastic containers, capped to keep out the rain.

This year the flow began after the February 24th cold snap and lasted for about a month. Sap needs cold nights and warm days to freely flow. Bob's trees yield two full containers in one day. Mr. Barrow and his daughter Sarah pour the contents of six buckets into the drum, which boils all day and night. Bob gets up at 5:30 in the morning to fuel the fire, and adds more wood at lunchtime. He places coal on the fire to keep it burning through the night. He estimates he used one quarter cord of wood this season.

It takes two days of boiling thirty gallons of sap to make one gallon of maple syrup. It is not practical to make maple sugar candy, as it must be boiled down again until the syrup is thick and dark, and thirty gallons will produce only one quart of candy consistency. Bob Barrow seals the maple syrup in regular canning Ball jars for his family and their lucky friends. He pasteurizes the syrup by boiling it fifteen minutes in the sealed jars. This year was a short season and his trees produced eighteen quarts of maple syrup.

Noel Ripley's wife Nancy added the information that what is termed Grade A maple syrup is the first run. It is always light in color. Noel mentioned the trees must be at least ten inches in diameter to tap, or there will be no flow. He drills the spiles (or spigots) into his maple trees four inches deep and boiled about forty gallons to get one gallon of syrup. He put up three quarts this year from his two trees.

Chartis Langmaid's method was the most expensive, as she estimated it cost her $8.00 in electricity to yield one gallon of maple syrup. The sap must be sealed in containers within two or three days of gathering or it will spoil, and have a vinegary taste.

We can attest to the superior quality of homemade maple syrup, as Bob Barrow generously gave us a bottle of his delicious product. Aunt Jemima, move over! Even Vermont Grade A tastes nothing like this!

Sam Roebuck, 12, of Beechwood St. winds up for slapshot during game of street hockey behind Cohasset high School.

Home Health Program

Home Health agencies from the South Shore including those representing Braintree, Holbrook, Randolph, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Milton, Quincy and Weymouth, will sponsor a home health aide preparation program beginning April 23.

It will continue Monday through Friday, 9-1 p.m. for three weeks. Upon successful completion of the course, participants will be certified through the Massachusetts Department of Public Health as Home Health Aides.

This course is being held in response to an urgent local need for quality care by certified home health aides. Certified graduates have the option of full or part-time local employment through affiliation with the sponsoring agencies. Working hours are flexible, including evening and weekend hours. For example, a person could work four hours a day, four or five days a week.

The curriculum will focus on the family as a whole in its relationship with the one member needing special care at home. It will be concerned with the impact of chronic health problems on the family structure, with problems in adjusting and adapting, with the process of aging, and with ways of giving both physical and emotional help. A limited, supervised clinical experience will be provided.

Information meetings to further explain the course and the role of the home health aide are planned. They will be held in Braintree at the Visiting Nurse Association of the South Shore, 400 Franklin Street, 4th Floor, on Tuesday, April 10 at 10:30 a.m.; and in Hingham at the Hingham Visiting Nurse Association, 170 North Street, on Wednesday, April 11 at 10:30 a.m. Application for the course will take place at this time. There will be a materials fee of $15.

Selectmen To Ask Personnel Board To Meet With Nonunion Employees

Selectmen agreed last week to ask the Personnel Board to meet with the town's non-union employes to discuss complaints from them.

Employes claim the board didn't meet with any of their representatives to review contract requests.

The employes, represented by Recreation Director John Worley, had asked the board in January to consider a change in the personnel bylaw to include a seven per cent cost of living increase, three personal days, four weeks paid vacation after 10 years or more of continuous service and observation of Saturday holidays the Friday before.

Worley said the board has since granted the employes a five per cent increase and denied the other requests without opting to discuss their decisions with employes first.

In several letters to Selectmen, Worley outlined the employes' dissatisfaction and intended course of action if lines of communication with the Personnel Board are not improved.

He stated that there appear to be inequities in non-union pay schedules, working hours, hiring practices, job descriptions, step-rate increases, etc. when compared to union benefits.

"In general we do not feel represented either as a collective group or individually. We also feel that many of the inequities are getting worse rather than better and that there is little chance to rectify these problems under present conditions."

Worley then said, "To this end, we have filed application with the Labor Relations Commission in order to form recognition and organization."

The possibility of reorganizing the 30 non-union employes into a union was frowned on by Worley, sewer plan operator Manuel Salvador and Selectmen. "You shouldn't be forced to join a union to be heard," said Selectman Arthur Clark. Worley agreed. "It doesn't feel good for a town of this size," he said.

The non-union employes withdrew from the union two years ago. The union now includes public works employes because of contract differences.

In another letter, employes who may form a Town Employe's Association, requested that Selectmen consider disbanding the existing Personnel Board, and in its place adopting a three-person committee consisting of one member of the Selectmen, one member of the existing Personnel Board and one professional negotiator.

The three-member committee would be the designated committee to meet with and discuss requests from the Town Employes' Association and elected representatives of that association.

Highway Business

Town meeting voters should take a hard look at the Planning Board's proposal to dramatically increase the size of highway business lots on Route 3A.

And once voters have taken that hard look, they should reject the idea without equivication.

The proposal — Article 71 in the town meeting warrant — would increase lot sizes in the highway business district from 10,000 to 40,000 square feet. It would also increase frontage requirements from 50 to 200 feet.

The article is defective in several respects and carries serious consequences for merchants doing business in the district — consequences that would have a ripple effect on all Cohasset.

The first public hearing on the article, held March 15, has been ruled illegal, since neighboring towns —Scituate, Hull and Hingham weren't notified. A second hearing has been scheduled for Friday night, on the eve of town meeting, which is what sea lawyers would call squeaking under the wire.

night, on the eve of town meeting, which is what sea lawyers would call squeaking under the wire.

A sweeping proposal such as this that must race the clock to receive even consideration at town meeting needs scrutiny. When scrutinizing, consider these objections.

The merchants in question — those who would be badly damaged by the change — are the largest tax-paying entity in Cohasset and the largest employers as well. Most would be threatened by the increase in lot size as they so eloquently indicated at the first public hearing, and one or two might be forced out of business.

Merchants in the highway business district are not a drain on Cohasset's public resources. To the contrary. In general for the taxes they pay, they receive fewer services than their brethren in the Village since Route 3A, being a state road, is maintained (and plowed) by the state.

By dramatically increasing the size of lots in the highway business district, Article 71 would serve to depreciate property that doesn't conform — being most of the district — thereby whacking a group of merchants who have spent years building up their businesses and contribuiting to Cohasset's coffers along the way. Changing the rules in the middle of the game, some would say.

Selectmen have unanimously voted to oppose the article, agreeing with Arthur Clark's assessment that it is far too restrictive. Aside from being far too unfair, we think.

The Planning Board has commissioned a consultant to make recommendations on the future zoning patterns of Route 3A. It is one of several such studies that have come along over the years. Unfortunately, this latest effort does not appear to have been used to its best advantage, if Article 71 is a product of it.

Restrictive, unfair and unnecessary. Article 71 from the Planning Board should be deep sixed as soon as possible.

Voters Need More Time

By Gilbert Tower

Commentary

Will the voters at town meeting be well enough informed on the Cohasset sewer problem to be able to make the best decision? If they are going to vote wisely they will have to apply their minds and do some hard thinking. The small attendance at the recent Advisory Committee hearing indicates that voters may not yet be taking much interest. Perhaps the meeting was not well advertised. Voters will have to decide the outlay of millions of dollars and considerable increase in everyone's taxes.

It would be a great help if we could plan the whole matter to its final conclusion and arrive at the final cost. Unfortunately, that is almost impossible to do. The program has to be carried out step by step. Each step is a problem. The right decision at each step depends upon what was decided for the preceding step. It will be difficult to see the whole thing through to its final conclusion. But rightly or wrongly, decisions have to be made based on the best thinking and information that can be put together now. Every year of delay greatly increases the cost.

This article for the paper will not attempt to recommend final conclusions. However, the writer feels there is a need for more information and more discussion. There are numerous angles to the whole subject.

A fundamental fact is that Cohasset's soil refuses to absorb the effluent from the septic tanks or cesspools of houses and business buildings. On the wall at the Bates Building there is a map produced by the U.S. Agriculture Department, Soil Conservation Division entitled "suitability of soil." To what extent that map is correct may be debatable, but the general conclusion is born out by the difficulties experienced with septic tanks of some homes on Lincoln Hillside and the Veteran's district. The Veteran's district is drained by a little brook called Peppermint Brook which terminates at Lily Pond where our drinking water comes from. Something needs to be done about that.

However, the majority of houses in the town have septic tanks that work successfully. Generally speaking, Cohasset's houses are well separated on house lots of generous area. So far as possible every house should dispose of its own domestic sewage. Presumably it will not be necessary to lay a sewer pipe in every street in town, but only in a few streets where it appears to be necessary. Some houses were built before it was realized that sewerage would be a problem, so that the town is now stuck with a few difficult cases.

One condition is that Cohasset is underlayed by ledge which does not absorb water so that ground water level is high and the soil will not perk.

On the one hand Cohasset is struggling with the problem of sewage disposal and at the same time the town is continuing to grant permits for the construction of more homes. More homes mean more people and more people mean more domestic sewage. Perhaps the issuance of more building permits should be halted. That might please some people who would like to perserve the town just the way it is. On the other hand the writer believes that gradual town growth is beneficial. Our water supply is now ample for town growth, but we are confronted with the serious sewer problem. At the recent hearing before the Advisory Committee, Tom Hintz from Metcalf and Eddy handed out some sheets covered with cost figures entitled "Town of Cohasset, Massachusetts; Summary of Phase I Sewer Construction Costs — Financing and Impact on Tax Rate" (not dated, not signed). The tables of figures appear to be a good job of estimating costs based on planning to date. Supplementing the pages of figures, John W. Hobbs, Chairman of the Water and Sewer Commissioners spoke at length in a low voice about something which the writer missed altogether.

It is hoped that the Sewer and Water Commissioners will present a written report of their recommendations to the town. A report that people can read will be much more helpful to voters than discussion at town meeting which is often in a low voice and few people can understand.

At the recent hearing Advisory Committee members were handed a sketch by the Metcalf and Eddy representatives. The sketch showed the proposed location for the new treatment plant on the land which was bought by the town in anticipation of a new school house which is now seemed to be not needed. The location has been referred to incorrectly as the Music Circus location. Actually it is the former Tower pasture and Job Pratt pasture. It is between Smith Place and the Music Circus. The new treatment plant is shown at the north end of the town's land, close to where the railroad was.

The Music Circus location has the advantage of using land acreage owned by the town.

The present treatment plant on Jacobs Meadow does not smell. The writer stoutly challenges anyone who says it has noticeable odor. The writer recommends that the new treatment plant be located along-side the present plant at Jacobs Meadow. Every voter should take a few minutes to visit the present facility. It is entirely open to view.

The difficulty in connection with the Music Circus site is that a pipe would have to be laid through the center of the town to carry the effluent to the ocean. The pipe will cross under Smith Place and under Pleasant Street, South Main Street, and Brook Street, and follow the brook through Jacob's Meadow under Cove Bridge and into the cove. Along that route there is already a length of 48 inch corrugated pipe from Smith Place to Pleasant Street into a six foot box culvert. That present culvert is for James Brook and the 4 foot corrugated pipe, part of it is insufficient to handle the flow of the brook after a heavy rain. The brook is obstructed so that Ripley Road is flooded to a depth of 3 feet. There is already a flooding problem, and a sewer pipe problem on top of that would amount to a big job.

That gets us back to consideration of Whale Meadow as the site for the new treatment plant. The town should understand that the unreasoning objections of a few property owners will cost the town a lot of money. The only smell would be the word "sewer." A treatment plant could be hidden by trees and would not be noticed.

To carry an outfall pipe to Sutton Rock sounds fantastic. If effluent were to be discharged into the cove it would be diluted twice a day by a large flow of ocean water in and out with the tide past Whitehead.

The cost of everything beyond the Music Circus would be in addition to the figures presented by the engineers. Metcalf and Eddy predict a two dollar increase in the tax rate and besides that there would be an $800.00 or more cost per household served. The figures presented by Tom Hintz include an estimate of one million dollars for the design cost. That is a staggering figure, hard to understand.

The report of the engineers and the recommendations of the sewer commissioners have been so much delayed that little time is left for the voters at town meeting to do some thinking.

That raises the question as to whether it would be better to postpone a decision until a special town meeting in September. It seems obvious that voters will need more time to think about an alternative.

No Ruling Yet

Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter still had no ruling Tuesday afternoon concerning possible conflict of interest allegations levelled at two members of the Planning Board, Chairman Glenn Pratt and Vice-Chairman John Bradley, and former member Roberta Leary, consultant to the board.

Thaxter said that he is waiting to hear of a decision from the District Attorney's office where the matter was deferred last week. A ruling is expected this week.

School Shorts

RAISE GIVEN

The School Committee voted to grant a raise to Thelma Burns, METCO coordinator, from a salary of $17,100 to $18,650.

PRINCIPALS QUESTIONED

The School Committee questioned complaints they have received concerning the apparent failure of principals to explain and defend at Communications Council meetings the actions taken by the committee.

Jack Cramer, principal of the Joseph Osgood School said he trys to give a balanced view to parents, but said that at times he gets caught in a bind in trying to suggest to parents viable courses of action "down the road."

Kenneth Ekberg, principal of the Deer Hill School, attested to the range of opinions present at Communication Counsel meetings. "To respond unbiasedly is very hard to do," Ekberg said and further stated that subterfuge was never intended.

TEACHERS APPOINTED

Jean Fink, Marie Price, Kathryn Witley, and Joan Wool, Elementary teachers, were voted tenure by the School Committee Monday night. Kathy Jarvis, Kathy Neal and Margaret Smalzel were voted to third year appointments as Special Needs teachers.

NIX ON SITE

The Committee voted not to stand by the article requesting a transfer of land intended for school purposes to be used as a sewerage treatment plant site.

BUDGET CERTIFIED

The School Committee unanimously approved the 1979-80 proposed school budget of $3,531,516.

There was reconsideration of the new position of a health education instructor which would cost $14,000 proposed by Chairman Doris Golden who felt it wasn't the time to add such a position. The motion to delete the position failed to carry with a vote of 3-3.

DRAMA WORKSHOP

Many accolades and rounds of applause went to Ron Emmons, director of the Drama Workshop, and the cast and crew of Story Theatre. The School Committee gave unanimously approval of the workshop's trip to Castleton (Vt.) State College, where they will perform once again with the best high school actors in New England.

FOND FAREWELL

Monday night marked the last night that Chairman Doris Golden and Vice-Chairman Josephine Mahoney would sit on the board they have served for six and five years, respectively. A brief refreshment period was held so that the women could say goodbye to their friends. It was a sad moment but ended happily with well wishes for all.

Won't Rehire

may be faced with if a teacher is retained and then dismissed when not needed next year.

Maloney commented, "Yes, you will have flexibility in rehiring and no legal liabilities but it will be hard on the individual staff member who may not want to stick it out in Cohasset."

Doris Lehage, a spokesman for the Teachers Association, said, "This can also have an effect on educational program. It is hard on morale and hard to work when you're wondering what you're going to do in September. Waiting until June or July to hear is very difficult."

Mary O'Brien, a parent, noted that last summer some late resignations of teachers were received which necessitated last minute interviewing and hiring.

A compromise of sorts was suggested by Committee member Josephine Mahoney for the superintendent to recommend as early as possible or sometime in May the rehiring of necessary teachers.

The committee voted to rehire tenured staff in all grades.

Town Meeting

In addition Place noted the importance of the articles dealing with the Civil Service change in the Police Department and the zoning by-law changes which will affect the business districts.

Article 44 requests the town to empower Selectmen to petition the General Court to exempt future members of the Police Department from Civil Service regulations. Article 71, submitted by the Planning Board, requests a change in required area of a Highway District business lot from 10,000 square feet to 40,000 feet. An increase in frontage from 50 to 200 feet is also included as well as are many other increases in area requirements. Article 64 also requests changes for the area of a business lot in the Downtown District which would increase area from 0 to 5,000 square feet and frontage from 20 to 50 feet, width from 20 to 50 feet, with the rest of the current requirements remaining the same.

put in nicely, "Isn't it nice that we can see a theatrical production with a simple set, costumes, etc., and still have a high quality performance with imagination and charm."

The workshop cast includes: Kathleen Collins, Beth Donahue, Meri Fink, Jon Foell, David Hanlon, Scot Muir, Lisa O'Toole, Disa Pratt, Judy Vanderlugt, Jim Vivian and Jerry White.

They will continue on to the drama festival in Vermont April 19-21. The festival is not competition, but a showcase with performances and workshops, of the best high school drama this year. A New England cast will be chosen.

METCO

cedent will be set to let outside agencies hire school employes."

Maloney said further that the 48 students who are in the METCO program in Cohasset receive the same quality education and school curriculum as do all students.

Committee Chairman Doris Golden concurred with Maloney on METCO students and said their programs differ in no way from those of others. "They are one. They are a part of the Cohasset school system."

Selectmen

1 position - 3 year term

Question No. 1: What in your background and experience qualifies you for the office you seek?
Question No. 2: What are the ramifications of a state cap on spending for the Town of Cohasset?

George V. Adams
18 Reservoir Road

1. Engineers by nature are quick to cut to the facts and eliminate the superfluous. I am no exception. I believe I am qualified to be a selectman for the town of Cohasset because of:

1. 18 years of industrial experience in dealing with people, budgets, projects and deadlines.

2. An engineering education at Boston University, combined with a liberal arts curriculum at Harvard. A combination of the specific and the general.

3. A strong interest in seeing the town of Cohasset improve and prosper along with the willingness to work for that good.

4. The ability to see the town as others see us, from the outside, as well as from the inside.

2. The bulk of the town's spending is on schools and professional services. These are virtually non negotiable due to fiscal autonomy, and binding arbitration. If these services do not use self restraint in preparing their budgets, the brunt of the spending cap limit will have to be born by the remaining town services. This means someone will have to do without or with less. It would be indeed tragic if cuts would have to be made say in assistance to the elderly because of an increase in the school or other budget. I would like to see the selectmen prepare a prioritized list of needed services and request the town departments to respond in the order of this list. This would require some departments to relinquish some items, or services in favor of those in more need. Trying to do this in a town the size of Cohasset without affecting a friend or relative is indeed a tall order and it is going to require the understanding and support of all the town employees as well as the citizens to make this spending cap work. Let's face it, we have to do with less and some of the things we took for granted may not be available this year.

Doris C. Golden

1. I believe my public record speaks for itself in the areas of availability, leadership, fiscal accountability, knowledge of government, but perhaps most importantly the ability to work with people both young and old and from all walks of life.

Having been responsible for the education of our youth was a very serious matter and my ongoing concerns for the taxpayers to fund the learning process have always been a grave concern to me, after all, we have a large number of semi-retired and retired persons living on fixed incomes residing in town.

Being on the School Committee for the past six years, five of which I was Chairman, I have had experience in such vital areas as: budget planning and presentations, labor negotiations, personnel evaluations, state legislation, contract purchasing and warrant approval, employees' grievances, admininstrative duties, state and federal grant procedures, parliamentary rules and a basic understanding of effective government.

For the past 27 years the office of Selectman has had a woman serving on its Board. This custom brings as added dimension and philosophy into the realm of decision making.

If elected, I would continue to serve the community as my public record indicates, with leadership, compassion, and understanding.

2. As of April 19th, the return date of this questionaire, there is no formal or definitive State Cap Proposal for the residents or town officials to comment on as a basis of fact, only conjecture.

However, the first draft proposal by the Governor would have had a broad adverse effect on the total community. I believe that the Governor and the State Legislature will come forward in the near future with a compromise proposal, that while stringent, will allow an increase in the percentile of Annual Municipal Budgets of approximately 4 per cent over last year, which is within reason.

I would strongly urge that at the Annual Town Meeting, those articles that are not of a priority nature, although acted on favorably, be held in abeyance until this serious State Cap Proposal with all fiscal and social ramifications is fully explained and understood by the taxpayers and residents.

Lester B. Hiltz
9 Cushing Road

1. I have been a legal resident of Cohasset for over thirty-six years and my family roots go back several more years. Because I was raised and educated in Cohasset, I have a deep concern for the growth and development of the community and a sincere interest in the well being of my fellow townspeople. With the formal education and training and years of experience in leadership, management and administration gained while serving in the United States Air Force, I believe that I can effectively execute the duties and responsibilities required of a member of the Board of Selectmen. My experience over the past five years while serving the Town of Cohasset as the Director of Civil Defense and Emergency Preparedness and as Director of the Auxiliary Police Unit has provided me with invaluable insight and knowledge of the operation of all Town Departments. In both of these important capacities, I have demonstrated by my actions a willingness to serve and the capability to discharge the public's trust. Being a semi-retired person, I have the time and, most of all, the desire to diligently and honestly serve the citizens of Cohasset as Selectman.

2. A state Cap on spending will be an intrusion by the State into the fiscal affairs of the Town of Cohasset. This state mandated plan will be another encroachment by the state on Home Rule, amounting to further erosion of local control. The intent of the proposed cap on spending is idealistic, but it fails to allow for uncontrolled inflation, fiscal autonomy in the School Committee and binding arbitration in collective bargaining. Without some flexibility at the local level, essential programs and services would have to be reduced or ultimately eliminated. Expansion or improvement of special equipment or vehicles necessary for the health, welfare, protection or safety of the residents would be in jeopardy. And last, but not least, town employees would be denied cost-of-living pay increases. Although a tax cap would constrain spending, enhance fiscal discipline and eliminate some waste in government, it is unlikely that local property taxes would be reduced. The medicine that a tax cap provides appears to be far worse than the disease it attempts to cure. Furthermore, it infringes on the fundamental values and prerogatives of the citizens of Cohasset.

Rocco F. Laugelle
18 Norfolk Road

1. I am one of twelve children, born, raised, and educated in Cohasset. I am married with four children. I served in the Marine Corps during World War II. For 25 years I have been employed by Brockton Edison, in and around our community.

I am a member of the Government Island Study Committee, executive committee of American Legion (twice Post Commander), the Boards of Directors of the Community Center and Sailing Club. I have been a Water Commissioner for twelve years.

I seek the office of Selectman so I may better continue to serve Cohasset. Communities throughout the Commonwealth face difficult financial times. I am well aware of the need to carefully evaluate the expenditure of each and every tax dollar in today's inflationary spiral. I believe that I have the time and qualifications to be of service as a Selectman. I have been and will continue to be available to all.

2. At this point in time it is impossible to frame an intelligent answer to this question as the legislature and Governor have not defined the terms, form or limits of the "state cap." I do, however, agree that a cap in some form must be enacted to give the local property taxpayer some much needed relief.

Glenn A. Pratt

1. I believe I can bring to the office of Selectman an added source of sound management experience as well as an intimate knowledge of the town through lifetime residence and a decade of town service in several areas. My current term on the Planning Board has enabled me to participate in rewriting the Zoning By-laws. My service on the Personnel Board and the Committee to Study Central Purchasing has given me an overview of the operating departments of the town.

Involved in the day-to-day operation of a business employing several hundred persons, I am thoroughly versed in modern management practices, including personnel selection and direction, effective decision-making processes, and response to public needs.

I can see an opportunity in the office for enlisting more citizen talent in town affairs and to develop more coordination of committee functions.

I am prepared to make the time and energy commitment necessary for the office of Selectman.

2. Cohasset faces most of the general problems of our times including inflation and the rising costs of public services and education. In the recent past the town has operated under a philosophy of priority spending. Cohasset faces increased capital spending in the near future to upgrade and expand sewer and water services, as well as to enlarge and improve municipal office space. These additional capital expenditures to improve services and facilities will necessitate an increased operating budget. This, coupled with a state cap on spending will place Cohasset in a precarious position. Through careful management of town affairs and through a possible increased use of contract services, a balance must be struck between necessary efficiency and the public's wishes.

I believe that through proper management of town government the solution to operate under a cap on spending will evolve.

Assessor

1 position - 3 year term
Michael C. Patrolia
15 Cushing Road

Question No. 1: What in your background and experience qualifies you for the office you seek?

Question No. 2: What is the policy of the Board of Assessors when a property has been "improved" by the extension of town utilities such as water and sewer lines? Do you feel this policy represents the best interest of the taxpayer?

Michael C. Patrolia
15 Cushing Road

1. Completed courses in real estate and appraising at Burdett College. Completed appraisal course at Boston Center For Adult Education. 15 years in home building and remodeling. 9 year assessors.

2. The Board of Assessors does not have a policy in regards to water and sewer lines. The value of water lines to new homes is reflected in their sales. Those on the sewer lines we feel are assessed fairly; based on market value and in relation to other homes. I feel this policy is in the best interest of the taxpayer.

School Committee

Question No. 1: What in your background and experience qualifies you for the office you seek?

Question No. 2: What changes would you like to see made in our school system: What additional costs or savings would these changes entail?

2 positions - 3 year term
Irene E. Brown

1. For the past 10 years, I have worked for and with the children of Cohasset — as a Girl Scout Leader, school volunteer, Communications Council member, Youth Hockey Treasurer, Recreation Commission member, and for the past 18 months as a member of the School Committee. I believe that this service to the youth of this Town has familiarized me with their parents and the educational goals that they wish to attain.

During my term on the School Committee, I have given these goals a number one priority, with no little consideration given to the taxpayers of this community, especially those living on fixed, or limited incomes. While I have been a Committee member, we have brought to the Town two of the lowest increase budgets in recent years.

2. While we have a very good school system, there is always room for improvement. Since 80 per cent of our budget is for negotiated salaries, and our school population is declining ever so gradually, we must concern ourselves that this 80 per cent is correct and that we are fully utilizing our staff. The remaining 20 per cent does not leave much room for "frills," and while I do believe that our administrators have honestly presented us with their priorities, we must be constantly on the alert to keep our expenses in line. Inflation has raised havoc with everyone's budget, and the community must believe that the School Committee is aware of this fact, and is doing all that is possible to hold school spending down.

Martha K. Gjesteby
81 Old Pasture Road

1. For 18 years I have lived in Cohasset and during that period my four children have attended the Cohasset Public Schools. During this time, I have attended school committee meetings, volunteered in the schools, served on the Junior High and Senior High Communication Councils. I was past co-chairman of Junior High Council and am presently co-chairman of Senoir High Council. I was chairman of the Steering Committee of the Communication Councils. In regards to the school curriculum, I was appointed several years ago to a sub-committee of the school committee for evaluation of the physical education and athletic program K-12.

...es Answer ...uestions

Formerly, I was elected to the Planning Board and presently I am serving on the Capital Budget Committee as well as Cohasset's liaison on the joint Regional Transportation Committee. Some of my present community activities are Community Center Board on Membership & Cohasset Booster Club. My education background includes a B.S. in chemistry from Simmons College.

I have the time to be available for workshops or special conferences designated for school committee in order to be a better informed member.

2. Having been present at School Committee meetings for the last 8 years, I realize the budget must be carefully analyzed not just in the present year, but compared to the past. This year there seems to be more scrutinization than usual and while presently there is a 2.14 per cent increase, it's substantially less than 5-6 per cent of the last few years. It does not appear to lower our educational excellence and can be basically supported.

For a more informed operation of the school I would like to propose to the committee commencing in the fall a scheduling each month of special meetings as part of the agenda. Some subjects should include: educational reports, i.e. Math, English; program evaluation, i.e. the proposed gifted program; a five year planned maintenance schedule including capital expenditures; and the achievement scores of K-12 reviewed in comparison with several past years. All of these and other subjects would be incorporated into a preliminary budget review.

From this procedure a better working relationship of school committee with staff would result and the public would have more knowledge of the school's operations. Better decisions on the quality of curriculum and the education of our children would result, ever mindful of the better savings resulting.

John E. Kinchla

1. I attended Boston College, School of Education and majored in English and Finance. I have experience in business, teaching and counseling.

I received cost control experience when I saved Spector Freight of Systems of Needhan, $125,000.00 in cliams; supervised 60 drivers and oversaw the operation of their equipment. Other experiences in business have provided me with skills in negotiating the Labor Law.

My education at Boston College prepared me to teach, and I have taught at Boston College High, P.C.C. Bridgewater State College, and Taconic High, Pittsfield, MA. These experiences have given me an insight into school administration and classroom realities.

I have been involved in various counseling capacities with youth in Cohasset and Weymouth, with patients at Mass Chronic Diseases Hospital and with inmates at MCI Walpole. I was a writer/counselor with the Muscular Dystrophy Assoc. I believe I have an excellent understanding of children and of students with special needs.

2. I would work for harmony on the committee and I support the idea of a five member committee.

I would address the problems of teacher evaluation and tenure and would ask for more parental input in this process. I am in favor of a curriculum that includes Music and Art. I am in favor of reducing the teaching staff in compliance with the existing contract until its expiration.

I am in favor of increasing the average class size from 21 to 26. This 25 per cent increase should not be expected to lower the approximately 2 million dollars in teachers salaries. I do not envision a $500,000 savings. But I do see some very real prospects in utilizing team teaching and aides in keeping the salary schedule from strangling the system.

I want to see the SAT scores continue upward; I want to see the Athletic Dept. budget spread over as many children as are interested in athletics.

I think the Town should give serious thought to utilizing the Osgood School as a new Town Hall. I shall be open to suggestions. I intend to be an active and informed member.

Gerard E. Reed Jr.

1. Master Degree plus 55 semester hours; experience with five school budgets; worked with all levels of public education; energy survey experience with energy saving products for gas, oil, water and electric bills; license nursing home administrator; formulated, acquired and supervised many federal funded projects. At present: a special needs person, junior high level; instructor night school, special adult citizens; energy saver — own business — products and consultation; sales representative for local oil company.

2. In order to make changes a school committee person should listen to the concerns of the community and from those concerns pursue change. The most important product of the schools are the children and programs should be developed to meet their tomorrows.

Many of us out in the world of work see graduates even with a college background lacking the tools to do their jobs. Certain courses even those offered at a vocational school need to be dropped. Many graduates today cannot find a job. All change will cost money. Costs and additional costs can be reduced or kept in check by placing the money not used in one account to a new area of need. The taxpayers needs will be met by Reed.

School Committee

1 position - 1 year
To fill a vacancy

Diana Davis Kornet
29 Nichols Road

1. We have three children, presently in the first, second, and fifth grades, so in addition to being concerned about our school system in general, I also have a personal interest in quality education for our young people. I have spent many volunteer hours in both the Osgood and Deer Hill schools during the three years we have lived here, and have participated in the Communication Councils, co-chairing the Osgood Council this year. Before we started our family I taught sixth grade in New Hampshire for a year, and substituted for another year. I received a B.A. from Connecticut College in 1966, majoring in Biology. I am sure that being a parent familiar with the school, in touch with other parents of young children,and having taught myself, I will be able to bring a valuable perspective to the School Committee.

2. I don't have any specific changes in mind at this point, but I am determined that the smaller number of students entering in the next few years will not find classrooms stripped of quality in our eagerness to save money; we must find the middle road, combining fiscal responsibility with high standards of education for our children.

Library Trustee

3 positions - 3 year term

Question No. 1: What in your background and experience qualifies you for the office you seek?

Question No. 2: What changes could the library make to better serve its users - present and potential?

David Chittim
130 Linden Drive

1. Personnel Committee, Cohasset 1973-75; School Committee, Longmeadow 1971-72; Division Personnel Manager, New England Telephone, 32 years; Dartmouth College, A.B.

2. Integration of educational functions between library and school departments. Expansion of adult education opportunities to be sponsored by the library.

Elizabeth F. Eaton
30 Beach Street

1. Graduate of Mt. Holyoke College majoring in English Literature and Drama with minors in Art and French. A life-long love of books and reading and a hope to stimulate the same in the townspeople as well as their children.

2. I really don't know. The library is too small to have many research and technical tasks and the demand for them is not great. The visual-audio part might be enlarged but cannot be since 19 per cent of the total budget must, by law, be spent on books. The best way to improve our service is to increase our appropriation from the town. In these days of increasing book costs and holding the line on spending, it seems an empty dream.

Nancy M. Gilmore
34 Summer Street

1. 1952-53, Williamstown, MA. Public Library page (Diverse responsibilities: Service to public at charge desk, cataloguing, book repair, shelving and responsibility for primary school age story hour).

1953-57, Library, University of Massachusetts at Amherst (cataloguing, inventory of collection, book repair, reference desk).

1970-75, Board of the Friends of the Cohasset Free Public Library, Memorial Library .

2. The library now has a well-planned, beautifully renovated building. We must use this facility to its fullest potential. The library is a public service and responsible, responsive service must be its daily objective.

Changes in library service must be on a continuing basis as needs present themselves. (Example: current need for more materials for high school age users).

The dissemination of information via the media that a public library has available is a necessity in today's world. To accomplish this requires the maintenance and acquisition of a considered, servicable collection of materials that satisfy most needs — and the personnel to facilitate it. This requires adequate funding, both private as well as public. It must be a prime concern of a trustee to insure that this critical public service is sufficiently funded.

Board Of Health

1 position - 3 year term

Question No. 1: What in your background and experience qualifies you for the office you seek?

Question No. 2: What are your priorities for the Board of Health implementation of the Metropolitan Area Planning Commission 208 Mandate (New state standards for solid waste — dumps, storage of highway salt to prevent pollution of Lily Pond, and town wide maintenance and inspection of septic systems)?

Marilyn G. Sweeney
73 Elm Street

1. For the last year as the Consumer Vice-President and two years previous a Board member of the Health Planning Council of Greater Boston, I have been directly involved in assessment of health services and planning for the reduction or expansion of services to meet real needs. The priorities availability, quality and cost effectiveness that are part of P.L. 93.641, allowed a framework for Providers and Consumers to develop a Health Systems Plan for HSA IV, one of the six HSA's in Massachusetts. In my work on the State Health Coordinating Council reviewing the HSPs' of the other five HSAs' and working to develop a State Health Plan (SHP), the need for sound reasoning and a generalized approach that my Family-Community Health Worker background provided has been invaluable. The balance that working on the South Metro, the local advisory council, has given me points out the need for a well informed local constituency to be part of the Local, Regional and State Planning arena.

More specifically my work on the Prevention/Health Promotion-Environmental Occupational sub committees of both HSA IV & SHCC, and the material gleened from my six years as a working member of the Water/Sewer Department have given me an understanding of some of the complexities I would face as a member of the Board of Health, if elected. I would welcome this challenge to be of service to all the people of Cohasset.

2. My priorities for the Board of Health implementation of the MAPC 208 mandate would be a town wide maintenance and inspection of septic systems based on a thorough study of costs related to implementation. This could be a major tool in reducing both water and soil pollution. The issue of our Sanitary Landfill and its' lifespan of six-ten years has to be a focus of the Board in the next few years.

Pollution of Lily Pond is an area that needs to be investigated, not because of salt storage but because 3A is a state salted road, and the run-off from the Veterans area into Peppermint Brook may be polluting. The storm drains also need to be checked for the part they play in possible pollution of what is now our major water supply.

The Elms Meadow wells are in danger of pollution from the open salt storage area in the Parkingway, but since there will be limited use of this water supply in the future we should concentrate on Lily Pond.

My suggestion for dealing with the 208 mandate would be a joint committee made up of selected members of the Board of Health, Conservation Commission, Planning Board, Drainage Committee and Water/Sewer Board. Only if Cohasset is looked at in total can an organized approach to solving some of the present and future problems be addressed.

ence qualifies you for the office you seek?

Question No. 2: Please comment on the options presented recently for 3A by our consultant Roberta Leary and state which one you prefer.

Leavitt T. Goodwin
44 Hillside Drive

1. I grew up in Cohasset, attended school here, and am now raising my own family here. The character of the town is very important to me, and I would like to see the delicate mix of residents, business and recreation we all enjoy preserved. As a current member of the Planning Board I have been surprised to see the large amoung of land in the Town that may still be developed as the economy changes. I am looking forward to working to insure that new development enhances the beauty of Cohasset.

2. Mrs. Leary's study was excellent, and presented us with a broad range of options for zoning changes on 3A. Unfortunately the most difficult task is to take the course of action that will benefit and please the majority. It is clear to me from many conversations with concerned citizens that any change will aggravate some group. I do not feel we should place a hardship on any individual, so until we can further investigate the extent of potential hardships, and eliminate them, I favor Option 1, which is no change from the present zoning.

Planning Board

1 position - 2 year term

John E. Bradley
27 Old Coach Road

1. Attorney who specializes in zoning and related real estate problems and real estate law in general.

2. At this time, I prefer recommendation (1) together with a general up-grading of design specifications.

Water Comm.

1 position - 3 year term

Question No. 1: What in your background and experience qualifies you for the office you seek?

Question No. 2: Do you feel that a new central sewage treatment plant is necessary for Cohasset? If so, do you agree with the Metcalf & Eddy proposed plan? If not, what alternatives would you propose?

Richard P. Barrow
283 King Street

1. A life long resident of the Town, educated in the Cohasset schools. Member Cohasset Police Department 29 years. Veteran World War II U.S.N. My assets, knowledge of the Town and its needs, good common sense approach to issues and my availability.

Phase #1 - of the water department is complete, with a large supply of water and a new treatment plant.

Phase II - would be management, issues with high priority should be water rates, and cleaner water. I find compared to other towns our water rates are high. Those one or two member families, usually elderly or on fixed incomes are hit the hardest. Expansion of water mains should be considered for areas of Town without, for home use as well as fire protection.

2. Yes, I believe sewage is needed in the Hillside and Veteran's area, so called. Metcalf & Eddy's proposed plan of enlarging the present system appears to be the best approach at this time and also the most reasonable, and economical, to construct and maintain.

Lot E. Bates
365 Beechwood Street

1. I was construction superintendent for the same company for 25 years. During this time I was responsible for the layout and construction of schools, supermarkets and factories. This included drainage systems, water mains, septic systems and driveways. I was a member of the Cohasset School Committee for 7 years, a member of the School Facilities Committee for 12 years. While a member of this committee an addition to the High School and the Deer Hill School were completed. I was also a member of the Historic Districts Study Committee and a by-law was adopted at the 1978 Town Meeting. I am presently Chairman of the Fire Station Study Committee. Plans of this committee for a new sub firestation are now out for bid, and are to be presented to the 1979 Town Meeting.

I graduated from Cohasset High School, attended Northeastern University.

I believe this experience qualifies me to the elected office of Water Commissioner.

2. I feel the town needs a new central sewage treatment plant and as many homes and businesses as possible should be connected.

I will have to study the Metcalf & Eddy plans thoroughly before forming an opinion or proposal.

If elected I intend to bring positive thinking and an open mind to the Water Commission.

Recreation Comm.

1 position - 5 year term

Question No. 1: What in your background and experience qualifies you for the office you seek?

Question No. 2: If elected, what coordination would you propose between the community center and the recreation department to avoid duplication of programs?

Alna L. Ekberg
7 Haystack Lane

1. I received a B.S. in physical education from the University of Massachusetts in Amherst in 1962. Included in the curriculum were courses in recreation organization and administration. I have 10 years of experience as a physical educator in public and private schools.

2. In any town with more than one organization providing similar activities for the townspeople coordination between those groups is very necessary to avoid duplication of programs and efforts.

It is my understanding that the Community Center Program Committee and the head of the Recreation Department are in communication at the time that both programs are being prepared.

If I am elected my position will be to encourage continued cooperation between the Recreation Department and the Community Center as well as other town agencies.

Housing Authority

1 position - 5 year term

Question No. 1: What in your background and experience qualifies you for the office you seek?

Question No. 2: Do you feel that the Cohasset Housing Authority should authorize and plan additional housing projects at this time? If so, for what segment of the population should new housing be built? If not, why not?

Frederick L. Huntwork
50 Elm Court

1. I am 61 years old, retired after 25 years on the Police Department and am interested in the welfare of Senior Citizens.

2. Yes, I definitely think that new housing should be built. I would like a new development built across the driveway from the original — the land is vacant and should be fairly easy to acquire.

Lloyd W. Prescott
69 Old Pasture Road

1. Businessman. 2. Have worked with elderly in operation of Senior Shuttle in Cohasset for Sunday church services.

2. Yes, it is my opinion and hope that additional housing for the elderly will be made available in the near future.

Naturally the construction of this housing project is dependent upon federal and state aid being available, and our sewage system being sufficient in size to handle the facility.

With our elderly fast becoming a large segment of our population we must look for additional housing. Our senior citizens require very few town services and their impact upon our tax rate would be very small.

Candidates Night

year. These candidates fielded the most questions at candidates night.

One question that all School Committee candidates, candidate for reelection Irene Brown, Gerard Reed, John Kinchla and Martha Gjesteby, had to wrestle with came from Roy Fitzsimmons, who asked their opinion on tenure.

Gjesteby felt that tenure should be eliminated because the teachers are well represented by the Teachers Association. Brown would approve of tenure for 5-year periods only. "Nobody is guaranteed a job for life," she said. Reed commented that as a teacher, himself, he had opted to give up tenure, to go on to other school departments. He further emphasized the need to evaluate teachers. Kinchla agreed that the key to teaching quality was through evaluation.

Diana Kornet, a candidate to fill a one year vacancy on the School Committee, was unable to attend.

The five candidates for the Selectman's seat, Doris Golden (who was not present), George Adams, Lester Hiltz, Rocco Laugelle and Glenn Pratt, also fielded questions that were directed to them all.

The first concerned the candidate's thoughts about creating the position of executive secretary.

Adams felt strongly that the town needed this type of administrator. "It is presumptuous to assume that anyone can be a full time Selectman and have a full-time job at the same time."

Hiltz said that the Se lectmen's office needs some professional help and that he would be available to serve in that capacity if he were elected. Hiltz had indicated that he is semi-retired in his speech.

Candidate Pratt agreed that the town can't always expect to have a part-time Selectman doing a full-time job. He also suggested "walking before running" and suggested the possibility of employing people already in the town's service.

Laugelle felt the Selectmen's office needs administrative help, but felt also that the government study committee should first outline the position more specifically.

Another question from Building Inspector James Litchfield asked the candidates for their thoughts on the Town Hall articles.

Both Pratt and Hiltz favored considering the Study Committe's recommendation to renovate the Town Hall, although Hiltz suggested a temporary move to the 3A professional building. Adams remark, "This is the Town Hall," adressed within the present Town Hall's auditorium clearly delineated his preference. Laugelle considered the difference of opinion concerning the renovation plan between the Building Inspector and the architects. "We may have a school available soon. We should take a hard look at this possibility," he said.

Other candiates who spoke include: Michael Patrolia, for reelection to a 3-year term as Assessor; Richard Barrow for a 3-year term as Water Commissioner; Marilyn Sweeney and Stephen Wigmore for a 3-year term on the Board of Health; David Chittim, Elizabeth Eaton and Nancy Gilmore for three 3-year terms as Trustees of Cohasset Free Public Library; Leavitt Goodwin for a one 5-year term on the Planning Board and John Bradley for a 2-year term to fill a vacancy on the Planning Board. (See the League's candidates questionnaire on page 10.)

Avoid Route 3, Advises Rep. Murray

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R) Cohasset has urged local commuters to Boston to travel Route 3A to Neponset to the expressway starting April 1st.

"There are five bridges from Washington Street, Braintree to Route 18 in Weymouth which are in very poor condition and must be repaired now," Murray said.

Mary Jeanette continued, "Chief Engineer Justin Radlo informed us at a meeting that the Union Street bridge will be the first to be repaired, however, once the project has begun, all bridges will be under repair simultaneously."

Chief Radlo informed the group that instead of repairing the bridges in three sections, they are going to attempt to do this in two sections. Rep. Murray said, "The Chief told us that repairing the bridges in two sections rather than three sections would save six weeks time and approximately $155,000 dollars." "If traffic flows properly, D.P.W. will repair the bridges in two sections," she concluded.

The starting date is April 1 and completion date October 1st for this project.

Easter Egg Hunt

The Scituate-Cohasset Welcome Newcomers Club will sponsor an Easter Egg Hunt for the children of club members on Saturday, April 7 at 1 p.m. at Scituate High School.

Besides the hunt there will be various games for the children. The program is open to members' children who are between the ages of two and 10.

C.C.C. Nursery Registration

The Cohasset Community Center Nursery School is now accepting enrollments for the fall season. Parents are urged to apply as early as possible to insure a place for their child.

The Community Center Nursery School is a non-profit, nondiscriminatory agency which has been providing a quality educational program for three and four year old children on the South Shore for over 25 years. Children must be at least 2 years 9 months of age to enter the program. Separate programs are provided for three and four year olds; each program designed to fit the developmental needs of that age group.

Roadrace By-The-Sea

VANTAGE VIEW of race is enjoyed by Jennifer Dohan on shoulders of Dad David. Two runners get cooled off going past the sea. Another finisher crosses the line all by himself.

672 Run In Cohasset Roadrace

By Judith Epstein

The dank and drizzly day did not deter the 672 runners from competing in Cohasset's annual Roadrace By-The-Sea Sunday, sponsored by Cohasset Jaycees and AAU sanctioned. Nor did the day discourage a tremendous turnout of Cohasset residents and people from all over the state and beyond.

The winner of the race was Vincent Fleming of Melrose and the Greater Boston track club with a time of 30.02. The Class I (under 18) winner was Richard Robinson of Duxbury at 32:20;the Masters (over 40) winner was John Hurley of Stoughton with a time of 35 minutes, and the first woman to finish the race was Sarah Linsley of Cohasset at 36:51.

The starting line on Elm Street brewed with runners and onlooking crowds, all impatiently awaiting Roy Fitzsimmons' starting gun to go off at 1 p.m. When the "GO!" signal was sounded, a blur of colors seemed to charge down the street, as runners donned in togs of rainbow hues for the first of the 10,000 meter or 6.2 mile race.

The race was run along Elm Street, Margin Street, Atlantic Avenue, Jerusalem Road, Forest Avenue, North Main Street and Highland Avenue to the finish line in front of the Town Hall.

The spectators watched admiringly as the running throng made its way off into the grey afternoon and resolved to give up smoking and take part themselves next year. They wended their way back to the Town Hall to await the finish, some holding umbrellas, some stopwatches.

People milled around either side of Highland Avenue in front of the Town Hall, photographers waited eagerly by the finish line, and youngsters held bets among themselves as to whose father would come in first. Everyone seemed to suffer from cold toes, judging from the number of foot-stomping dances that went on.

The excitement increased when Roy Fitzsimmons announced the runners' approach onto North Main Street, the last leg of the race. At 2 second past 1:30 p.m., tall and dark Vinny Fleming ran easily and almost nonchalantly through the ribbon at the finish line.

Almost a minute later Craig Bloodgood of Duxbury came in second with a time of 31 minutes even. Bradford Hurst of Salem, New Hampshire, came in third at 31:18.

From then on, other runners, obviously pitting themselves against each other, charged side-by-side to the finish. Fitzsimmons handed each runner a wooden stick with the number of the place he or she had finished. This number would later enable the runner to find his/her time on the computed list posted in the Town Hall auditorium.

Although 635 runners were officially entered in the race, 671 runners finished. Fitzsimmons commented later that a cap would have to be placed on the number of runners competing next year.

National class runner Fleming said of the race, "Tremendous, beautiful, I just wanted a lead so I could enjoy the course." Fleming added that he could have run the race faster (he averaged under five minutes a mile), if there had been anyone running with him.

Second place Bloodgood said, "I was just starting to warm up at the end." He said he wasn't trying to win the race and noted the difficulty of keeping up with a runner like Fleming.

There were repeated comments by runners on the beauty of the course and no one seemed to mind the rawness of the weather. (Ron Emmons did admit he was a little cold by the sea.)

Gold, silver and bronze medals went to the first finishers in each class, awarded by Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray. Others placing were: Under 18 — second, Keith Paton, Duxbury; third, Greg Collins; Over 40 — second, Mike Kerins of Boston; third, Al Donaghy of North Abington.

The first 200 runners received T-shirts, gifts from the Jaycees. The first man and woman runners won running suits donated by The Runnery in Hanover; gift certificates were given by almost every merchant in town, as were dinners for two from the Red Lion Inn, the Greenhouse and Hugo's Lighthouse.

Saturday Special...Cohasset Town Election

The Cohasset town elections will be held Saturday, April 14, at Town Hall. The polls are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Assistant Town Clerk Frances Marks predicted this week that races for selectmen and the school committee would produce a good turnout. "It's a townie, a town thing, and there has been a lot of campaigning going on," she commented.

Voters are reminded that they may cast absentee ballots at the town clerk's office until Friday noon time. Mrs. Marks noted that many absentee ballots had already come in from people who will be away on election day.

This year's election has a five-way race for selectman to succeed Mary Jeanette Murray who decided not to seek reelection in order to devote more time to her duties in the state legislature. In the race are George Adams, Doris Golden, Lester Hiltz, Rocco Laugelle and Glen Pratt for a three-year term.

Vying for two three-year terms on the School Committee are Irene Brown, Martha Gjestby, John Kinchla and Gerard Reed. Diana David Kornet is unopposed for a one-year term.

In other contests, Marilyn Sweeney and Stephen Wigmore are running for a single three-year term on the Board of Health, and Lot Bates and Richard Barrows are seeking a three-year term on on the Board of Water Commissioners.

Frederick Huntwork and Lloyd Prescott are seeking a one five-year term on the Housing Authority.

Candidates who are unopposed for election include: Michael Patrolia for a three-year term on the Board of Assessors; Leavitt Goodwin for a five-year term on the Planning Board; John Bradley for a two-year term on the Planning Board; Alna Ekberg for a five-year term on the Recreation Commission and David Chittim, Elizabeth Eaton and Nancy Gilmore for three three-year terms on the Board of Library Trustees.

138-123 On A Secret Ballot

Police Win Civil Service Fight

RICHARD HAVERILL
. . . Capital Budget speaker

PATRICK HURLEY
Advisory Committee spokesman

DAVID PLACE
. . . Makes a point.

A secret ballot at the Annual Town Meeting Tuesday night resulted in the defeat of Article 44, which called for the exemption of future members of the Police Department from Civil Service Laws and Rules, with a vote of 138 to 123.

Since the meeting's start Saturday voters have approved an operating budget of $6,558,199 which includes a $3.5 million school budget, continued study and plans for the Town Hall renovation and retention of the School Committee at six members. Voters have defeated articles requesting $625,000 to construct and furnish a new sub fire station, $65,000 to install a water main on Route 3A and $235,000 and site location for a new sewage treatment plant.

Proponent of Article 44 Selectman Henry Ainslie, who spoke for his board, read aloud the Selectmen's proposed rules and regulations for assuming full responsibility of the Police Department.

Ainslie prefaced his remarks by noting the dismissal of two police officers within the past two years and the Selectmen's goal "to reduce the chances of such things happening in the first place."

He outlined a recent case involving a patrolman who was dismissed from the department. The man in question had been known to Civil Service officials as an admitted alcoholic, yet Selectmen hadn't been apprised of his condition.

Ainslie said one reason for the exhorbitant Police Department over-

Planners Innocent Of Conflict Charge

Two present members and one former member of the Planning Board were exonerated of conflict of interest violations last week by the District Attorney's office.

Chairman of the Planning Board Glenn Pratt, Vice-Chairman John Bradley and consultant to the board Roberta Leary were declared not in violation of the criminal provision of the conflict of interest law, General Law 2668A.

Selectman Arthur Clark read the ruling in a letter sent to Eric Pearson, owner of Highway Motor Sales at Town Meeting Saturday morning. Pearson had filed a complaint with the District Attorney's office concerning possible violations on March 22, 1979.

Pearson had alleged that Mrs. Leary resigned from the Planning Board on July 6, 1977 and was paid a fee on Nov. 15, 1978 by the Planning Board for consulting services. Pearson alleged that the conflict of interest law prohibited such services.

It was ruled, however, that the applicable section of the law does not prohibit consulting services and deals only with former municipal employees who act as an agent or attorney or receive compensation from someone other than the town.

Another section of the law does prohibit appointment of a former board member until the expiration of 30 days from the termination of service. But still no evidence of a violation by Mrs. Leary was found.

Pearson further alleged that Bradley had acted as an agent to obtain a building permit for a lot owner in Cohasset. Two sections of the law, the D.A.'s office noted, prohibit a "municipal employee" form receiving compensation from acting as an agent or attorney for anyone other than the town in a particular matter in which the town has a substantial interest.

However, special municipal employees are exempt from these sections except in very limited circumstances which are not present in this case, the letter stated. According to the records of Town Counsel, Planning

EPA Recommends Expanded Sewer

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has issued Cohasset a permit allowing the continued discharge of effluent to James Brook until Dec. 31, 1981. After that time, the EPA recommended that Cohasset use additional sewage treatment works, dumping effluent to Cohasset Harbor.

The EPA recommended the following schedule for the town of Cohasset:

By June 30, 1979 submit complete proposed facilities plan, including expanded secondary sewage treatment facilities to the Massachusetts Division of Water Pollution (MDWPC) for review and approval.

By Sept. 30, 1979, file a complete application with the MDWPC for grant assistance in preparation of final plans and specifications (Step 2) for the approved project.

By June 30, 1980, submit complete final plans and specifications to MDWPC for review and approval.

By Oct. 30, 1980 file a complete application with the MDWPC for grant assistance in the construction (Step 3) of the approved project.

By March 31, 1981 commence construction of the approved treatment works.

By Dec. 31, 1981 complete construction of the treatment works.

"The EPA has every right to enforce this schedule," Supt. of the Water and Sewer Department Edwin Pratt said last week. Pratt explained that tests show that Cohasset has had increasing difficulty in meeting effluent characteristic requirements which include: flow, biochemical oxygen demand (BOD), total suspended solids, settleable solids, fecal coliform bacteria, total coliform bacteria, Cl2.

Chairman of the Board of Water and Sewer Commissioners John Hobbs concurred,

Voters Reject Sewer Treatment Proposal

Article 35, one of two articles concerning the proposed sewage treatment facility, was defeated at Monday's session of the annual town meeting after a debate which lasted until midnight.

The article, which requested residents to transfer a 10-acre parcel of land bounded by the South Shore Music Circus and Smith Place to be used as the site of the treatment plant, was defeated 246 to 113.

Article 36 was discussed in conjunction with Article 35 and requested $235,000 for plans for a system of main drains and sewers to be extended to various areas of town. Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter ruled the article couldn't be voted on, as the previous article's defeat left the facility without a site.

John Hobbs, chairman of the Board of Water Commissioners, presented the articles and discussed the long history of Cohasset's sewer studies. He also described the town's need for additional facilities.

According to Hobbs, at least 10 studies of sewers and pollution since 1906 up to the present Metcalf and Eddy proposal, have been undertaken in Cohasset. Every study recommended positive sewer action, Hobbs said, but it wasn't until 1968 when the present treatment facility was built that any action was taken. That plant treats 72,000 gallons per day serving 175 customers made of up residences, businesses and the Junior-Senior High School.

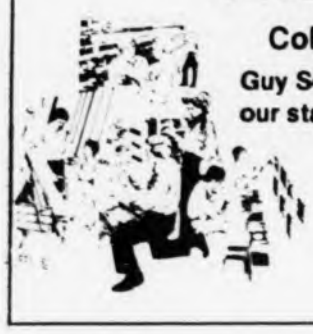
The plant now discharges a poor quality effluent, Hobbs said. The plant is overloaded and the state has mandated that no more hookups can be permitted. Tests of water around town show a pollution problem, he said. The federal Environmental Protection Agency has given Cohasset a time schedule to follow in developing an additional treatment facility — Cohasset is on the EPA's priority list because the agency perceives a need, Hobbs said.

Hobbs explained that passage of the articles meant a site had been approved and more plans for the facility would be drawn before the town meeting was asked for permission to begin construction.

Thomas Hintz, project engineer for Metcalf and Eddy, recommended extended sewering to the Hillside area of town, the veterans project and portions of Route 3A. He cited the cove and gulf areas around the harbor which repeatedly show pollution problems and which are close to shellfish breeding areas and listed several other polluted areas which drain into ground water.

Cohasset's share of the cost of the $12.7 million project would be $3.9 million; the remainder of the funds would come from federal and state agencies. The cost for a resident in an area to be hooked-up would be $280 annually, Hintz said. Maintenance and operating costs were estimated at $150,000.



The Advisory Board recommended both articles. Chairman Patrick Hurley said, "For the town not to go forward would not be responsible. We have no wisdom to add."

The Capital Budget Committee gave the project a low priority. The committee was not convinced, according to Chairman Richard Avery, of the system's benefits and wanted to see it better defined. "A small part of town is being sewered, yet the whole town is carrying the burden."

Several residents echoed the sentiment that more information was needed and moved for postponement, but Moderator David Place indicated the artcicles both required a two-thirds vote and that a no vote would accomplish the same result as postponement.

Hobbs responded to the comments by saying, "At some point you have accept some professsional competence. On the part of the commissioners, the EPA and state agencies, we feel there is a need. We could very well have a higher authority step in."

New Budget Approved At $6.55 Million

Town Meeting voters unanimously approved a new operating budget of $6,558,199 last Saturday.

This year's budget is up $212,153 or 3.3 per cent from last year. The tax rate for this year is $49.60 per $1,000 valuation, Hurley said. The projection for the fiscal 1980 tax rate is still unclear, but may represent no increase if property assessments and state aid goes up.

The large items within the budget include: a total school budget of $3,531,516 which is up $69,228 or 1.9 per cent from last year; total protection of persons and property budget of $1,055,598, which includes Police and Fire Departments and many other services.

The big money article passed with little discussion after its introduction by Patrich Hurley, Chairman of the Advisory Board. Hurley outlined the months of work his committee had spent in coming up with budget totals.

"The election of the Governor added a sidelight," he commented. "How do we operate in bringing together all budget requests with the tax cap? We are in a state of flux."

"The impact of the cost of petroleum based products — oil, gasoline, heat, light — each of us has to deal with," he said.

School Committee Will Have Six Members

An article proposing reduction of the School Committee was six to five members was defeated by voters at the annual town meeting Monday night.

Proponent Richard Sylvia, a former board member, said reduction would improve the general operation of the committee, rendering it more efficient, decisive and responsive to the community. His main premise for the reduction was that the large number of tie votes the committee had within the last three years lost time and delayed issues.

Ann Baird said the six-member committee hasn't been a problem to Cohasset, and that it particularly helped with a large workload.

Committee Member Patricia Walsh also opposed the article, even though her name appeared in the warrant as a proponent of the citizens petition. "I must have been blind," Mrs. Walsh said when she signed the petition. "I thought it was going to the Bylaw Study Committee only." Mrs. Walsh recommended the article's withdrawal and charged its insertion as politically motivated.

Committeeman Frank England also spoke against the article, maintaining that with six members, there is more citizens participation and that votes require a two-thirds majority.

He added that he checked with long-time Supt. Ripley who also recommended leaving the number of members at six.

In another article dealing with the change in structure of a town board, voters established a three-member Board of Sewer Commissioners, creating a separate body from the present Board of Water and Sewer Commissioners.

Proponent Manuel Salvador felt separate commissions would b e able to operate more efficiently as the combined board had much to do. Commissioner William Montgouri said it would increase costs and the number of public offices to fill.

3-A Water Main Article Rejected By Voters

A town meeting article requesting $65,000 to be advanced to the Water Department for a water main on Chief Justice Cushing Highway met with its demise Monday night on a 305 to 138 vote. The article needed a two-thirds majority vote to pass.

Both the Advisory Committee and the Capital Budget Committee noted the Water Department's deficit of $125,000 so far this year; they were wary of incurring additional debts to the department. Richard Avery, Chairman of the Capital Budget Committee, said that the installation site was remote from other use areas and suggested deep wells as a solution.

John Elliott, a proponent of the article, said that potential user Cohasset Winter Gardens did have an old well which produced only unusable brackish water. The Winter Garden uses 30,000 gallons of water a day, Elliott said, which has to be brought there via a garden hose running over King Street. He also noted the possibility of a fire hazard.

"Winter Gardens is one of the largest taxpayers and local employers Cohasset has," Elliott said. "The Route 3A area is the only area that can be expanded and it needs water there to attract business."

Selectman Arthur Clark

Monday Town Meeting

urged a yes vote. "The Water Department is in trouble, it can't meet its commitments. They have to be able to sell lots of water." Clark compared the Water Department to a family with a dependent child, and suggested that the way to get the department back on its feet was to give it an opportunity to make more money, just as the family should train the child to support himself.

Water Commissioner William Montouri said that the Water Department has a distribution study underway which will be done on a priority basis and noted that the area in question heads the list. For this reason, however, chairman of the Planning Board Glenn Pratt, spoke against the article because he felt it was being considered in a piecemeal fashion and should wait until results of the distribution study.

An Important Vote

John Kennedy won the Presidency in 1960 after carrying the State of Illinois by one vote per precinct.

One vote elected Rutherford B. Hayes to the White House, and the man in the Electoral College who cast that vote was an Indiana congressman elected by one vote.

One vote elected Adolf Hitler to the leadership of the Nazi Party in 1923.

One vote kept Aaron Burr out of the White House and that one vote elected Thomas Jefferson President in 1800.

One vote saved President Andrew Johnson from impeachment in 1868.

Texas became part of the Union in 1845. By one vote.

One vote does count and yours will count this Saturday in Cohasset's annual election. There are spirited contests for selectmen and the school committee as well as other offices that deserve your attention. The winners Saturday will have an effect on your lives.

There is still time to learn about the people who want to take the reins of government. Find some time to know them and what they stand for, then take your pick Saturday. Your vote will count.

History proves it.

Moral Of The Log Story

By Luara Pompeo

Once upon a time there lived a tiny, tiny, village. Now, in that tiny, tiny village there lived three Canuchillis. The first one's name was Bon, the second one's name was Saa and the third one's name was Croll.

One early summer day Bon, Saa and Croll wanted to go swimming down in the woods. So they all took a walk in the woods until they got to the pond. Bon and Croll both jumped right into the pond, but Saa wandered off into the dark part of the woods.

At first he saw a bee hive, but he decided he shouldn't bother the bees like last time when he got covered with bee stings. The next thing Saa saw was a log. He decided to go inside it. After all, he thought, bees don't live inside logs and he couldn't think of anything else that did. So he want inside the log.

When he got inside, he saw many things he had never seen before. He saw muffins inside a big glass case, he saw plates of breakfast being served and eaten, and he even met the two cooks, Carmine and Peter. He soon ordered some food, sat down and met the people sitting with him.

After he had finished eating, he went back to the pond and told Bon and Croll about his adventure to the Log and he told them how good it was. Ever since then the three Caunchillis have worked at the Log . . . and have given the Log good business ever since the day Saa wandered off into the dark part of the woods.

The moral of this true story is, the Log and Line would never have gotten such good business without Carmine, Peter and the three Canuchillis.

time, which was $34,000 last year and is already $39,000 this year, was due in part to the delays in Civil Service appointments to fill vacant positions.

Selectman Arthur Clark corroborated Ainslie's remarks. "We've had two dismissals in two years," he said, "due to assaults with guns, drunkenness, and so forth."

"To wait eight or nine months for an appointment costs time and a half, and that's money out of your pockets. The Selectmen are outraged. Untie our hands from this antiquated system we've had to operate under," he urged.

Attorney William Kendrick spoke on behalf of the Police Department which strongly opposed the article. Kendrick questioned what he referred to as the singling out of the Police Department, noting that firefighters are under Civil Service, as well.

Civil Service gives police a sense of security, he said, and removes them from the influences of political patronage. "Civil Service has stood them well. They have tenure, security and no fear of retribution in the community."

Sgt. John Rhodes of the department reiterated Kendricks remarks and noted the difficulty police wou ld find with the Selectmen's recommended appellate procedure to the Personnel Board. "It is our job to protect your rights, don't take away ours. This is our protection, our rights of appeal," Rhodes said.

Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink said that although he realized Civil Service procedure can be awkward, he didn't feel he could vote intelligently on the article given the tules and regulations the Selectmen had made available on short notice.

The Advisory Board didn't recommend favorable action on the article.

The Selectmen's proposed rules and regulations for the Police Department included the following:

Selectmen will remain the appointing authority; they may engage the services of a professional consulting firm to provide competitive qualifying examinations for determining suitable physical and psychological requirements.

Tests results shall be returned to Selectmen; names shall be listed with the scores in decreasing order with top scorer first; Selectmen will appoint any one of the three most highly rated candidates.

In the event of disciplinary action, such proceeding will be conducted in open sesion; the employees will have the right of appeal to the Personnel Committee where a majority decision after a public hearing shall be final.

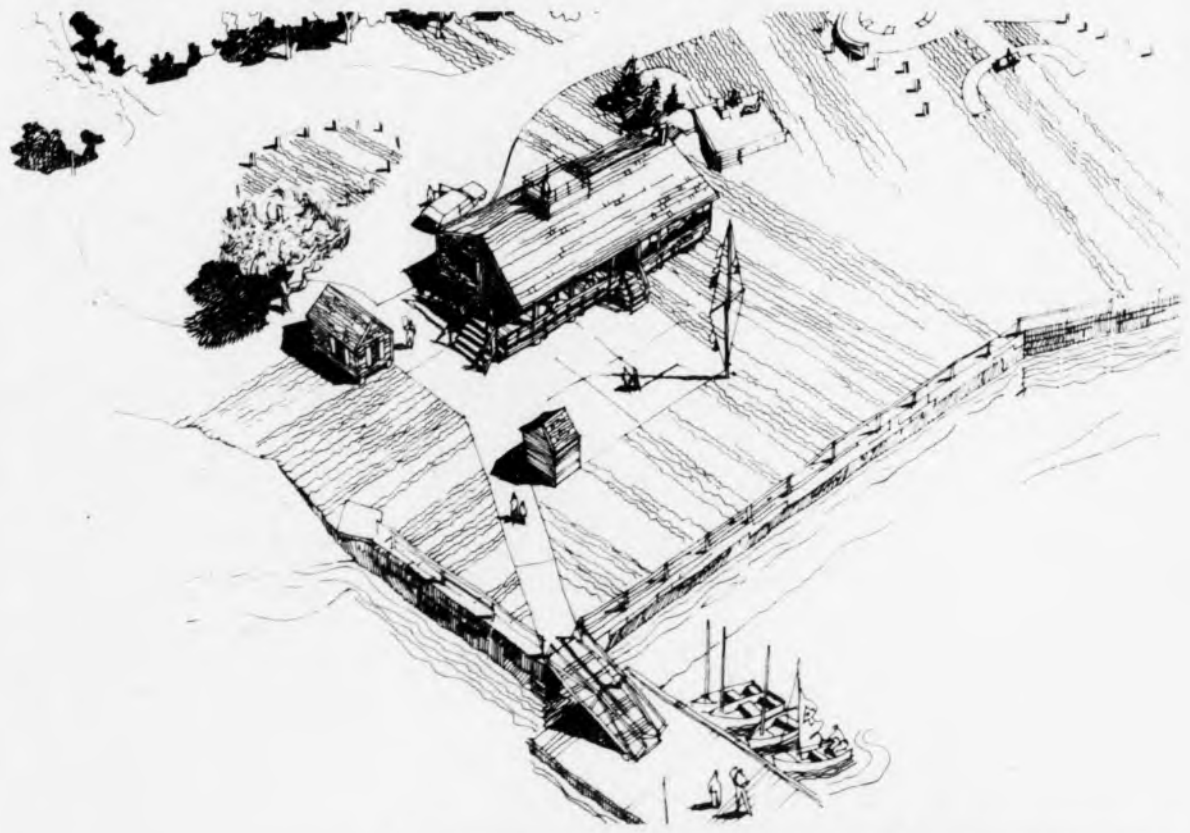
Sailing Club Trustees Give New Building Green Light

The Board of Trustees of the Cohasset Sailing Club recently voted to proceed with plans for a new Sailing Club building.

The proposed building, a generous gift from an anonymous donor, is designed to serve the club's educational mission, which by its charter as a non-profit organization, is to offer sailing instructions to any Cohasset resident, including summer residents.

The plan provides for classroom areas for instruction in sailing-racing theory, boat and waterfront safety, and care of sailing gear. In the winter the same areas will be used for boat storage and overhaul by volunteer members.

The site plan provides for clustering around the old original Historic Kerosene House, formerly used by lighthouse keepers of Minot's Ledge Light to store oil for the lamps in both lighthouses, the steel-legged one which tumbled into the sea during the winter storm in 1851 with the loss of two keepers and the new (1860) granite lighthouse.



The beautiful panoramic view of the harbor with the lighthouse on the horizon is in no way obstructed by the proposed cluster plan. In fact, because the buildings stand back from the seawall the scope of the view will be greater than ever.

Under Article 41 of this year's warrant, the club is seeking permission to remove its existing building and construct a larger building on town-owned property at Government Island.

The Sailing Club first opened in 1960 and since then has had over 3000 young people enrolled in junior training. The club also offers basic and advanced instruction for senior members from late teens to Golden Agers. Club boats are available to members each day after 4:30 p.m. and on weekends when they are not in use for training programs. Membership is open to any Cohasset resident.

Applications will be in the mail to last year's members by April 20th. Persons interested in applying may receive application forms by writing to the Cohasset Sailing Club, Box 111, Cohasset, 02025. Special membership fees of $5 per person are offered to those 60 years of age or older and scholarships are available to anyone needing assistance with membership fees.

Officers of the Sailing Club this year are: E.T. Atkinson, commodore; R.C. Portor, vice-commodore; P.H. Greenman, treasurer; D.C. Sweeney, clerk; P.A. Carlson, boats; C.W. Waaser, dock space; D.M. Baccari, floats; P.A. Chapman, membership; R.A. Dabrowski, publicity; D.M. Davenport, racing; and R.P. Harris, Stanton series.

"The fact is, both the state and EPA have established dates for Cohasset to do something. The threat looms."

Hobbs added that it would behoove Cohasset to take the recommended approach to insure aid in funding a new project's cost.

In 1978, Pratt said, three effluent characteristics failed to meet requirements: seven out of 11 BOD's passed and four failed; seven out of 11 suspended solids passed, four failed; all 12 of 12 settleable solids failed.

Hobbs noted that studies have been done in Cohasset which find the land unsuitable for private systems. This factor coupled with the present overloaded sewage treatment system, he felt, outline the necessity to upgrade the existing plant or construct the recommended new treatment facility of the Metcalf and Eddy study.

"The water treatment plant shouldn't have to clean contaminated water. It shouldn't be there," Pratt said.

"Even though our drinking water has zero bacteria — it has to — there is always the chance that there might be some." Pratt added that if a child were to drink from a brook or stream in town, he might very well become ill.

Tests in June 1978 were conducted in 23 areas around town, seven or eight of which drain into the water supply. All but one, Pratt said, contained a total and fecal coliform count that were too numerous to count.

A new sewer treatment plant would cover six of the eight tested sites that lie in the watershed area and that are contaminating water supplies, Pratt said.

In March the same test was done, this time the samples were sent to DEQE's Lawrence Experiment Station, where a "fecal only" count was done. All eight samples draining into water sources contained 5 or more parts per 100 milliliters — in other words they were contaminated.

Conflict

Board members were expressly classified as "special municipal employees" by the Board of Selectmen in 1962. It was therefore ruled that Bradley was not in violation of the law.

Pearson also alleged that Pratt had been purchasing and developing tracts of land in Cohasset as a business. No evidence was found that Pratt as a "special municipal employee" or "municipal employee" violated the conflict of interest law by participating in any particular matter in which he, his family or business associate had a financial interest.

$11,000 Voted For Town Hall Study

Town Meeting voters appropriated $11,000 for the continued preparation of plans for the renovation of the Town Hall last Saturday after a two hour debate. A motion to indefinitely postpone the article was defeated.

Daniel Cotton, chairman of the committee to study space needs for town offices, introduced the article. He explained that the request for an appropriation for more plans had been reduced to $11,000 from $30,000 as "a prudent way to go and will provide an intermediate stop for approval."

Saturday T.M.

The plans submitted so far, Cotton said, give a general idea of the plans, drawn up by Sweeney and Donham Architects, to renovate the present Town Hall. "They are not cast in stone," Cotton said of the plans which have met with controversy over the past several months.

"To establish a building that is safe and convenient to the town's people, these are our goals. There is no need for an additional town building," Cotton said. He noted the sturdiness of the Town Hall and how the town would be hard pressed to afford as well build a structure today. "It's not a fire trap, it's not worn out," he added.

Architect Brett Donham explained that the plans for the building allows for 20 years growth, according to MAPC population projections, by reducing the auditorium by 40 per cent, and enlarging and rearranging the offices both upstairs and downstairs.

The Advisory Committee and the Capital Budget Committee both commended the study committee for its thorough approach. The Advisory Committee unanimously supported the article and felt that the process should go on but emphasized also the need for more detailed plans. The Capital Budget Committee was less enthusiastic about the renovation, indicating its split decision that action should be delayed.

Selectman Arthur Clark, who voiced the strongest objections to the plan both personally and for his board, said he was in an embarrassing position as he had assisted in appointing members to the study committee.

"We're still stuck with the old high ceilings, the old heating system, and old windows that open outward," Clark said. His other objections included the lack of housing for town employees while renovation was underway, the placement of offices downstairs, and the inadequately sized and fireproofed vaults.

"They (the study committee) got the Town Hall partially preserved to get around the Building Code," Clark further charged, reminding the crowd of the local building inspector's final say in the enforcing of the Code.

Cotton and Donham responded to Clark's comments. Cotton said the committee decided early to insulate the building, and that without proper insulation the heating system would be impossible to be balanced. "The windows are in need of repair — no question," he agreed.

"We're not trying to dodge the Building Code," Donham continued. He said that a recent vault inspection carried out by the Secretary of State's office indicated that if all four vaults were brought up to state standard, the Town Hall will have more than adequate space.

Clark spoke against the vault situation again, and asked Building Inspector Litchfield to consider the committee's plan to have an elevator going to the basement for access to records, and whether there was enough room to grant an occupancy permity (for head room) there. Litchfield answered, "No, there is not."

Town Accountant, William Signorrelli, said that if the renovation plan for $337,000 were financed over 10 years at 5.5 per cent, the total cost would be $461,650.

The article passed with a majority by voice vote.

3A BUILDING

A related article — Article 16, to purchase the Route 3A professional building for $325,000 for use as town office space — was defeated with 294 voters opposed, 27 in favor.

Alfred Odermatt, introduced the citizens petition article, noting the building's benefits: possible rental income to help defray maintenance cost, location next to two shopping centers, and immediate occupancy (not considering renovations).

Odermatt also noted that the present Town Hall would remain as it is and could serve the town's organizations. He also suggested that the upper floor be closed to reduce maintenance costs.

The Advisory Board spoke against the article, finding the location, general renovation and maintenance costs unsuitable. The Capital Budget Committee found the proposal unnecessary and of doubtful benefit.

Most Small T.M. Money Articles Win Approval Without Debate

Town Meeting voters passed all but three articles considered last Saturday. Of those passed all but two passed unanimously, and several were indefinitely postponed.

Article 5, to appropriate money for pay increases according to the Personnel Classification By-Law Schedule, passed easily with no discussion. Article 6, which requested the raise in salary of the Treasurer-Collector as a town elected official to $18,529 also passed unanimously and swiftly.

Also unanimously passed: Article 7, the appropriation of $65,000 for a Reserve Fund from Overlay Surplus and Surplus Revenue; Article 8, the town will assume liability for all damages that may be incurred by work by the Department of Public Works for improvements, development, maintenance and protection of tidal and nontidal rivers and streams, harbors, tidewaters and foreshores along a public beach.

Article 9, to appropriate to transfer from available funds $35,862 for the use of the South Shore Regional School District; Article 10, routinely authorized the Town Treasurer to borrow money and to issue notes payable within one year.

Saturday T.M.

Article 11, appropriated $1800 to be used for the control of insect, vegetable and animal life in Straits Pond; Article 12, appropriated $870 for maintaining mosquito control and improvements of low lands and swamps; Article 13, joined in the South Shore Mosquito Control Project in conjunction with the City of Quincy and appropriated $10,192 for Cohasset's share.

Article 14, $50,000 to be added to the Stabilization Fund was indefinitely postponed.

Article 15 to appropriate $11,000 for more plans for the renovation of the Town Hall passed on a voice vote; Article 16 to raise $325,000 to purchase the professional building for use as town office space was defeated, 294 opposed, 27 in favor.

Article 17, for $10,000 to complete the renovation of the practice field at Milliken Field unanimously passed; Article 18, for an appropriation to construct a clay bottom on the bottom of the Duck Pond was indefinitely postponed.

Article 18, the first of four harbor articles, asking for $36,000 for the removal of rocks in Cohasset Harbor to be used in conjunction with $15,000 held by the Army Corps of Engineers, was defeated; Article 20, for $5,000 for plans for long range planning of Cohasset Harbor to be used in conjunction with Coastal Zone Management funds, unanimously passed; Article 21, for $15,000 to rehabilitate several seawalls by sandblasting and guniting, unanimously passed; Article 22, to establish a harbor and waterways maintenance fund for $20,000 was indefinitely postponed.

Article 23, which was considered after Article 24, to transfer a parcel of land held for school purposes for the construction of a sub fire station in Cohasset, was indefinitely postponed; Article 24, to construct and equip a new sub fire station on Route 3A for $625,000 was voted down 157 to 69.

T.M. Opener Attracted 300 Voters

The first session of Cohasset's Annual Town Meeting began an hour late, when the 200 voters needed for a quorum finally made their way to the High School gymnasium. By the end of the day, after 24 of 78 articles had been considered, hand counts indicated the attendance of almost 300 residents.

Moderator David Place announced the decision of town officials to recess the Town Meeting after town elections in order to keep the meeting open to reconsider money articles. Because the tax cap issue has not been decided by the legislature yet, Place said, it behooved voters to vote unanimously, or at least with a two-thirds majority on money articles, to overrule possible state dictates.

Furthermore, Selectman Arthur Clark noted, Police and Fire Departments collective bargaining agreements, up for consideration in Articles 42 and 43, haven't been decided yet. The agreements require acceptance by the town within 30 days of their signing; a recess of the annual Town Meeting would allow future consideration of these articles, as well, rather than completing this business at a Special Town Meeting which would require a new warrant.

At the close of Saturday's session, Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray, gave voters notice that a motion for reconsideration of Articles 15 and 17 at the meeting's recess. These articles didn't pass with a two-thirds vote, and may, therefore, be subject to cap limits.

Big Crowd At Pinewood Derby

It wasn't the Indianapolis 500 but excitement and tensions were just as strong when the annual Four Harbors' Pinewood Derby race-off took place last Friday evening at the Jenkins School in Scituate.

Sixty-four cubs registered from nine packs in the district which comprises the towns of Scituate, Hingham, Cohasset, and Hull. Packs represented were: from Scituate, Packs 69, 122, 128, and 134; from Cohasset, Pack 38; from Hingham, Packs 4 and 27; and from Hull, Packs 21 and 412.

Bruce Marshman of Scituate was chairman of the event and he and his assistants ran a double elimination race to determine the three top winners in the eight, nine and 10 year old age categories.

This is the fifth year Marshman and his assistants, Bruce Bent, Dick Barke, Carla and Mike Harden, have run the annual event.

The top three winners in each age group will go on to compete against the top three winners from the other eight districts in the Old Colony Boy Scout Council, on Sunday, April 29, at 4:30 p.m. at Camp Child in Plymouth. A scout hike-a-thon will also be held that day and winners must be present themselves to race their hand made wooden cars.

Winners were:

Eight year olds — First place: Chris Richard of Pack 38 of Cohasset; Second place: Sean Kerans of Pack 134 of Scituate; Third place: David Terry of Pack 134 of Scituate.

Nine year olds — First place: Skip Mills of Pack 69 of Scituate; Second place: William Harden of Pack 128 of Scituate; Third place: Jay McHugh of Pack 134 of Scituate.

Ten year-olds — First place: Larry Desmond of Pack 38 of Cohasset; Second place: Doug Bent of Pack 128 of Scituate; and Third place: Tim Carr of Pack 27 of Hingham.

Larry Desmond's finely hewed car topped the other two first place cars to grab the over-all best car trophy.

The winners received ribbons and medals and all cubs

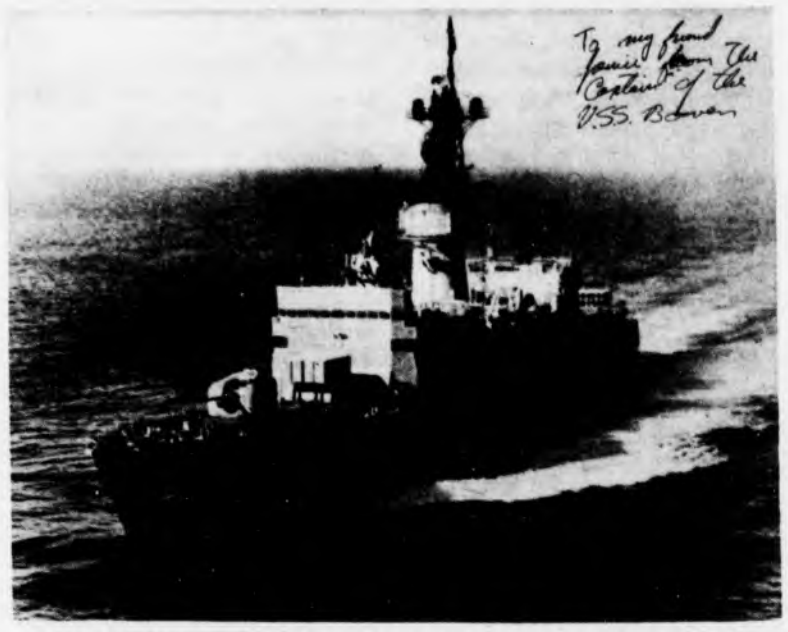
Local Naval Hero's Rescue Action Saved Pal

By Joanne Young

If you don't think truth is stranger than fiction, consider the experience of Navy Lieutenant,j.g. Ted Macklin. Not only did the son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Macklon of Atlantic Avenue perform a heroic sea rescue, but the man he saved turned out to be a former shipmate.

Lt. Macklin was aboard the USS Bowen out of Charleston, S.C. when a single engine plane flying low drifted over the Bowen. As it neared the fast frigate, the pilot taking pictures of the ship unbelievably climbed onto the wing from the cockpit. The plane banked to the right, stalled about 250 yards from the ship and with its pilot fell into the sea.

Lt. Macklin, a Cohasset High School and Holy Cross graduate who received underwater demolition training with the Navy, was officer of the day and on the bridge when he saw the plane plunge and pilot plunge into the sea.



With the captain otherwise, occupied, he quickly made the decision to go to the rescue of the pilot. Scrambling into a wet suit, flippers and life vest, he dived off the ship and swam to the pilot.

The pilot turned out to be Ted's former shipmate, Petty Officer First Class Lawrence Turner, who survived with a forehead cut and compressed vertebra.

Lt. Macklin held Turner above water until they were pulled from the water by a whale boat lowered by the Bowen, then nine miles off Folly Point.

"The plane appeared to stall," said Macklin when interviewed, but he was unable to determine the cause of the crash, which was investigated by the Federal Aviation Authority. Turner was in the water "only a short time" before being rescued by Macklin, and the plane sunk to the bottom of the sea three minutes after it crashed.

The accident occured at 1:10 p.m. and the Bowen returned to the Navy Base with Turner two hours later. He spent the next 12 days in the Regional Naval Medical Center. Macklin said "In the water, Turner was mumbling about back pain."

U.S.S. BOWEN which figured in heroic rescue by Cohasset's Lt. Ted Mackin.

Because of the quick thinking and heroic action of Ted Macklin, his shipmate lived to tell this incredible tale.

Squall Causes Shutdowns, Damage

A sudden squall bringing violent winds and snow showers hit Cohasset Friday around 11 a.m. Portions of King Street, Beechwood Street, Scholfield Road, and Route 3A were temporarily closed down after sustaining tree and property damage.

Mrs. James O'Brien of Todd Road, happened to be looking out her kitchen window at the huge weeping willow tree which had graced her yard and home since her family moved in 17 years ago. Mrs. O'Brien was aware of the wind picking up and of the sky darkening.

"I sensed a certain force. I felt like I was in the Wizard of Oz," she said. "The sky turned black. The trees bent down to the ground. The willows' branches were just picked right up by the wind. It toppled over in a wink. I felt like a friend had died."

Priscilla O'Donnell of Schofield Road lost many, many old friends in the form of trees, as well, last Friday. Her property, in fact, was littered with felled trees, some of which had to be removed from the garage roof by the Fire Department.

Mrs. O'Donnell wasn't home at the time of the storm and said it was a shock to see the condition of her yard when she pulled in.

"I'm on a rise here and those were real old and tall pines," she said. "They just met the wind at the right place. It seemed like something insane."

Mrs. Leo Fiori, also of Scholfield Road and a next door neighbor to Mrs. O'Donnell, said that she had never been so scared in her life.

"The sky was gray and I heard a clap of thunder. I could hear snapping of trees going in every direction. All the traffic on Route 3A was held up."

Supt. of Trees and Parks Peter Laugelle, attested to the severity of the squall which traveled in a 1/4 mile path in a southeasterly direction through Cohasset. The highest winds were estimated at 80 to 90 mph, and were strongest for about 5 minutes.

Laugelle, Police Chief Feola, and Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield and a crew from the Tree and Park Department worked swiftly removing trees blocking main roads and handling traffic. The debris was cut up and cleared away by 7 p.m., Laugelle said.

SQUALL DAMAGE — Uprooted tree, victim of high winds last week, is displayed by Mrs. James O'Brine of Todd Road.

Five Cohasset Churches To Participate In Good Friday Walk

Members of five Cohasset churches, the Unitarian, St. Anthony's, St. Stephen's, Second Congregational and the Beechwood Congregational, will take part in the "I Walk on Good Friday" marathon.

Each walker will complete a pledged 20-mile route from Abington to Hanover and back. Kay Doherty is the founder and organizer of the group, which began in 1971 with 31 people and last year included 1000 people from the South Shore area.

In 1971 a clinic sponsored by Tufts University Medical School began in Mound Bayou, Miss., and was originally funded by OEO and the Ford Foundation. When these funds were cut off in 1972, Kay Doherty started the walk on Good Friday, using the $3100 raised that year to form a farm co-op. Last year $46,200 was realized, and currently supports the original co-op, the Southwestern Alabama Farm co-op (an outgrowth of Martin Luther King's Montgomery march), the Black Belt Community Health Center and Freedon Village in Greenvile, Miss., which has built on 80 acres low-income housing units and farm tracts. Each of these cooperatives was added and supported by the Good Friday group as federal funding ended.

The Black Belt Health Center is currently without a doctor, and is seeking a doctor or a nurse practitioner to care for its families. It rents acreage to tenant farmers to minimally survive. The need for all these communities is great, and as the Good Friday walks grow in number, so will the funds needed to support these cooperatives.

Richard Barrow of King Street announced his candidacy for the three year position on the Water Commission last week.

He is a lifelong resident of Cohasset, served as police officer for 29 years, is a World War II Navy veteran.

Educated in Cohasset schools and the State Police Academy he attended Northeastern University where he took law enforcement courses.

He was a constable for two years and an elected member of the Recreation Commission for five years, four as chairman. He is a member of the Harbor Study Committee, Government Island Study Committee, and a member of Cohasset Swim Center.

Voters Reject New Cohasset Fire Station

Article 24, which requested an appropriation of $625,000 for construction and equipping a new sub fire station on Rte. 3A, was voted down Saturday, 157 to 67.

John Reardon of the Fire Station Study Committee said the committee was embarrassed to be bringing such a high cost before the Town Meeting but explained that construction costs had gone up drastically in the past year.

Reardon said that alternative sites were looked for but couldn't be found. The Route 3A site, which is located on 1.5 acres of land on the northeasterly side of the highway, would be the consolidation of the outdated North Cohasset and Beechwood stations, and would provide better coverage for all the people, in each part of town, he said.

Saturday T.M.

As it is, he continued, the town is being poorly served and advised against "putting all the eggs in one basket" with additional expansion of the Elm Street Fire Station. The 3A site would also allow the moving of the ambulance to a more central location. The fire chiefs of cooperating towns Hull, Hingham and Scituate, Reardon noted, endorsed the Study Committee.

"There are no suitable alternatives available at a reasonable price. It is a problem that won't go away, don't play ostrich," he said.

The Advisory Board took a negative stance on the article. "The cost increased 60 per cent over what it would cost last year," Chairman Patrick Hurley said. "Get this figure down to what it was last year."

The Capital Budget Committee Chairman Richard Avery stressed "personal responsibility" as a recourse to "runaway inflation." "If fire-fighting is going to be an expense, rewire, take care of your home," he urged. The Committee suggested a lower cost option.

Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink said that if the article were voted down, the present fire station would suffer from an extreme lack of space. "It isn't physically possible to service the town with the two pumping engines we have at the Elm Street station. We can't house another engine there. It's hard to get up here and beg with you," Piepenbrink said.

Honorary town engineer Gilbert Tower, a fire chief of years past, felt the new station wasn't necessary. "Cohasset is a small town, the present station can meet the town's need within 10 minutes of a fire alarm — that is time enough." Tower also suggested spending the money proposed for a new station on smoke detectors.

Architect for the station James Fitzgerald described the proposed station as very simple. "People are not accustomed to the cost of construction," he said, "and it's going to go up."

Town Accountant William Signorelli said the total cost of the station would be $1,035,156 if financed for 20 years at 6 1/4 per cent. The impact on the tax rate would be 70 cents the first year and 33 cents the last year.

Brown, Gjesteby, Kornet Also Win

Laugelle Wins Selectman Seat

THE WINNER [OBVIOUSLY] from the tip of the hat, broad smile and the glad hand extended marks the victory of Rocky Laugelle in the Town Election race for Selectman.

Rocco Laugelle topped a field of five candidates for a three-year term on the Board of Selectmen in Saturday's election.

Approximately 56 per cent, 2396 voters, turned out for the election despite the day's cold and rainy weather.

Laugelle, who resigned his seat on the Board of Water Commissioners, received 796 votes. As selectman, he will succeed Mary Jeannette Murray who chose not to seek reelection so she could devote more time to her duties as state representative.

Finishing 92 votes behind Laugelle was Glenn Pratt with 704 votes. Doris Golden was third with 585 votes, Lester Hiltz had 146 and George Adams had 126.

The contest for two three-year terms on the School Committee went to incumbent Irene Brown with 1312 votes and Martha Gjesteby with 1062.

Other School Committee candidates were Gerard Reed Jr., who received 615 votes, and John Kinchla with 613.

Diana David Kornet received 1551 votes to win a one-year unexpired term on the school board.

In the Board of Health race, Marilyn Sweeney was elected to a three-year term with 1144 votes over Stephen Wigmore with 979. Lot Bates won with 1259 to serve on the Board of Water Commissioners for three years, while Richard Barrow received 961 votes. Lloyd Prescott was elected to the Housing Authority for five years with 1119 votes against Frederick Huntwork with 955 votes.

Leavit Goodwin was elected to a five-year term on the Planning Board with 1561 votes. John Bradley will fill a two-year unexpired term on that board after garnering 1483 votes.

Reelected as Trustees of the Cohasset Free Public Library were Nancy Gilmore with 1554 votes, Elizabeth Eaton with 1437 and David Chittim with 1422.

Alna Ekberg was elected to a five-year term on the Recreation Commission, and Michael Patrolia won a second three-yerm on the Board of Assessors.

No Quorum... T.M. Windup Now June 26

Town Meeting adjourned Wednesday night when a quorum of 200 voters was not attained. Moderator David Place moved that the meeting reconvene June 26, to complete unfinished business.

Place said that collective bargaining agreements for the police and fire departments up for consideration in Article 42 and 43, and which had been deferred until all other articles were acted upon, should be completed by June. State legislation on the tax cap issue, Place added, which might place constraints on money articles should also be decided by then.

Throughout the meeting Place had emphasized the need for a unanimous or two-thirds vote on money articles, to overrule possible state dictates. Several voters objected to this procedure, feeling that they were being asked to reconsider some articles and not others.

Place explained that unanimous votes on articles will leave fewer articles open for reconsideration at a later date. He announced the necessity of taking hand counts on articles that weren't unanimous, to ascertain a vote

To Perform In New England Tournament

CHS Drama Club Heads North

The Cohasset High School Drama Workshop will perform 'Story Theatre in the New England High School Drama Festival at Castleton State College in Vermont this weekend.

'Story Theatre,' an adaptation of Grimm Brothers Fairy Tales and Aesop's Fables that incorporates mime, music and comedy, has been a consistent winner for the Workshop.

They have previously won competitions at the Emerson College Theater Arts Festival, the state semifinals and most recently were chosen along with Ipswich as the Massachusetts finalists at the state drama festival.

Two schools from the six New England states will perform at the festival in Vermont. The festival is not a competition, although an all New England cast will be chosen.

During the three day drama showcase, workshops will also be held in make-up, stage movement, stage lighting, costuming, stage craft and publicity.

Director of the Drama Workshop, Ron Emmons, said he would like to see his eleven member cast become a part of the honorary cast, to top off a magnificent year. "Their level of performance has been consistent and professional," Emmons said. "I love working with these kids."

The 11-member cast and crew traveled to Ipswich this week for a double feature of the 'Story Theatre' along with Ipswich's winning comedy 'The Chinaman.' The proceeds were split as were those from the workshop's last week's performance with the Cohasset Jazz Ensemble to help defray travel expenses to Vermont.

Emmons had obtained permission from the School Committee for the trip several weeks ago.

The Gas Crunch Hits Home

By Judith Epstein

Turn on the news these days and one of the lead stories is bound to be about gasoline, its prices and shortages. Cohasset is nestled away from the city where gas conditions are worse, yet the town is not immune to the ravages of the oil economy although its affects may be felt more slowly.

While some owners and dealers disagree whether there is a real crude oil shortage or whether oil companies are sitting on the oil in their wells until Carter decontrols or raises prices, most acknowledge their companies have cut back on monthly allocations.

George Roukounakis; owner of Olympic Texaco located in the heart of the Village, feels that his station is one of the hardest hit so far. A sign in the station window greets customers, "Due to gas shortage we are forced to shorten hours."

Specifically, Roukounakis has been forced to close two hours a day and all day Sunday. He anticipated that he will be all out of every type of gas by the end of the month.

Texaco allotted him 85 per cent of the gas he received in April last year, he said, and has hiked the price up six cents across the board in the last two weeks. He projected that prices will reach the dollar mark by fall, but does not anticipate long lines, at least not for now.

In general Roukounakis was worried and discouraged. "I may make a few and to have on record a possible two-thirds vote. Place made a plea to the people not to vote against an article for a technical reason.

Articles considered last week included: Article 25 requested $6000 to alleviate a drainage problem on Pleasant Street and was passed by a vote of 333 to 22; Article 26 was unanimously approved to refurbish, replace, and gold-leaf the dials and hands of the Town Clock for $2000; Article 27 was also unanimously passed for $30,000 to resurface certain streets with bituminous concrete.

Article 28 failed to pass with a vote of 138 for and 305 against appropriating $65,000 to install a water main on Chief Justice Cushing Highway; Article 29 was unanimously passed to appropriate $836.12 from Water Department Surplus Revenue and transfer to the town's Surplus Revenue Account.

Article 30 required a two-thirds vote, which it didn't receive with a vote of 201 for and 217 against appropriating $31,800 for the purchase of a new truck and aerial bucket for the Wire Department; Article 31 passed wirth a vote of 243 to 167 to elect a separate Board of Sewer Commissioners beginning next year consisting of three members.

Article 32 was defeated by voters, who were asked to reduce the size of the School Committee from six to five members; Article 33 unanimously passed to appropriate $4903 to increase the salary of the Highway Surveyor to $16,000 for a full-time position; Article 34 also unanimously passed to appropriate $5,000 to engage the service of an engineering consulting firm to make a comprehensive study of Strait's Pond in conjunction with the Town of Hull.

Article 35 met its demise when voters decided they didn't care for the sewer treatment plant site, which is bounded by land of the south Shore Playhouse and Smith Place. The requested appropriation in Article 36 for $265,000 for additional working plans and specifications for a sewer system couldn't be voted on, after the site location was voted down.

Unanimously passed were Article 37 to amend the municipal bylaws; Article 38, amending the Personnel Classification and Compensation Plan Bylaw; Article 39 to amend the Historic District Bylaw; and Article 40 to raise money to defray the cost of printing the bylaws in loose-leaf form.

Article 41 met with unanimous approval, permitting the Cohasset Sailing Club to remove its existing building and construct a larger building on property owned by the town at Government Island. Articles 42 and 43 to consider collective bargaining agreements with the police and fire departments were deferred until the meeting reconvenes in June.

Article 44 was defeated in a secret ballot with a vote of 138 to 123 to exempt future police officers from Civil Service Laws and Rules.

Articles 75, 76, 77 and 78 were considered before he zoning bylaw articles, Articles 45 through 74, which will be considered at the June 26 meeting. Unanimously passed were Article 75 for $3600 to train three firefighters as Emergency Medical Technicians; Article 76 for $6600 from sale of cemetery lots fund to resurface 2000 feet of roadway at Woodside Cemetery; Article 77 for a $10,000 Alice and Walter Shuebruk Scholarship Fund for graduating high school students; Article 78 for $50,000 to be added to the Special Retirement Fund for offsetting the anticipated costs for funding the contributory retirement system.

AT THE MIKE is David Place in his role as Town Meeting Moderator during a tense moment.

Chief Selection Committee To Meet

The Police Chief Selection Committee is sponsoring a public hearing Tuesday April 24 at the Town Hall.

The meeting will provide an opportunity for Cohasset citizens to inform the committee of their hopes and expectations for the future of the Cohasset Police Department. A new police chief will be appointed by the Selectmen after current Chief Randolph Feola's retirement in July 1980. The selection will be made from a field of three candidates chosen by the Selection Committee.

Every Cohasset citizen is invited to assist in this important process. Members of the police force and other town departments, elected and appointed officials and private citizens are invited to speak briefly or submit written suggestions.

Among the questions the hearing will address are these: What does Cohasset expect of its Police Chief? Do we want primarily an administrator, a person highly trained in law enforcement, a person trained "on the job" here or elsewhere? Should our next chief be chosen from among members of our own department, or from outside the present force? What qualifications, skills and training do we regard as essential to this important rôle? What qualities of personality, character and public relations skills are important?

In the wake of a Town Meeting controversy over Civil Service in the Police Department, citizens may also want to address the issue of the lines of authority and accountability which will affect the work of our next chief of police.

More information on the hearing is available from the chairman of the Police Chief Selection Committee, Rev. John Benbow, at 393-0345 or 383-6697.

Vandals Damage Four Cohasset School Buses

Several local juveniles were apprehended Sunday evening in connection with the tire slashing of four Cohasset school buses parked near the high school.

The youths were brought to headquarters and were released after questioning. None were in possession of a knife, police reported, which was the type of instrument thought to have been used in the vandalism.

Three buses had tire stems or sidewalls slashed on both front tires. One bus had one left front tire slashed.

In another incident reported later that night, police were summoned to a residence on Reservoir Road to investigate a complaint of youths entering the home bearing clubs.

An alleged fight broke out at the residence and three youths were later taken to South Shore Hospital with head injuries.

A Cohasset youth, Mark Goff, of Tupelo Road, was arrested for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. A Hull juvenile was placed under protective custody.

Further investigation of both incidents is pending.

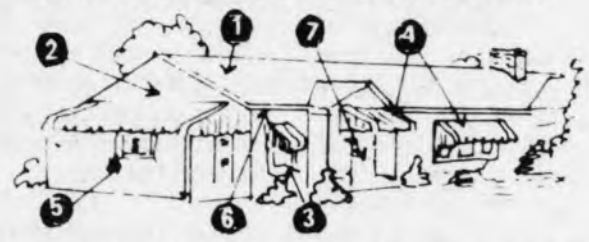
Weymouth Youth Arrested In Attempted Burglary

A Weymouth juvenile was arrested at gunpoint by Patrolman Clifford Jones early Sturday morning in connection with a burglary at Keo's Cushing Auto Sales.

The next day a car reported stolen from Weymouth was found parked on the Keo property.

The youth was charged with breaking and entering in the night time, using a motor vehicle without authority, and being in possession of burglari ous tools.

He was arraigned that morning at Quincy Juvenile Court; the case was continued to a later date.



Mr. Shane will buy gold, silver, old furniture, old china & rugs.

Town Meeting Sidelights

Town meeting was memorable this year not only for the major articles on a mammoth warrant but also for the diligent work and participation of people attending. It was people, after all, who comprised the meeting.

Advisory Board Chairman Patrick Hurley and Member George Rabstejnek are stepping down this year when their terms expire. A farewell to these men, as well as accolades to the whole board for religiously and indefatigably scrutinizing budgets and money articles, was given by residents in a standing ovation.

A "standing O" was also given to Selectman Mary Jeannette Murray, who is stepping down to devote more time to her duties as state representative. Mrs. Murray was a selectman nine years. She warned the assembly that she will returning to give Selectmen Henry Ainslie and Arthur Clark, town meeting notables in their own right, the business from the other side of the table.

Another notable at this year's meeting was Gilbert Tower. The 94-year-old honorary town engineer attended every session and spoke brilliantly on articles that concerned him. Tower's remarks consistently met with loud approval and applause.

Truly deserving his round of applause and appreciation was Town Accountant William Signorelli. As noted by Moderator David Place (worthy of bouquets of his own for conducting the well-run meeting), Signorelli stood ready as always with figures, sums and money projections on every money article.

The legal corps, Town Counsel Blake Thaxter and his assistant Richard Henderson, received a hand for rendering rulings and advice on legal ramifications of the more bewildering articles. Thaxter's voice could be heard throughout the entire meeting, however, as he called out "seconded" whenever a motion needed endorsement.

Gasoline Crunch

more cents on the gallon now, but because I am getting less and cutting hours, and I'm cut in the garage, too, the profit works out to be less," he said. "I don't think it will ever be like it was before."

Around the corner at Village Service Station, manager William Bernhard, Jr., was more nonchalant about the gas situation. He, too, has witnessed the rising prices of gas, an average of 10 cents since January; and he only began business there in November. His only shortage worries (he ran out of gas twice in the last two month) arise, he said, more from tardy Amoco delivery schedules than from actual shortages. His hours haven't been curtailed, he said, noting that he often stays open far into the evening.

The only reason Bernhard keeps gas pumps at all, he said, is as a service to the majority of his customers who are looking for Amoco high-test which is a high level octane fuel. Gas is a nuisance and expensive for him to keep, he said, because it just sits in a hole in the ground and takes a month to earn any profit back.

But Bernhard was sensitive to the long-range potential of gas shortages, which he believed will exist. "People do a lot of foolish driving. They like the privacy of being able to go someplace alone in their cars. Driving to work on the Southeast Expressway may be the only time during the day a guy isn't hassled at work or by the wife and kids," he commented.

Down at the other end of the Village on South Main Street, Joe Marks' service station experienced the same six cent hike in the last two weeks as neighbor Olympic Texaco.

"If it stays like it is, I can take good care of my regular customers," Marks said. Once he starts to run low, he said he'd have no qualms about placing limits on the amount of gas sold, particularly unleaded.

Marks' allotment is 90 per cent of what is was this time last year, but he has managed to maintain a kind of status quo as far as profit, the amount of business he receives and the hours he puts in. "Barring a run," he said, which he wouldn't like to see, "my gas stays about the same."

Out on Route 3A where gas stations and traffic alike abound, Friday and Saturday night lines indicated that these stations were experiencing more of the real world than their Village cousins.

Village Petroleum, better known as the Getty station, was always a popular spot because of low prices and all-night servicing. Attendant Whitney Halloran said that owner John Swann, absent on vacation, doesn't answer to a monthly allotment schedule, and that as far as he knew has no problem getting gas.

"He runs on high sales and a low profit margin," Halloran attested. "He sells just gas: there is no service station." He was unable to comment further as he attended the mobs waiting on either side of the island.

The hours at Village Petroleum have been curtailed from the round the clock to a little-later-than-usual closing time at 10 p.m. This was due largely to an incident that occurred in the early hours of the morning a while back when an attendant was beaten and not because of gas shortages, according to a mechanic who rents the station's garage.

A mile or so down the road heading toward Scituate, independent owner Frannie Mitchell of Mitchell's Repair Shop wasn't too concerned over possible gas shortages. Yet he was concerned as was Marks about the overly busy weekend sales which threatened to deplete his supply still coming in at 100 per cent of last year's.

Mitchell has had a rash of new trade from people looking for Gulf stations, the Gulf station in Scituate Harbor went out of business.

Unlike Marks, Mitchell said he wouldn't put a limit on anybody. During the last crunch, he said, he filled everybody up and then closed down completely when he had to. The only time he might possibly consider limiting gas, he said, was if a customer's gas tank registered between three-quarters full and full.

Mitchell, again unlike Marks, likes to keep his prices low and competetive but indicated that his profit margin isn't much better than it was in 1949. "If prices go up, business will slow up," he predicted, contrary to those who think a higher decontrolled price will bring both gas and business flowing like wine. "As prices go up, people will curtail a lot of their driving and they'll be buying smaller cars requiring less service."

Leo Fiori, who leases his station from Exxon, is closing five hours early every day and all day Sunday. The self-service island has been completely closed down since the first of March.

"Exxon tells me on th first of the month when my deliveries will be made and how many gallons to schedule per day," Fiori said. However, he agrees with Mitchell in filling up his customers' tanks to brimming, though he has a 95 per cent allocation.

Last month, he said, he had to make an application with the Federal Energy Office to increase his allotment, but the process was so lengthy it was sufficient to dissuade him from requesting an increase again.

While gas allocations and hours differ from station to station, and while attitudes about limiting gas sales in view of impending shortages differ as well, just about all admit two things: they'd like more gas and they really don't know what's going to happen.

Ethics In Government

Letters

To the Editor:

I deliberately waited until after the elections to write this letter to eliminate any question of political motivation.

The questions I asked of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen in my letter of March 20, 1979, go far beyond the legal determinations provided to the town.

When we are elected or appointed to positions of trust in town government the questions of ethics in our performance are far more important than any legal points which may be raised. If we seek these positions with the thought of personal gain as our goal then we hardly represent the people we serve. If we put our own personal gain or feeling ahead of the best interest of the people, then we have failed ourselves. Do we so quickly forget what our forefathers wanted in their statement of equal representation?

These questions can only be answered by the people who serve us. Only they know whether the ethical and moral issues are being honestly addressed.

May those candidates who were electedthis past Saturday to represent us have the strength to withstand the pressures of their positions and serve with the moral and ethical standards we so sorely need in government. Only then can we succeed as a people in this world of ours.

Chairman Of Operation Sail

Meet Henry Dormitzer...Sailor

By Joanne Young

Henry Dormitzer of Cohasset, chairman of the Operation Sail 1980 Committee, speaks lovingly of the Class A ships which will arrive in Boston Harbor May 2, 1980.

He believes tall square-rigged ships can promote self-reliance, character building and cooperation in the young people who sail them as training vessels. Included in the Class A ships are barquentines, schooners, frigates, barques, brigantines and full-rigged ships whose lengths overall measure from 50 to 370 feet.

Presently, the countries which have accepted the invitation to join in Boston's 350th birthday celebration on May 30th are Chile, with the 370 foot barquentine Esmeralda, Denmark with the 253 foot barque Danmark, Spain, which is sending the 370 foot topsail schooner Juan Sebastian de Elcano, Germany the 295' barque Gorch Fock, Argentina the 345' frigate Libertad, Colombia the 243' barque Gloria, and Ecuador the 240' barque Guayas.

The United States is contributing the brig Unicorn; the Gazela Primeiro, the oldest ship in Op Sail, built in Portugal in 1883 and boasting her original pine planks and beams; and the Coast Guard sail-training bark Eagle.

We asked Henry Dormitzer which of the queenly ships he found the most beautiful and he said it would be difficult to choose between the five sister ships built in Hamburg, Germany, between 1933 and 1938: the Tovaristch (Russia), the Eagle (U.S.), the Sagres II (Portugal), the Mircea (Romania), and the Gorch Fock, which was built in 1958 and is 26 feet longer than her sister ships. The Germans have had more experience in building these Class A ships than any other country.

Henry Dormitzer strongly believes in these vessels as sail-training ships for their countries' young seamen. The Eagle is owned by the United States Coast Guard, and most of the magnificent ships to be seen in Op Sail 1980 are used for training under sail for the cadets.

Apprentices have been going to sea on sailing ships as long as ships have existed. Merchan school ships were first set up by Sweden in the mid-nineteenth century. In the late 19th century the United States Congress passed a bill to subsidize use of the funds, but only Massachusetts still operates a school under the original mandate. This is the Massachusetts Maritime Academy at Woods Hole.

How these magnificent ships will arrive at the Parade of Sail is a fascinating story of hard work and planning on the part of Mr. Dormitzer and his commitee. The Operation Sail ships set out to sea eacn year with their training crews aboard. Countries which have celebrations planned may request the ships to sail into their ports to become part of the festivities, at the annual advisory meetings of the Sail Training Association in London, England.

The ships sail for training purposes, but must have a destination, so they receive invitations to races or festivals. The presentation of the request for the ships must be made four years in advance at the London meeting. The U.S. has been very fortunate to have succeeded in 1964 for the New York World's Fair, at our country's anniversary celebration in 1976 and again for Boston's birthday in 1980.

When asked about the international good will generated by these ships and their enthusiastic crews, Mr. Dormitzer said: "There is more to be gained in terms of peace in the world by person to person contact than in government. This may be the first time these young people have left their home towns to meet people from other countries."

The cost of sending sailing ships to a special occasion is enormous. Japan figured the journey of the Nippon Maru and its return in 1976 cost one million dollars. The Nippon Maru carried a crew of 400 and its care is subsidized by taxes. Small countries cannot afford to send their ships any distance. The Indonesian ship is occasionally seen in the South Pacific.

Henry Dormitzer smiles gently when he discusses his favorite idea — to use the Unicorn, a 140 foot Class A ship, now berthed in Tampa, Florida, for training young people at the Charlestown Navy Yard. The plan would have the Unicorn in Boston from April 1 to September and in Tampa from October to March.

Trainees would serve on the ship for two weeks at a time and learn the joys, excitement and discipline of working a sailing vessel. Boys and girls between the ages of 15 and 22 would brave the elements under a captain and a professional crew of 20. It could be done for adventure or to test a future career in the merchant marine, navy or the department of fisheries.

Dormitzer and his committee will concentrate their efforts on making this program part of the historical redevelopment of the Charlestown Navy Yard, which will be under the aegis of the National Park Service.

Henry Dormitzer believes that the Naval Academy at Anapolis should own a square rigger. Their reason for not doing so is that cadets are being trained for duty on powered vessels such as carriers or destroyers. Yet in Portugal, Spain, Italy, Norway and Russia one cannot become a commissioned Naval officer without training on a square rigger. Dormitzer comments: "We (Americans) have lost a sense of self-reliance. We look to government instead of learning to rely on our own strengths. Sailing ships do not train young people to be sailors only, but to be equipped to deal with life."

The romance of the sea is embodied in the sailing ships, so beautiful with the sun shining on their billowing sails. Mr. Dormitzer says "It is an unbelievable sight, like a bird soaring in the freedom of its flight. It gives you a surge of power, a feeling of being able to cope, of being in complete command of your environment. Deep within everyone is an inborn love of the sea."

Cohasset is a seaside town and was an important shipbuilding center, as evidenced by a stroll through the Maritime Museum on Elm Street. It is the home of many sailors and others who love the sea. Mothers...

...Bless 'Em!

By Lois Martin

A young woman strode by me the other day saying, "I've got to do something about my mother."

Throughout the ages young people have been bringing up parents as best they can, struggling against forces of obstreperous unwillingness to learn, and peer pressure to which adults respond.

It hasn't been easy for them. Fathers have historically been relatively acceptable, as have his car keys, his new shirt and his financial bolstering. It is Mother who has tried the patience of her children. She never learns. And, if they could get through to her, help her understand, she'd be better for it.

For one thing we need help with our clothes. We don't dress right. Our outfits are funny-looking, faddish, oft foolish. There's no telling what we'll show up in at a school or a supermarket. They wish we'd take a little more pride in our appearance.

PATCHES

One time at a banquet a woman was speaking of her daughter's disdain for her mother's dress. And while the poor soul was wounded by her child's lack of acceptance, she'd worn the dress anyway and was philosophical. "They just don't understand," she said of young people. She's right, of course. Even our bathrobes can come under fire.

Kids certainly catch on early to the fact that a mother can reflect poorly or well on her family. Years ago I attended a first grade Valentine's party clothed, by necessity, in maternity garb. I was later asked not to wear "those funny-looking clothes again." I tried to comply but failed.

And when will they give up on having us physically fit? My children never have a moment's peace. So constant are they in their goal to shape me up, they must bring to my attention flabby upper arms, and ruffled hips. Life would be easier for them if I could do a few push ups. . . .in front of them but not their friends.

There's a code of behavior they wish we'd follow in front of their peers. We're to go in the room, speak politely but as little as possible before leaving. Immediately. If I remember correctly, that's just what my mother wanted me to do with her friends.

We are prone to embarrass them with boisterous laughter. And we infuriate them if we're in the middle of a berating lecture and suddenly switch to a sweet telephone voice for a stranger on the phone.

They've woefully fallen short of their aspirations to teach us about good music, theirs. Our attention span is too short when they're explaining the values of "R" movies and we refuse to see their point.

When we stay out late and arrive home to find them waiting up for us, they're looking for an explanation. No good saying, "All the other parents get to go out Saturday nights."

They wish we wouldn't brag about them in their presence, especially if we inflate their successes. But mothers should seize on anything that'll sound good to her friends, make it look like she's been a wondrous parent. You have to, 'cause you never know when things'll take a downswing. And you have to take blame for being a bad parent. Take credit wherever you can find it or create it.

Certainly children would like to rid us of our martyrdom and our guilt-making tendencies. Where would we be without them? What's a good Mother's Day if someone doesn't forget about it and give us a chance to be martyred at being forgotten. . .on the only day of the year set aside to honor us. . .after all we've done. But then never mind us.

Teenagers resent being treated like small children. But that's how we first knew them. It carries over. We forget people are suddenly all-knowing in their teens when just a few years earlier they asked us to explain everything - what a skunk smells like, how come a bridge stays up there, sex. We don't realize they feel qualified to tell us about those things now.

And I hear young athletes would give their eye teeth if Mother wouldn't stand on the sidelines at games bellowing encouragement at her favorite player. They say they wouldn't do that to us if we were playing ball in front of other people. Darn right they wouldn't. They'd make sure they were out of town if we mothers ever took to the field, the court or the wrestling mat.

It isn't that they won't cooperate with us. They're reasonable. They'll help us. Still, you can lead a horse to water. . .but. Clearly our children have been tolerant of us. They keep coming back no matter how we've embarrassed them. They're the first ones to rise to our defense if others pick on us. They're our friends when no one else would care to be.

They have to overlook our weaknesses. There's no accounting for where we get some of our ideas but the tree doesn't roll far from the apple. They're good-natured about many shortcomings. And despite what we've done to upset them, they always let us cook supper.

At Community Center

Bowling For All Is Back

By Judith Epstein

After lying fallow and broken down for two years, four renovated bowling alleys have recently opened at the Community Center, providing pleasure to bowlers of all ages.

A year ago the Community Center was struggling to make a new start, and the bowling alleys appeared to be one of the keys in attracting memberships while offering entertainment and exercise. President Jack Doherty believes that the Center had been floundering, in part, because of the defunct bowling alleys, considering their popularity in days past. Consequently their revitalization was put on the construction agenda.

Building Inspector James Litchfield was forced years ago to condemn the alleys because of severe water damage in the ceiling. Because funds were scarce, the Center enlisted the volunteer aid of a Marine Corps reserve squadron, Wiong engineering Squadron 47 Combat Engineers, from the south Weymouth Naval Air Station.

One week end a month since last summer the Marines worked ripping out the drooping alley ceiling as well as assisting with several other carpentry projects upstairs. Now the alleys not only sport a new dropped ceiling with new lights, but also professionally rejuvenated bowling balls and pins, freshly carpeted floors, painted walls and refinished alleys.

Director of the alleys' renovation, board member James Drysdale, coordinated the three-month construction efforts. The total project cost was approximately $7000, which was largely financed by a Small Business Loan. Proceeds from the alleys will go toward paying off the loan as well as financing many of the activities of the Center.

A string of candlepin bowling at the Center costs members 50 cents and 75 cents for non-members. Doherty explained that a youngster may work up to owning a single membership which costs five dollars by bowling 20 strings. A family membership costs $10.

"This is really a great thing for the kids, its good for them," Doherty noted. Drysdale agreed and added, "Our prime objective was to get the kids off the street." Judging by the teeming traffic of young people at the alleys last Saturday morning, it would seem that the Center's objectives have been more than well met.

According to bowling alley attendant Danny O'Connell, who teams up with his father Bill O'Connell and Chris Butler to provide full-time supervision and instruction for the alley and children, league formation is already underway. So far there are leagues for teens, senior citizens, couples, men, women, grade school children and high schoolers. O'Connell said that the league will have a competitive start in the fall. For now the week's highest scorer in each class in each league wins three free strings of bowling.

The alleys opened March 12 and the Center has since been enjoying, not surprisingly, more business than ever. Doherty said the Center is approaching 700 memberships - a far cry from the 78 hangers-on last year at this time - and the added activity of bowling is a large reason for the increase.

The alleys are open weekdays 2 p.m. to 11 p.m., Saturday 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. and Sunday noon to 11 p.m.

Squirt Skaters Bring Home Bacon

The Norwell/Scituate/Cohasset Squirt A Seahawks arrived home from Lake Placid this week as Squirt A champions of the Lake Placid Invitational Tournament.

The Seahawk team defeated the Warwick, R.I., All-Stars 6-1 in the last game of the four-day tournament, to cap the win and take home top honors. It was the first Scituate win in nine years with other Scituate teams placing just short of the first place prize.

In a three game test, the Squirts showed their true colors by beating Sterling Heights 3-2, Avon 4-1 and by tying Weymouth 5-5.

The deciding game against Warwick, who were two-year defending champions, was a fast-paced action thriller with both teams flying.

First period play reached a climax with a goal by Michael Ross with assists from defensemen Philip Mahoney and Chris Tatum. Jamie Chisholm scored 49 seconds into the second period with an assist from center Jeff O'Neil.

Matthew Glennon, who chalked up a hat trick for the game, scored unassisted at 1.45 of the period and Ross, assisted by Mickey McCarthy and Philip Mahoney, topped off the period with his second goal. Glennon was to score two more times in the third period with an unassisted goal and one assisted by Jamie Chisholm.

Chris Hublitz and David Flaherty on defense, Steven Griffin, Bobby Salvador, Michael Cooney on wing played with the same solid ability they've shown throughout the season.

Goalie John Belsan made five key saves during the game.

By Joan Pinkham

Seven years and reams of copy ago, Marshfield's own spritely weekly made its debut. From their two-room basement office, Mike Stearns and David Cutler put together the April 13th issue with the help of a staff of two, Suzy Cutler and myself. Now, three more weeklies and a move to larger offices later, Thursday is MARINER day for many. Then when this little column came into being we pointed out that here was an opportunity for our readers to exchange ideas and share their favorite recipes. Our ever-faithful Margaret Ward was one of the first to write, sending this dish designed to serve 8.

CHOW MEIN CASSEROLE
1 can Spam, diced
1 pkg. frozen peas
1/4 c. grated cheese
1/4 to 1/2 c. chopped onion
1 c. chopped celery
1 c. bean sprouts
1 c. cream of chicken soup, undiluted
1/4 c. cream
Chinese noodles, warmed

Layer Spam and peas in large greased casserole. Add cheese onion, celery and bean sprouts. Cover with soup, then with cream. Bake at 350 degrees 35 min. Serve over Chinese noodles.

As with all anniversaries, the MARINER'S 7th seemed like a good time to look back. In reading earlier columns, one gets the feeling there are an awful lot of good cooks around. Even six years ago we were concerned with the high cost of food, and Ken Henderson was trying to interest people in setting up a food coop — wonder whatever became of that idea. Even in 1974, readers were asking for meatless recipes, and Edna Hughes sent in this idea for a luncheon dish designed to serve 4.

TUNA JACKSTRAW
1 4 oz. can shoestring potatoes
1 can mushroom soup
1 can tuna
1 6-oz. can evaporated milk
1 3-oz. can mushrooms
1/4 c. chopped pimentoes

Reserve 1 cup of potatoes for topping. Combine remaining potatoes with other ingredients. Pour into half-quart casserole. Top with remaining potatoes. Bake in 375 degree oven 20 to 25 min.

Another idea that has had its day is that of a Homemaker's Group which was composed of a group of young women who met one evening a week in each other's homes to knit, sew or exchange ideas, have workshops and sometimes speakers. I managed to make one or two meetings and one recipe I came away with is this wonderful biscuit mix which you store in glass jars or tin cans, close tightly and whenever you want hot biscuits or muffins, with a few little additions, you're all set. Here's the basic recipe for

8 c. sifted all-purpose flour
1 c. dry milk
1/4 c. baking powder
3 tsp. salt
1 c. shortening or lard

Sift dry ingredients together 3 times. Cut or rub in fat until consistency of cornmeal. Lift mix lightly into containers without packing. To make 12 medium-sized biscuits, measure out 2 c. of the mix and add 2/3 c. fluid milk or water. Combine lightly with fork or spoon enough so particles of dough still cling together. Turn into greased or lightly floured board. Pat out or knead 15 strokes. Roll 1/2" thick and cut. Bake on sheet in 450 degree oven for 10 to 12 min. Then, if you want to surprise your family with hot muffins for breakfast, or if someone drops in for coffee, you just take:

2 c. biscuit mix
2 T sugar
2/3 c. fluid milk or water
2 T melted fat or salad oil
1 egg

Add sugar to mix. Combine milk and beaten egg and add to mix. Stir only til flour is just moistened — about 15 strokes — after the first five strokes, add melted fat. Fill greased muffin tins 2/3 full. Bake in a 425 degree oven for about 20 min. You can add blueberries, raisins, nuts, chopped apples, etc.

Special Community Meeting

There will be a special meeting in lieu of the annual meeting of the members of the Community Center of Cohasset Inc. on April 30 at 8 p.m. at the center, 3 North Main St.

Navy Cryptologic Technician Seaman Apprentice Maureen Sullivan, daughter of the Paul Sullivans of South Main Street, was recently graduated from Basic Cryptologic Technician "O" school. The self-paced course was conducted at the Naval Technical Training Center in Pensacola, Fla., and was designed to train students as Special Intelligence Communication Center operators. Students received instruction on communication systems, teletypewriter equipment, communication technical control and cryptographic systems. Maureen joined the Navy in July of 1978.

Members of the Cohasset Dramatic Club hired a bus to take them to the Colonial Theatre to see DRACULA. Refreshments were served on the bus and local couples included: the Dwight DiBonas, the John Hallorans, the Donald Woolfs, the Peter Tolmans, the Burke Ketchums, the Bob McKays and the Club President Ron Massa and his wife Trisha.

DRACULA is a once-in-a-lifetime theatrical event and the Club members appreciated the work that went into the Edward Gorey sets and the stylized direction.

Alcohol Program Threatened

By Judith Epstein

The Drug Alternatives Program (ADA), sponsored by the South Shore Council on Alcoholism and established in Scituate and Cohasset High Schools, at this date has not been funded for next year by the Dept. of Mental Health (DMH).

ADA, a prevention program, primarily for alcohol abuse, has been meeting with success in the high schools with such activities as awareness sessions, in-class presentations and peer training seminars. Small group counseling and training workshops has been offered to high risk persons referred by guidance departments and teachers. Crisis intervention is provided with private counselling, home visits and referrals to other area agencies and professionals in the community.

The in-school ADA program was first established at Scituate High School this year because of the amount of community interest that developed when the program was still held in informal groups outside of school.

ADA classes and meetings at Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School began in late January, fortified by Scituate's success, but the set up was slightly different. The ADA program was one of three community alcohol education programs in Cohasset; it was funded, as was the Scituate ADA program by the DMH, unlike the other components which are financed by money given to the Social Service League by Turn-Off Drugs, Inc.

At the worst the discontinuation of the DMH grant could mean the demise of the ADA program in both towns.

William Spinks, the Executive Director of the Council on Alcoholism and Dr. Max Munro , psychologist and ADA coordinator, were recently informed of the recommended termination of the program handed down by the Coastal Area Mental Health and Retardation Office. Notification of this decision reached the Council in April, although the decision was made in February, Spinks said.

In the interim a request for a proposal (RFP) was issued to the Council for a court liaison person and drug counseling program to serve the population of young adults seen by the court systems with drug and alcohol related crimes, with no mention of the school-based ADA program as it now stands. Before the Council responded, Debra Munves, Area Youth Coordinator, informed Spinks that the ADA contract would not be renewed.

After careful examination of the goals and objectives stated in the RFP, Spinks and Munro met with Quincy and Hingham Court Probation Chiefs and staff to clarify needs. The RFP had stated the need to reduce inappropriate referrals to Medfield

Circle Of Gold A Vicious Circle

By Judith Epstein

One of my father's most prudent sayings to me as a child, aside from "success comes before work only in the dictionary," was "You can't get something for nothing."

Both of those axioms seems to be falling by the wayside, however, for the lucky and diligent few who are raking in the bread from the Circle of Gold craze.

The chain requires any participant to buy two copies of the letter for $100 in cash. The buyer in a face-to-face transaction gives $50 of the total to the person from whom the letter was purchased and sends the other $50 to the first person at the top of a 12-name list. This top name is then crossed off and the buyer's name is added at the bottom of each copy before it is sold again.

The people who have bought into lists early in the fad's rampage through an area or town and who have persistently policed the continued selling and buying of the letter, may be in for some money. They are egged on, as they egg on their friends and buyers (often in a repetitive and obnoxious manner reminiscent of religious revivals and cult practices) in the belief they can't lose, that you can't lose and that everybody is in for a lot of money. Some have received a lot of money, it is true; I have met them. They are eager to receive more.

The problem comes when an area becomes saturated with buyers so late joiners have difficulty in selling their letters. These people are told not to

Vermont Laurels For Dramatists

The Cohasset Drama Workshop received excellent ratings from the judges at the New England High School Drama Festival at Castleton State College last weekend.

Two of the 11-member cast — Jim Vivian and Meri Fink — were elected to the all New England cast. Both actor and actress play lead roles in the 'Master Thief' and 'Henny Penny,' respectively, two of the adapted tales performed in Story Theatre.

Vivian also characterizes the strutting and swaggering rooster, Cocky Locky, in 'Henny Penny' and the calculating oaf in the 'Bremen Town Musicians.' Fink also gave distinctive performances in the 'Master Thief' as the Countess and as the hound in the 'Bremen Town Musicians.'

Story Theatre, has been charmingly portrayed by the Drama Workshop cast and crew since the beginning of the school year. Their long list of accomplishments and victories leading up to their participation in the New England Festival are tributes to their tenacity, creativity and direction under Ron Emmons.

There were originally seven skits in the play, according to cast members, but when they got to competition level and had to keep the play within a 40 minute time limit, the tales, based largely on the art of deception, were cut back to three.

Director Emmons said that the play

Teachers Ride-A-Bike Bows Sunday

The Cohasset Teachers Association will sponsor the eighth annual Ride-A-Bike for retarded citizens Sunday, April 29 from 1 to 4 p.m.

Individuals of all ages are welcome to participate either by riding, sponsoring a ride or by helping to man the checkpoints on the day of the ride.

Riders solicit sponsors from within the community who pledge the cyclists a predetermined amount of money per mile. After the ride, the contributions are collected by the participants from their sponsors.

Interested riders may obtain sponsor sheets from any school in town.

Members and friends of the Cohas--set Communications Council will supply refreshments at the Town Hall for all participants.

Ride-A-Bike will start at 1 p.m. at the Town Hall. The route is as follows:

The younger riders may turn left at the corner of Nichols Road and Jerusalem Road and finish at the Town Hall for a four mile route.

originated with a skeletal script which was embellished and fattened by the student's own additions and creations. Minimal stage equipment was still all that was necessary as the performers highlighted the stage.

The primary colors of blue, green, yellow and red dominated the stage once again last Wednesday night when the Drama Workshop was invited to Ipswich High School to perform Story Theatre in conjunction with Ipswich's winning version of the comedy The Chinaman.

The Cohasset students were embraced by the Ipswich students in a show of hospitality and comraderie as they shared not only the dramatic limelight but also accomodations and the bus ride to Vermont.

In Vermont, the Drama Workshop performed Friday afternoon along with two other schools. Emmons said the judges opened critiques right after the three performances in front of the audience and didn't mince words. Cohasset received two excellent and one very good.

Because the festival wasn't competitive the reactions of the students were different than before, Emmons said, because they were walking away with palpable trophies or titles this time. However, he considered the festival a tremendous success and commented, "We saw all kinds of theater. The kids participated in a lot of workshops. Fencing and makeup were the most popular. I thought it was very well done."

After an exhausting three-day weekend, the Drama Workshop is home for good now, this year's round of drama showcases are over. They are considering the possibility of committing Story Theatre to film; but aside from that, Story Theatre will finally be laid to rest.

The cast members include: Cathleen Collins, Beth Donahue, Meri Fink, Jon Foell, David Hanlon, Scott Muir, Lisa O'Toole, Disa Pratt, Judy Venderlugt, Jim Vivian, Jerry White. Stage manager is Arthur Glasfeld, stage crew include Kerry Crehan, Susanna Mastrobuono, Bob Durant and in charge of lighting Leslie Collins.

Jim Litchfield, Outspoken Building Inspector

He can be heard hollering objections in the back of the auditorium at the Planning Board hearing. He has vociferously voiced his opinion at many a Zoning Board of Appeals meeting. He often tells Selectmen exactly what he thinks.

James Litchfield, Zoning Officer and Building Inspector, usually tells everybody just what he thinks.

As Building Inspector, Litchfield is in charge of the enforcement of the Mass. Building and local building codes. As Zoning Officer, he enforces the Town's zoning bylaws. This dichotomous position would be enough to send anybody screeching to a Dale Carnegie course, a suggestion made to Litchfield by Selectman Arthur Clark this year.

The position of Building Inspector in Cohasset began in June 1970 and was a half-time job until July, 1974 when it finally went to 35 hours a week. Litchfield took over in 1972 and each year finds it increasingly difficult to keep up with the job's demands.

"It's getting to the point you'd have to be a structural engineer or lawyer to interpret and enforce these codes," Litchfield laments.

Reviewing plans and specifications, approving and issuing building permits and inspecting all work under construction as well as public buildings and places of assembly may often necessitate telling people what they don't want to hear — that they are in violation. Litchfield, a crackerjack at knowing the law and who can or can't do what where, is often abrupt in manner but correct in his observations.

On a recent outing with Litchfield, The Mariner was exposed in brief with the trials he endures as a part of daily work. Like a professional photographer, Litchfield looks at his environment with an attuned eye. What may pass by the layman unnoticed, Litchfield may pick up as a fire hazard, for instance.

The first stop that day was the Ripley Road Nursing Home, where Litchfield dropped off a Certificate of Inspection. He had made one of his periodic inspections examining required occupancy per floor. He had found conditions satisfactory and was routinely dropping off the OK. A simple case.

James Litchfield

Litchfield's next stop, his fourth inspection at a new dwelling being constructed off Forest Avenue, was more complex. The particular stage of the construction plastering was given the go ahead by Litchfield, as were the foundation, framing and chimney previously. Litchfield noted, however, that there had been a problem with the plumbing at one point where too much timber had been cut to allow pipes to pass through the walls thereby weakening them.

On the way down the driveway from the new home, Litchfield — this time as Zoning Officer — pointed to a place where the surrounding land wasn't draining properly. Until the waterlogged area was corrected, he said, he wouldn't issue a Certificate of Occupancy.

Litchfield explained that before construction could have begun on the property at all, a building permit had to be issued. Not as simple as it sounds, he warned, as he enumerated the conditions that are required — an approved septic system permit, a plot plan showing the location of the septic system and the dwelling with adequate setback requirements, structural drawings showing side elevations, insulation, egress — the list could go on.

En route to his next stop, Litchfield still wearing his Zoning Officer's hat, pointed to a house with an adjacent horse barn. To this reporter, the home and yard depicted a pretty pastoral scene. To Litchfield it constituted a menace to the health of the neighborhood because the barn was within 100 feet of a brook — a situation which had to be pursued with the Board of Health and Conservation Commission.

Another metamorphosis and Litchfield became the Building Inspector again during the inspection of fire extinguishers at the Cohasset Golf Club. Most of the extinguishers were missing, probably because of theft, Litchfield said, and he left the manager with the warning and reminder to replace those missing by the time the golfing season began.

Driving back to his office, Litchfield detoured onto Rte. 3A. He'd received a complaint from a conservation-minded individual regarding the filling of wetlands by a business on the highway. Getting out of the car and looking at the area Litchfield remarked that the Conservation Commission should put up stakes outlining the area considered wetlands.

He explained that if the owner of the property wanted to persist in his activities he would have to receive approval from the Conservation Commission before applying for a special permit before the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Litchfield's duties increase daily. He's awaiting a new building code from the state as well as the June Town Meeting decisions on town bylaw regulations. The constant changes often make it next to impossible to police and remember everything that has to be done.

Often residents will watchdog and report to him violations they pick up. Sign and off-street parking violations, Litchfield said, are two bylaw regulations which would never be enforced if it weren't for the observations of the townspeople.

All of this doesn't leave Litchfield in a altogether popular position, for as mentioned, he can be the bearer of bad news reminding people of hazards and nuisances they forgot or didn't even know they had. But Litchfield's heart is in the right place. His efforts are for the safety and well-being of the town.

Voters Must Fish Or Cut Bait

By Gilbert Tower

Commentary

To do something or not to do something. That is the immediate question confronting Cohasset voters. A Cohasset Mariner would say "Either fresh fish or cut bait." The town has delayed to the limit. For better or for worse it is time for the town to do something.

Imagine a type-written page of discussions pro and con with every possible objection included. At the end it will conclude with this plan. Starting at Rte. 3A lay a pipe down Beechwood St. to the railroad bed, then turn left along the railroad to Spring St. and into Jacobs Meadow or Whale Meadow. Drain the Veterans area from which Peppermint Brook now pollutes the lily Pond water supply. If some houses on Lincoln hillside cannot be made to perk the cheapest way may be for the town to buy them. Otherwise drain them to an additional treatment facility in Jacobs Meadow or Whale Meadow.

The capacity of the additional plant should be moderate, that is not large enough for future extension to handle the remaining town area.

So far as possible every house should dispose of its own human waste by means of its septic tank. Beginning with new houses, the plumbing systems should limit septic tank connections strictly to water closet waste that can be effectively eaten up by bacteria in the septic tank. Clothes washing machines, kitchen sinks, bathtubs and shower baths and lavatories can be conducted to dry wells or elsewhere. Interior piping will be under jurisdiction of the plumbing inspector while exterior arrangements will come under the board of health.

For the treatment plant effluent, lay a pipe to Whale Meadow. Cut out the silly talk about Sutton Rock. The tides flowing in and out of Cohasset Harbor twice a day provide an ideal, natural system for flushing out slight effluent pollution.

'Now let's go back to the main question "To do or not to do?" The writer can see no way by which the federal government or state can compel the town to do anything it does not want to do. By contributing 85½ of the cost they can exercise a very strong influence. It would probably be a mistake for Cohasset not to take advantage of the financial help offered, but we should act soon, otherwise the offer will be withdrawn and the money will go to some other town. An adopted plan which might be, we will say 25% not perfect, would still be 75% satisfactory. In other words, probably no adopted plan would be entirely a mistake. That thought might justify going ahead confidently with something in spite of some objection.

After having completed an extension of our present public sewage disposal system, what if coli-bacteria are counted in the water of Cohasset Harbor? Then a tertiary system might have to be considered to make the effluent as pure as drinking water. That system is understood to involve leaching beds of charcoal. Another possible action might be to refuse to grant permits for more residential construction. More town population might aggravate the sewage problem.

Having thought the matter through to some kind of conclusion, it seems to the writer that Cohasset will make no mistake in going ahead and vote to install more sewer pipes and treatment plant.

Let's burn up our human waste so far as possible with the help of bacteria in individual septic tanks so far as possible and to supplement those by the town treatment plant which is like a public septic tank except that its method of operation is different.

The writer has just received a copy of Title V and plans to study it with the hope of making individual septic tanks more efficient instead of increasing public expense. It is hoped that this discussion may help somewhat in simplifying the sewage problem. It is also hoped that the engineers and commissioners will make a written report which voters will be able to read instead of having to make decisions on the basis of verbal discussion which only a few voters can hear.

Voters should be given time to think and to make up their minds.

Editorial

Harbor Shares

When it comes to harbors, Cohasset is being overly generous to the Town of Scituate.

Cohasset Harbor spreads out into Scituate waters (and thus into Plymouth County waters) which means Scituate residents have access to Cohasset Harbor facilities. As outlined by Selectman Arthur Clark last month, those facilities include a boat ramp, parking, dredging, use of water and electrical outlets, flood lighting, police protection and, of course, partial use of the Cohasset Harbormaster. The rub is that Scituate pays very little for these services and is, in fact, sponging off Cohasset taxpayers who now spend about $25,000 for the harbor budget.

The exisiting inequities were reviewed at a Selectmen's meeting last month and at the time, a Scituate spokesman said something about wanting to be fair to Cohasset. Just how fair, he didn't say.

With the political waters relatively calm in both towns now, it seems an approproate time to readdress the issue. Simply put, Scituate needs to pay more. Generosity has it limits, even for Cohasset.

Thanks For Your Kindness

To the Editor:

I want to thank so many of your for your kindness to me since I came to Nelson's Music Shop. I remember:

— all who welcomed me in my little studio in 1975

— the ones who offered prayers in 1977 when Irwin went into the hospital and gave blood for him.

— the children who would come in and show concern for us.

— the people who appreciated our little plants

— the kids who played with Jamie

— the teenagers who liked our Christmas tree

— the ladies who liked to get our paperbacks.

— the people I knew, and some I didn't, who would stop in and tell me they were praying for Irwin and me.

— the residents of Cohasset who supported the store and me.

— the students who are willing to go to Scituate with me to continue lessons.

I am so grateful to you all for your concern and love.

Peace and love!

Sincere Gratitude For Donations

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Recreation Department would like to extend its sincere gratitude to the Cohasset Jaycees, Flemming Hardware Company, Nelson's Record Shop, Cohasset Hardware, and the Red Lion Inn for their generous donations towards the 1979 Easter Egg Hunt for children between the ages of three and 12.

While weather conditions were less than ideal on Saturday, over 250 youngsters participated in the annual event co-sponsered by the Cohasset Jaycees and Recreation Department.

There are presently about 300 individuals registered in 16 spring Recreation Department programs which are designed for all aged residents. Many of these programs will continue, after new registrations during May and June, into the summer.

Cohasset Recreation Department

Around Town Hall

CLARK CHAIRMAN

Selectman Arthur Clark was reelected chairman of the board at an organizational meeting last Wednesday night. Clark has been chairman for all but his first two years on the board. He has served 10 years.

LAUGELLE WELCOMED

Newly-elected Selectman Rocco Laugelle served on the board for the first time last week. He had been a water commissioner nine years. Selectmen Arthur Clark and Henry Ainslie noted they, too, had been water commissioners in the past.

POND STUDIES

Selectmen approved the application for a $10,000 grant from the state Office of Coastal Zone Management for studies of Straits Pond. If the grant is approved, Cohasset and Hull would be responsible for 20 per cent of the cost or $2000.

Avshalom Beni, disaster relief coordinator of Hull, reported the grant would be used as additional help in ridding the pond of pollution and insect problems. A recently voted appropriation at town meeting for Cohasset's share of $5000 to be used in conjunction with an equal amount from Hull will go toward preliminary studies of the pond.

POLICE APPOINTMENT

Selectmen received authorization from Civil Service for the employment of Frederick Grassie of Beechwood Street as a police officer at $12,762 a year. Grassie has been a permanent intermittent officer and has been trained by Cohasset at a police academy. He will fill a vacancy caused by the dismissal of an officer.

MAPC PLAN

The Metropolitan Area Planning Council had submitted a questionnaire to Selectmen for information on the town's housing assistance needs and goals. The questionnaire will be sent to the Housing Authority and Planning Board for comments.

CARRY GUNS?

During the review of committee appointments, Selectmen raised the question of whether special police officers should carry guns. Police Chief Randolph Feola will be asked to more information on private and special police officers and whether those positions should be continued.

CS REORGANIZATION

Selectmen have agreed to answer a questionnaire from the Massachusetts League of Cities and Towns requesting ideas on Civil Service reform. A letter from the league said the legislature is expected to create a special commission soon to study the question of Civil Service reform and report back by the end of this year with recommended changes.

The commission, the letter continued, will probably be composed of public employe union members as well as municipal and state management people and state legislators.

worry, that they will receive help in selling letters. I have spoken with several people who have not received such help and who are forced to pass on the letters to friends and relatives gratis or who stopped the chain cold by not passing on one of their lists.

In any case, the successful continuance of the chain is entirely dependent on the pyramiding theory, that with each new buyer of a list, the circle of gold will increase doublefold. Obviously a hitch anywhere along the way will decrease the possibility of the maximum amount of money reaching the top name on the list, and so on down the line. No. 12 may do well to make his $100 dollar investment back, let alone realize any money in the mail.

It seems the way members are getting around the fact that chain letters are illegal, is by sending cash alone, not letters, through the mails with the rationalization that participation in this way protects them from the law. Not so, here are some facts:

Those who buy and sell the chain letter are actually in violation of a Federal law, the U.S. Postal Service said according to a recent news release. If the scheme involves the mailing of money, a bond, or other valuable item, even if the chain letters themselves are not mailed, it is still a violation of the law, the Postal Service said.

More specifically, the Internal Revenue Service Public Affairs division said last week that anyone who receives money, income, from the Circle of Gold, has to report it on his next year's income tax return. It is taxable money. If it is not reported the IRS said, it is considered tax evasion and is punishable by a $10,000 fine or by five years in prison for each count of evasion.

The IRS said further that big reapers of funds from the Circle of Gold can be tracked down by a variety of methods. Informants, and people who turn lists in to the IRS come in all forms. A large number are disgruntled members of the chain who didn't realize their fortune or who didn't make their original investment back. Investigations will be made, I was told, if it becomes obvious that individuals made large sums of money.

The Attorney General's office, white-collar crime division, said that the chain is considered illegal under Mass. General Law 271, Section 6A, which describes such activities as an illegal lottery, punishable by Section 7, by a fine of $3,000 or two and a half years in jail.

The investigator from that office said that policing the chain is next to impossible and not practical, so prosecution is not likely, but strongly advises anybody from joining it because of its intrinsic illegality.

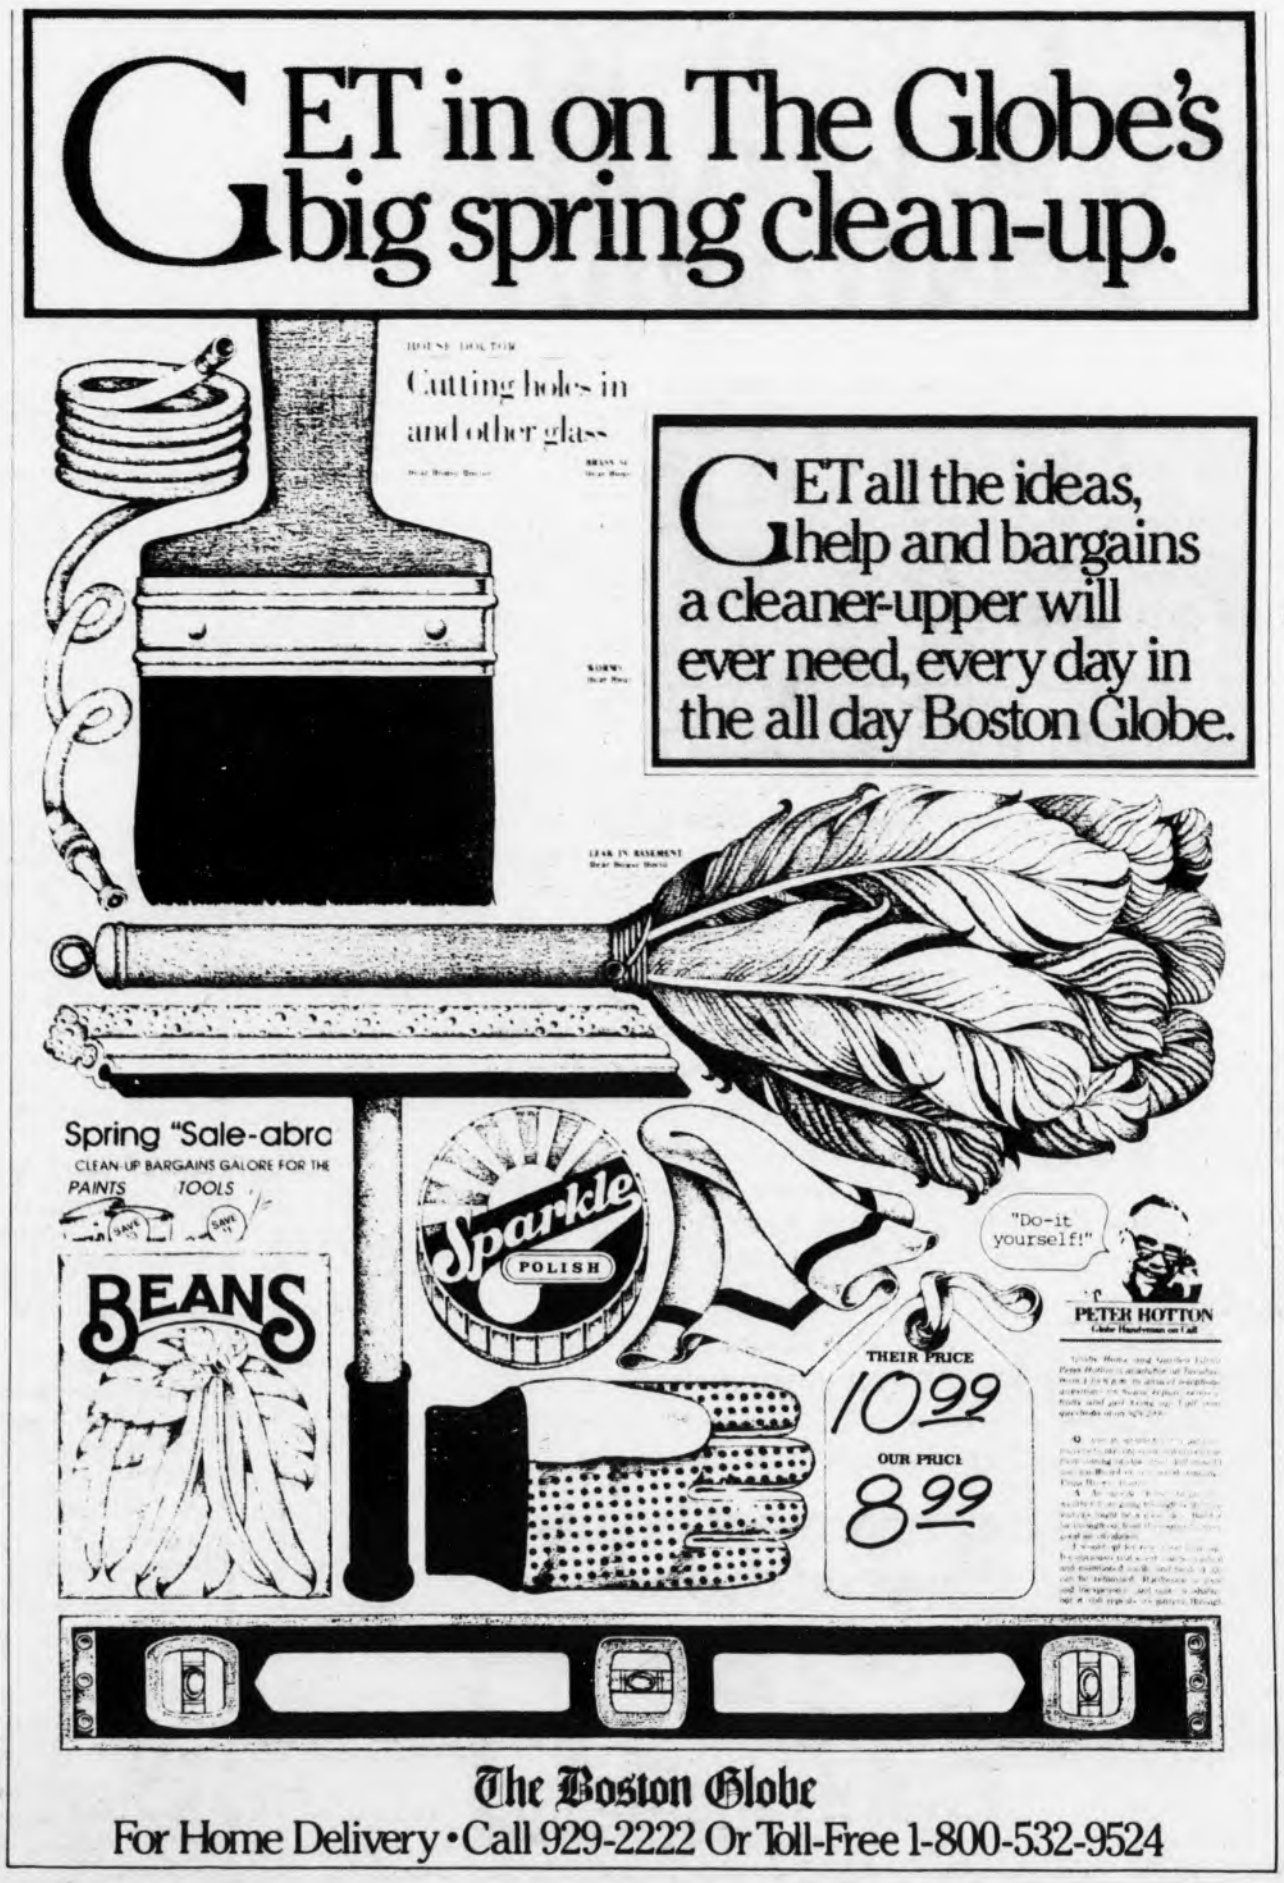
Put aside for a moment all the legal ramifications of receiving money via the supposed golden circle. It is acceptable, afterall, to gamble in this society. I don't mind so much the actual receiving of money from the chain; if you have joined early, are receiving money and somehow getting away with it, good luck to you. What I do mind is the greed, avarice and all the other unattractive qualities which I have witnessed arising in people since this thing started.

Recently, I stopped off at a friend's home in Cohasset. Instead of spending a pleasant Saturday afternoon, I was beset constantly with the advantages of becoming a member. It went on ad nauseum. It was the only topic discussed. There were charts on the wall listing names and graphing out the course of the letter should it prove successful. It had become an obsession.

One of its proponents, a person I have known for many years and whom I would never have suspected would join, was so zealous in his sales pitch that I suggested he become a real salesman and put some of his soliciting talents to good use. But, he preferred to wait until the money starts rolling in, thank you. Another of the proponents actually got angry at another who was skeptical, and blamed him for his stupidity in not wanting to join in a sure thing (and also for not wanting to contribute to the advancement of the proponent's name on the list).

If these are the subjects of the organizational parties that occur almost any night of the week, they must be tedious at best. Perhaps you may meet people you never met before, fine! What sort of relationship will you establish with the people when the sole topic of conversation is bound to be the Circle of Gold and money.

Apparently, very few can escape the letter's charms, for even town officials are getting into a small $4 version circulating around Town Hall. Others are getting into the Circle of Tin, a $10 variation. A prosperous few aredoing the Circle of Platinum which costs $1000 to become a member.



Furthermore, at any mention of my contempt for the Circle of Gold and my intention to write this commentary, I have received threats, warnings, and advice not to interfere, for it is thought that I will be blamed for an interruption in the circle. I refuse to buy the concept that I will receive money without working for it; the $100 I would need to join is too hard come by in the first place. I refuse to buy the "blazing gold energy" mumbo jumbo that the cover letter of the lists claims unties people, bringing them money for the evolution of the planet. I refuse to believe that I "deserve" to receive money from other people, another claim the letter makes.

Another adage of my father's, "The world doesn't owe you a living," wised me up on that one.

Alcohol Program

State Hospital; however, a Hingham Court record check for this year identified only three such referrals and projected only 12 evaluation referrals annually.

Quincy Court was unable to provide any accurate numbers but stated that referrals are made by the Court Clinic — psychiatrists, psychologists, and social workers from the Dept. of Mental Health — in cooperation with the probation staff. Hingham Court also reported that a court clinic has recently become operational there.

The RFP was viewed by both courts as not reflecting their present needs and unnecessary at this time. Based on the court responses, the Council submitted an application for funding to the DMH Area Committee that included a review of the present ADA program with some modifications, as an alternative proposal, to satisfy the needs of the court clinics.

The target population of ADA, although school age, will be extended to serve young people up to the age of 26. The alternative proposal was extended to include education evaluation groups for youth or young adults who are out of school referred from the Court, and involvement of court referred youth who are in school with the presently existing school programs.

This proposal hasn't met with the approval of the Area Committee yet and the Council is still anxiously awaiting a positive change in their recommendation.

Dr. Munro is adamant that the program continue. "We're not going to let it die because we feel it's valuable," he said this week. Munroe and his team at the Council are busily trying to come up with funds for the program should the DMH discontinue the present contract after June 30.

Munro anticipates applying everywhere for money: to the towns, local organization, to the state division of alcoholism, to the National Institute of Drug Abuse (NIDA), to the National Institute of Alcohol and Alcoholism (NIAAA) and to any other place they can think of.

'The Secretary Bird' To Be Presented May 3, 4 And 5

'The Secretary Bird' has shifted into high gear this week.

A comedy by Britain's William Douglas Home, 'The Secretary Bird' was produced at the Savoy Theater in London in 1968. In addition to being an entertaining comedy, director Ubi DeBenedetto feels the play has a true literary quality.

Bob MacKay of Marshfield and Robin Lord of Cohasset play Hugh and Liz Walford, whose marriage has lost its romance. Bob Julian from Cohasset is John Brownlow, the erstwhile lover "well-known to be the handsomest man in London," with Donna Williams, also from Cohasset, in the role-within-a-role of Molly Forsyth, Hugh's lovely secretary. Lee Dunne of Scituate rounds out the five-character cast as Mrs. Gray, the housekeeper.

'The Secretary Bird' will be presented May 3, 4 and 5 at 8 p.m. at Town Hall. Tickets are $2.50 and may be purchased at the door or by calling 383-1736. Senior citizens are invited free to the opening performance May 3.

A special workshop in Figure Painting will be offered by the South Shore Art Center Saturday, April 28th, instructed by well-known artist Rosalind Farbush. The day will begin at 10 and end at 3 with a break for lunch.

Students should come ready to paint in their chioce of medium. Ms. Farbush teaches at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and has exhibitied widely.

Other classes still enrolling at the Center are college credit classes in sculpture with Egelson, Figure Painting with Lanza, Creative Drawing and Painting with Kalish and Tennis and childrens classes in Clay and Paint.

For further information, telephone 383-9548 between 12-4 Monday through Friday.

Skipper Turnabout Rests On Pitching, Experience

Once the pitching staff picks up some experience, Cohasset is looking to turn around its baseball season which has seen the Skippers drop all four contests to date.

Latest loss came Monday this week at the hands of Norwell on the heels of defeats by Middleboro, Duxbury and East Bridgewater.

"Pitching," emphasizes Coach Ev Door, "is 90 per cent of school baseball. Our pitchers like most of our players, lack experience. As we pick up experience, there's only one way to go — up."

Indicative of the general inexperience, Dorr, who is in his 30th season at Cohasset (it hardly seems possible he wasn't placekicking the football and pitching for Boston University a lot less years ago than that) is three years total varsity experience among his starters.

Two of those years belong to Senior Captain Tom Higgins, Dorr's No. 1 pitcher who doubles at shortstop.

The other single previous year with the varsity is th property of junior third baseman Matt Brown.

After that, the diamond exposure has been strictly Jayvee or less until now.

But it's typical of the irrepressible Dorr that he isn't discouraged.

Behind Higgins, Dorr calls on junior Fred Espinosa, who plays second when not on the mound. Behind Espinosa, Dorr calls on junior Bruce Maynard and sophomore William Kurtz but primarily in relief roles. All four are righthanders.

Dorr does have a lefty on the squad — first baseman John Ayer, who is a sharp-fielding junior but out for two more weeks with a broken nose he suffered during batting practice.

In the interim, senior Pat Plante has been filling in, and he, too, is a promoted Jayvee.

Kurtz plays second when not pitching and short when Higgins is pitching.

Brown has been getting contention for the third base job from promising sophomore Mike Jones.

Dorr is in the happy position of having two talented catchers. One is junior Jim Sullivan, who like Ayer, has been nursing an injury which brought to light Bob Donahue, only a freshman but "doing a super job," in Dorr's estimates.

The Skipper bench is thin with reserves Pete Colletta a spare infielder and Mike McDonald, an infielder-pitcher.

"Vacation didn't help us any," Dorr muses referring to the fact many players were away.

"The hitting," he continues, "always is playing catch up this time of year."

By the time it does and the pitchers pick up some savvy, Dorr figures his crew could be trouble for other South Shore League Opponents.

He himself is still recuperating from a heel problem that has him on crutches.

"I couldn't do much to help them if I put myself in," he chuckles.

A resident of Scituate, Dorr now that he hasn't all the pressure and responsibility of coaching three sports and holding down the Athletic Director's job as well, is looking forward to his No. 1 hobby — golf.

"Once I get off the crutches," he reminds.

But he and his wife Frances, who is secretary for an Angelo's vice president, can enjoy their mutual hobby — travel.

Once the baseball campaign is over, that is.

Tennis Teams Triumph

Both Cohasset High's boys and girls tennis teams got off the mark fast with wins.

The Skipper boys team blanked Whitman-Hanson in its opener, 5-0.

Anders Ottoseon, Kevin Savage and Jeff Turner were winners in singles and Alan McClary and Glenn Curtis and Andy Bergland and Carl Nelson swept the doubles.

In girls action, Laurie O'Connor, 6-0, 6-1; and Janet England, 9-8, 6-1 were winners for the Skippers. Karen Murphy and Susan Dalrymple and Leslie Carroll and Sissy Whel swept the double winners for Cohasset.

A Good Year For Cohasset Savings Bank

Cohasset Savings Bank generally outperformed the average of 24 savings banks of comparable size in Massachusetts during 1978, achieving particularly notable results in the key factors of growth rate and net income, Donald E. Bates, Executive Vice President, reported to the annual meeting of the corporators of the bank last week.

Reviewing the bank's 1978 performance in relation to other similar institutions, Bates covered a number of factors of comparison, showing that in virtually all respects the Cohasset bank had results above the average.

"We are particularly pleased by our record of growth in the surplus account which provides the reserves necessary to protect the interests of depositors, and also in our showing in net income after payment of dividends which is a good gauge of overall bank performance," Bates said.

In the fiscal year ended Oct. 31, 1978, Cohasset Savings achieved a growth of nearly 11 per cent in its guaranty fund and surplus account as compared with an average of less than 8 per cent for the group of banks. Cohasset ranked seventh among the 24 banks in this category.

Cohasset Savings' record of 1.22 per cent in net income after payment of dividends to despositors placed it third among its banking peers.

Reporting on the current state of bank affairs, Bates noted that deposits have increased by more than $1.1 million since the end of 1978, after a period when the bank had experienced an outflow of funds due to the competition of high interest savings certificates offered at that time by other banks. Since resuming the offering of these certificates in December, deposits have increased from $24.7 million to $25.8 million, he said.

Cohasset Student A Merit Scholar

In the second of three major announcements of Merit Scholars this spring, the National Merit Scholarship Corporation, has released the names of 1,000 winners of National Merit $1000 Scholarships. The total Merit Scholarships being offered in 1979, the 24th competition, is expected to exceed 4,200 awards valued at about $13 million.

National Merit $1000 Scholarships are one-time, nonrenewable awards. Each winner will receive a single payment of $1,000 next fall after enrolling in the regionally accredited U.S. college or university of the student's choice. Among those named are Leslie Jones of Forest St. Cohasset and Erin Delaney of Country Way in Scituate.

Towle To Open DMB Hardware Store

For over 59 years, on the South Shore, the name Towle has been synonomous with quality electrical service and appliance sales. With the opening of DMB Hardware, a division of Towle Electrical Co., Inc., that tradition of quality will be carried into another field.

According to Steve Towle president of TEC, Inc., the hardware division will feature a wide range of tools and hardware accessories, complete plumbing and electrical supplies, small appliances, glass and screen repair, key making and the fine line of Kyanize paint products. George Burroughs of Randolph will manage the new division.

Burroughs, a Vermont native who "grew up in the retail hardware business" also has the experience of over twenty years in the wholesale hardware field. The grand opening of DMB Hardware will be held Saturday, May 5, at the new showroom, adjacent to Towle Electrical, at 166 King Street, Route 3A, Cohasset.

There's more to durability than hardness

Diamond is the hardest substance known to man. It cannot be scratched and will never wear out, though it may be chipped, and so a diamond should not be worn while gardening, moving furniture or during any rough activities. This extraordinary hardness, some 100x harder than the next known substance, gives the diamond an unsurpassed luster called, "admantine," (Greek meaning extraordinarily hard), which will never change or show wear.

Selectmen Divided Over Guns For Cohasset Auxiliary Police

By Judy Epstein

Selectman Rocco Laugelle voiced strong objections to the routine carrying of guns by auxiliary police despite firm backing by Civil Defense Director Lester Hiltz and Selectmen last Wednesday night.

"There's no reason for auxiliary police to carry guns. Police are big talk in this town. Guns are a big thing in the town of Cohasset. We have to start from the bottom," Laugelle remarked.

Hiltz outlines the duties of the auxiliary police, as a Civil Defense unit and noted that the officers aren't authorized to carry weapons on scheduled training duty even if licensed as private citizens. Hiltz defended the regulations which allow auxiliary police to carry a weapon if licensed, trained in a firearms course and authorized by the chief of police while on regular duty.

Laugelle persisted in objecting to the regulation although he admitted he wasn't aware of any gun abuse.

"I've never seen an auxiliary police officer carry a gun except in Cohasset," he pointed out.

Hiltz said that Laugelle's observation, wasn't true.

"I'd be damned, if I were in a police uniform, if I'd be out there without a pistol," Hiltz remarked. "If you're going to take guns away from the auxiliary police, do away with the auxiliary police."

Laugelle felt Hiltz's comments were

Langmaid School Board Chairman

Jack Langmaid was elected School Committee Chairman, Monday night after tie votes beset the reorganizational meeting. Another tie vote failed to reappoint a teacher to the Deer Hill School faculty.

The Committee recessed to an open-door caucus for 45 minutes after two stalemated votes failed to elect Frank England or Langmaid, the two senior members nominated for the chair.

Diana Kornet, a newly-elected board member, supported Langmaid's nomination because she felt that his daily accessability to the schools would be an invaluable asset to the board's functioning.

Martha Gjesteby, also a new board member, didn't agree that it was the place of the School Committee to oversee the running of the school. She supported England for chairman and emphasized his seniority and business expertise.

It was England, himself, who finally broke the tie and cast his vote for Langmaid. The final tally for Langmaid was 4-2, with Gjesteby and committee member Pat Walsh opposed.

England was unanimously elected vice-chairman. Pat Walsh became secretary by 4-2.

Supt. of Schools John Maloney brought his recommendations, as instructed, several weeks ago of the reappointments of several non-tenure to the Committee for consideration. Maloney said he could best respond to elementary school teaching needs. "High school elective courses are still not all computed and an accurate projection of necessary staffing can be

'Secretary Bird' Drama Offering

The Cohasset Drama Club will perform "The Secretary Bird" at the Town Hall May 3, 4 and 5 at 8 p.m.

"The Secretary Bird" is a comedy by Britain's William Douglas Home and was produced at the Savoy Theater in London in 1968. Director Ubi DeBenedetto feels the play has a special literary quality as well as being an entertaining comedy.

The Articles That Lost & Their Future

Who of those in attendance at Town Meeting will ever forget the midnight vote that axed further plans for the proposed sewer treatment plant 4? Town Meeting voters also faced many other substantive articles through many gruelling hours of discussion and debate.

The Mariner has contacted the proponents of some of the more weighty articles which didn't pass at Town Meeting and recorded their ideas, suggestions and hopes for the future of those controversial matters.

Article 19, which asked for an appropriation of $36,000 as Cohasset's share for removal of ledge rocks in the harbor, to be used in conjunction with $15,000 held by the Army Corps of Engineers left over from a 1968 dredging project, was defeated.

Harbormaster Hary Ritter had urged townspeople to consider the menace to navigation the rocks were posing, and reminded them that Cohasset would not be in line for another maintenance dredging for 10 years.

"The town is penny wise and pound foolish," Ritter remarked last week. The townspeople "missed their chance" at winning a place on the Corps' list to blast the rocks in the harbor, a situation the town is "going to have to live with," according to Ritter. "They can add on 10 to 15 per cent to Cohasset's cost each year," he said of the project which would be two-thirds federally funded.

The next course of action, Ritter said, would be to petition the Army Corps of Engineers for a new survey and cost estimate of the harbor's condition. The Corps would make an engineering study of the harbor, Ritter said, and a recommendation to the town once again. But all this might take two or three years and even then the town would have to appropriate their share of the cost of the project — and prices are going up every year, he warned. "It might take an accident or

Opinion Divided On Police Chief Requirements

Diverse views concerning the town's next Chief of Police were heard last Tuesday night at the public hearing sponsored by the Police Chief selection Committee.

Chairman Rev. John Benbow requested both the spoken and written ideas of the 35 residents in attendance. He explained that the committee's concern was for the selection of a future police chief, noting that Police Chief Randolph Feola expects to retire in July 1980.

Most agreed that formal training of some kind should be a consideration for a police chief candidate although there was no consensus on the desirability of formal educational qualifications such as a bachelor's degree in criminal justice or public administration.

The question of law enforcement experience drew more agreement. Some citizens felt that experience on the job, especially as a supervisor of other officers, was more important then education.

Several opinions regarding the selection of a chief from inside or outside the department were presented. There was agreement that no possible source which yielded a good candidate would be ruled out.

There was also substantial agreement that the future chief should reside in the community. One person felt such a requirement would weight the selection process in favor of men on the force, and suggested that if a person from out-of-town were chosen, a residency requirement within one year of employment could be established.

It was unanimously upheld, however, that police chiefs have a 24 hours a day job and have to be available immediately at any hour of the day or night.

Among the personal qualities proposed by those attending the hearing included the following abilities: to communicate well with the department and the community; to relate well to people, especially the young; to be sober, intelligent, and worthy of respect;to exhibit responsiveness honesty, integrity and fairness. One resident suggested the term "gentleperson" to describe the ideal chief of police.

The meeting concluded with a request by some residents to have another opportunity to provide ideas to the committee. The committee agreed to do so, and invited residents to write their concern and expectations in letters, or to attend any of the committee's meetings.

Social Service League To Hold Annual Meeting May 9

The Social Service League of Cohasset, Inc. will hold its Annual Meeting in conjunction with a meeting of the Professional Advisory Committee this year.

The combined meeting will be held Wednesday, May 9, at 8 p.m. in the living room of the Unitarian Parish House.

Carolyn Davis, executive director from the Massachusetts Association of Community Health Agencies (MACHA) will speak on the effect of new Medicare/ Medicaid regulations on our agency.

Articles That Lost

disaster to get them to change their minds," Ritter said.

Article 24 which requested the town to appropriate $625,000 to construct and furnish a new sub fire station on the northeasterly side of Route 3A was easily rejected, 157 to 69. Although John Reardon of the Fire Station Study Committee apologized to the people for bringing such a high price tag before them, Architect James Fitzgerald explained that the escalated figure represented "a very simple station, not an elaborate building.

Reardon also outlined the necessity of more central fire protection for the town which would be accomodated by the Route 3A sub station.

Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink commented recently, "It's a damn shame it didn't go through. Any savings we make in reducing the size of the (planned) building or by finding a new location will be eaten up by inflation."

Chairman of the Fire Station Study Committee Lot Bates agreed that the proposed plan may have been "a little too ambitious" and predicted the committee will discuss the possibility of a smaller station. "It's a matter of maintaining what we have and housing a new pumping engine (which the town should be receiving within the year) that won't fit anywhere

The town purchased the engine last year; it has to have aplace to put it." Bates doesn't think a new fire station is a losing battle thus far.

The water main article, Article 28, which was defeated 305 to 138, requested $65,000 to install a water main on Route 3A in a northerly direction from King Street to 110 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Proponents of this article argued that there wasn't adequate fire protection there, nor sufficient water supplies to attract new businesses along the highway.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said last week that residents who want to be served should agree to pay betterments, a stipulation left out of the article which required a two-thirds vote. Clark had predicted before Town Meeting that if such a clause had been included, the article might have passed with only a majority vote. He said, however, that he expects to see water extended there in the future.

Water Commissioner Chairman William Montouri commented at Town Meeting that a distribution study was about to begin in Cohasset and that extensions would be done on a priority basis. Planning Board Chairman Glenn Pratt spoke for his board, advising against a piecemeal water extension and suggested waiting for the results of the distribution study.

Water Superintendant Edwin Pratt had no comment to make on the matter this week, except to reiterate the fact that the study should be under contract within this week. "I'll sit here until I'm told what to do," Pratt said.

Another big change for the town that wasn't meant to be appeared in Article 32, which asked the town to reduce the size of the School Committee from six to five members. Proponents of the article list reasons for the change such as eliminating tie votes bettering the committee's efficiency and generally improving school board operations.

One proponent said this week that the issue is not over and predicted that the Government Structure Study Committee, who recommended the reduction at Town Meeting, will continue to seek streamlining of town boards. "Change comes very hard," said the proponent and ex-school committee member, who still feels that tie votes are discouraging and hamper the proper functioning of the board. As for the argument that six members can more easily carry the board's load of work, this proponent said that inordinate overloads have been brought upon the members themselves, most unnecessarily.

Article 35, the sewer treatment plant article, which when defeated prohibited a vote from being taken on Article 36, marked the demise of the next phase of consideration of plans and specifications for the facility.

At Town Meeting spokesman Sewer Commissioner John Hobbs enumerated the reasons and needs for a new sewer treatment facility. He noted the numerous sewer studies that have been made throughout the century in Cohasset, all pointing toward positive sewer action. He outlined what his board found to be the best solution for the town, the proposed site and plan devised by Metcalf and Eddy. This plant would alleviate the overload of the present plant and would improve the quality of effluent which is currently being discharged.

Hobbs stated last week that the town may now be faced with the sewer alternative the state recommends, possibly bearing the brunt of the costs. (Cohasset's share of the $12.7 Metcalf and Eddy project would have been $3.9; the remainder of the funds would have come from federal and state agencies.) The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has issued Cohasset a schedule by which the town must expand sewage treatment facilities and extend outfall in the harbor.

Hobbs said he was encouraged to see that the vote was as affirmative as it was (the vote was 133 to 246) and feels that the Board of Water and Sewer Commissioners will have to continue to stress the project's importance.

"The subject will have another day," Hobbs said, although he couldn't say when that time might be. "Big Brother won't let us forget it," he said. He added that in a year there will be a separate Board of Sewer Commissioners and that that would put a different light on things.

Teachers Spokesman Urges Support Of Taxbreaker Bill

John Leary, Jr., president of the Cohasset Teachers Association this week urged all taxpayers to support the Taxbraker legislation now before the Massachusetts Legislature. Taxbraker would raise an additional $351 million in revenue.

Taxbraker, (H2476) would guarantee property tax reductions of 20% for more than two-thirds of all Massachusetts homeowners, and reductions of 10 to 19% for the remainder. It would also pass along reductions to renters.

"The main thing about Taxbraker is that it would guarantee property tax reductions far in excess of Governor King's tax cap proposal, and with no loss of local services," said Jack.

Taxbraker would accomplish that goal by closing two major tax loopholes now existing in Massachusetts. First, it would raise $311 million by imposing a 7.5 percent excise tax on professional services that are currently untaxed, and seldom used by middle and low-income taxpayers, such as engineering, accounting and legal fees; stockbrokers fees; interior designers fees; and memberships in country clubs.

Secondly, Taxbraker would raise an additional $40 million through a 1/8% tax on commercial bank assets. Commercial banks are private banks that mainly lend money to corporations. Until recently, only mutual banks were taxed at 1/8%, but Congress has passed legislation allowing for such a tax to be imposed on commercial bank assets.

Leary explained that Taxbraker, which is supported by a broad coalition of thirty-two (32) citizen, senior citizen, taxpayer, and labor groups would actually help the industrial growth climate in Massachusetts, since it would also guarantee a 10% cut in industrial property taxes. Commercial property taxes and open space land taxes would remain the "Taxpayers must be aware of a recent Massachusetts Supreme Court decision that threatens the Classification Amendment passed by a two-to-one margin last fall," added Mr. Leary.

In Tregor vs. Boards of Assessors of Boston, the state high court ruled that commercial property owners could use individual abatements to achieve the same effects 100% revaluation would have accomplished: they could use such abatements to lower their assessment and tax level to the lowest level, that of the private homeowner.

"Tregor means that despite the overwhelming mandate of the voters last fall, the effects of 100% revaluation, which was defeated, would be passed on: hundreds of millions of dollars in taxes would be shifted through these abatements, back onto local property taxpayers. Only the Taxbraker can ensure that such a process does not occur. By making Taxbraker law, and closing the loopholes it promises to close, an equitable means of property tax reform will be achieved, which will guarantee property tax cuts with no loss in services," said Mr. Leary.

"Taxbraker is the only tax reform legislation that will achieve those dual objectives. Governor King's cap would cut taxes by only 7%, and result in massive reductions in services. We're urging all responsible people to support Taxbraker by communicating their support to their legislators."

Guns For Auxiliaries

If you were an armed felon (of the type that sometimes frequents Cohasset), would you take time to inspect the arm patch of a policeman, trying to determine whether he was an auxiliary police officer or a regular member of the force?

Civil Defense Director Lester Hiltz, head of the auxiliary police, doesn't think so, nor do two out of three selectmen. Nor, for that matter does Police Chief Randolph Feola. They support the auxiliary police's carrying of firearms.

"They'd (criminals) as soon shoot you as look at you," said Hiltz at a Selectmen's meeting last week. His arguments are sufficiently convincing to persuade the Mariner (although with reluctance) that auxiliary police are entitled to the same protection afforded regular officers.

Auxiliary Sgt. Yokum said he has often patrolled the Common or the Village when he's been summoned to join a regular police officer on an emergency. Why, in such cases should one officer be armed and the other not?

Selectman Arthur Clark observed that he has never been aware of any gun abuse by auxiliary police. Moreover, he's found them to be a well-trained group.

Chief Feola commented this week that auxiliary officers are indeed well trained. All officers have completed a four-week police combat training course that's registered and approved by the National Rifle Association police qualification program.

An auxiliary officer couldn't carry a gun without passing the training program. Permission from the chief of police is also a requirement before a gun permit is issued.

Chief Feola finds no problem with allowing the auxiliary force to carry guns. He is the expert in this area and as Cohasset's chief law enforcement officer, we trust his judgement.

At the same time, we wonder when the gun-toting parade will end. Are meter maids next?

Amen To Circle ...

To the Editor:

I just received my copy of this week's feature article on the Circle of Gold.

The only comment I have to make is AMEN!!! I am so happy that finally someone has printed the absolute truth and personal feelings of so many people in town.

A lot of people are now realizing this is an obsession with some men and women and are just plain sick and tired of these crazy "circles."

I also want to thank you for the Page 1 feature on the RIDE-A-BIKE on Sunday.

To the Editor:

Congratulations to Judy Epstein on her fine article on the "Circle of Gold." If this item has angered some folks, as I have heard it has, then they must be the ones to gain most from this "scheme."

I wish to thank her and the Mariner for your honest coverage of Cohasset events.

It is wonderful to read Cohasset news which is accurate and to the point.

Continued success to you and the rest of the staff.

CIVIL DEFENSE EXERCISE

Cohasset will take part in a state-wide Civil Defense mobilization operation called 'Beaufort 79' on June 9 from 9 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. All public works department heads will take part in the simulated natural disaster exercises radioed in to the town. The town will work out problems and plans as though a disaster were really happening. The general public will not be involved.

Civil Defense Director Lester Hiltz said that Cohasset is in need of an underground emergency operating facility. The building to be used as headquarters during the exercises will probably be at the old Water Department building on Elm Street, Hiltz said.

HEAD MEETING

An all town department head meeting will be held in the Town Hall auditorium on Thursday May 24.

DREDGING AWARDED

A $5,400 dredging contract was awarded to Julian Construction Company for maintenance work at Government Island pier. The project is expected to be completed within six days.

FREQUENCY NEEDED

Joe McCool, a representative of Motorola, informed Selectmen last week that the old radio police equipment that will be handed down for use by other departments will require a local government frequency. New police radios for purposes of mutual aid with Plymouth County are expected in approximately three months, McCool said.

He is requesting a frequency causing the least interference with other users on local government frequency.

JURORS SELECTED

Five jurors were selected to serve in civil and criminal cases at Dedham Superior Court: Paul Carlson of Old Coach Road, Robert Jordan of Atlantic Avenue, Peter Smith of Fisher Road, Peter Tague of Atlantic Avenue and William Smart of Nichols Road.

STATUS QUESTIONED

Selectmen have forwarded to Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter, the question whether to remove the municipal employee status that was given to many town board members by a former board of selectmen in 1962. Selectman Arthur Clark said he would like to know the ramifications of removing this status.

INSPECTORS NAMED

Building Inspector James Litchfield has appointed Lawrence Mitchell as the Plumbing and Gas Inspector and Robert Rotchford as assistant Plumbing/Gas Inspector.

Plumbing and gas inspection fees now are: $10 for gas or plumbing inspection; $15 for dual gas and plumbing inspection; $10 for gas water heater inspection; and $15 for a call back.

CS LIST CHANGES

The most current Civil Service list sent last week to the Selectmen's office include the names of Paul Rooney, Robert Jackson and Herbert Williams, respectively. These men are all on the permanent intermittent list in Cohasset; they have been invited to attend the next Selectmen's meeting.

POSTS REMOVED

Highway Superintendent Harold Litchfield has informed Selectmen that people have been driving over and breaking off the cement posts in the Sandy Beach parking lot. He recommended that the remainder of the posts be removed.

LITTER INSPECTED

At the suggestion of Selectman Rocco Laugelle, Fire Chief Piepenbrink will be apprised of the paper littered behind the shopping cneters on Route 3A.

BREAKWATER REPAIRS

Scituate has advertised for construction bids to repair the Cohasset harbor breakwater that lies in Scituate waters, Cohasset wants to be advised, Selectman Arthur Clark said, on the exact nature of construction efforts, particularly if they are to occur during the summer.

made," he said.

Of the teachers recommended for reappointment, all but Charles Stockbridge, a fourth grade teacher at the Deer Hill School, received approval from the Committee.

Stockbridge received a 3-3 or negative vote for reappointment.

Guidance Director Jack Leary urged the Committee to reconsider the vote on Stockbridge. "For the Superintendent to make this recommendation he must feel Mr. Stockbridge is an excellent teacher. Mr. Ekberg (the principal of the Deer Hill School) must feel this way, too, to pass along the recommendation to the Super--intendent."

Leary added that he didn't want a hidden rationale that was not a part of the official evaluation process to play a part in the consideration of Stockbridge's appointment.

Committee member Kornet agreed, emphasizing an immediate reconsideration of the appointment, to alleviate the anxiety that would be caused Stockbridge in the ensuing weeks if reconsideration were postponed.

There was considerable debate over the legality of further discussing Stockbridge's appointment. It was finally voted to reconsider the vote at the next May 14 meeting, which would allow Stockbridge ample notification of the meeting, and to attend, with counsel if he wished.

Teachers re-appointed were: Joseph Osgood School — Jane Corey and Doreen Flynn; Deer Hill School — Kathleen Fox, Theresa Lynch and Elizabeth Cisneros; Jr./Sr. High School — Joseph Bouchard, Curt Reever, Gregory Jones, Alton Flynn, Brian Marks and Anthony Hyde.

Department chairman receiving Committee approval were: Joseph Becker, Deer Hill Science Department; Sam Erbe, High School Science Department; Paul Narkowicz, Foreign Languages; Marilyn Watson, Director of Physical Education.

Pros and Cons Of Nuclear Power May 10 Topic

A discussion of the pros and cons of nuclear power will be held Thursday, May 10 at the Unitarian Parish House, Cohasset, at 8 p.m.

Everyone interested in this vital and timely subject is invited to attend the meeting which is being sponsored by the Cohasset Republican Town Committee.

Skippers Notch First Baseball Victory

Rain put a damper on the schedule at the end of the previous week inactiviting the Cohasset High baseball varsity. But it may have been just what the Skippers needed because they returned to action last Monday and snapped their four-game losing streak with their first win of the season via a 9-7 decision over Holbrook.

"Maybe," observed Coach Ev Door in the wake, "we've turned things around a little. At least, the club has started hitting."

The Bulldogs, however, broke out of the starting gate first with two runs in the opening inning. The Skippers mustered only one in their half to trail, 2-1. They fell further behind as Holbrook got two more runs in the second stanza.

But Cohasset broke out in the next inning with a five-run rally to go in front, 5-3.

Although Holbrook fought back to tie the score at five-all, the Skippers moved in front again, 7-5, then added two more in the fourth and were able to hand on despite a two-run sixth inning flurry by Holbrook.

Cohasset's winning runs came on two runs produced by five singles.

Bob Russell walked to start the rally, followed by successive singles by Bill Kurtz, Matt Brown, Bruce Maynard, Pat Plante and Jim Sullivan.

Dorr's charges improved their record on the season to 4-1.

Skippers Win 4 Out Of 4

Behind the seven-hit pitching of Diane Maloney, Cohasset's softball team trounced Norwell last week, 10-2.

Maloney struck out three in leading the Skippers to their fourth win in four starts.

Gina Froil and Jody Sandblom hit back-to-back home runs in a six run second inning uprising with Sandblom knocking in three runs. Lindsay Gilmore came up with a triple in the rally.

Girl Runners Sunk By Wave

Cohasset's girls tracksters figured in the 32nd straight Abington meet win last week as the Skippers bowed to the Green Wave, 76-42.

Cohasset points came on:

Firsts: Mahoney, mile; Clinton, two mile; 440 relay.

Seconds: Turner, 100; Carroll, 220; Parziale, 440; Donodini, 880; Gurnis, -mile; Turner, low hurdles; Parziale, long jump.

Thirds: O'Brien, 220; O'Brien, long jump.

Trackmen Whip Holbrook

Cohasset track forces crushed Holbrook, 112-33, last week.

John Howley, Brian Conlin and Jeff Calhoun each won two events to pace the romp. Howley won the 220 and long jump, Calhoun the mile and triple jump and Conlin the discus and shotput.

Scott Muir won the high hurdles and took second in the long jump.

Cohasset's other points came on firsts by Raffa, 100; Sawicki, 880; Benbow, two-mile; Dillon, low hurdles, the mile and 440 relay teams, Taylor, high jump and Dillon, pole vault.

Skipper seconds were posted by Howley, 100; Langford, 880; Cahill, mile; Mc Nab, two-mile; Salerno, low hurdles; Duffy, high hurdles; Muir, long jump; Duffy, high jump, Duffy, triple jump, Collins, pole vault and Boyd, javelin.

Third place CHS points were provided by Taylor, 220; Duffy 440; Carney, mile; Glassele, two mile; Dillon, long jump; Duffy, triple jump; Taylor, discus and Raffa, javelin.

Spring Fashion Look Really Shakes Status Quo

By Kathleen Pool

The changes in fashion this spring are far from subtle; they are downright dramatic. After a season of ballooning fullness and muted shades, body revealing slimness and bright colors have shaken the style status quo.

The blouson, finally becoming accepted, has been sadly deflated, if not altogether banished. It is being replaced by a narrow silhouette that will make "body consciousness" a phrase no longer confined to the gym and leotard set. Dresses with fitted and belted waistlines, plunging vee necklines, straight, tight skirts, and leg revealing slits could present a shock to the body that has comfortably been hiding out in the previous season's fullness!

Skirts have also zoomed into a new narrow shape with racey high slits. Careful attention is paid to detailing, and many come with their own waist accenting belt. Some are available with buttons completely up the front or side, which allows the wearer to create her own slit to suit her current whim or discretion.

Jean skirts are a fun and prevelant item this spring. Making a strong fashion statement of their own, these practical garments smartly reflect the current slim look. Choose a very narrow straight jean skirt with a slit up the front, back, or both; a slightly fuller wrap; or a narrow button-up-the-front version. In any case, you'll have a garment with many miles of wear and fashion awareness.

This season's brilliant colors are perhaps the most positive and exhilarating change. To emphasize the break away from last year's somber tones, bright greens, blues, and reds are often being contrasted with black. It's a shift from the understated "smart" colors of the previous seasons, to colors with a forcible, glad-to-be-alive feeling! There are a lot of these bold, kicky colors to add sparkle to you and your spring wardrobe.

The degree of fashion change this season is truly spectacular. The styles are refreshing, vibrant, and daring. Try adding some to your wardrobe and enjoy the excitement!

CHS Band To Participate In N.H. Music Festival

More than 80 high school bands and choirs from throughout New England, New York and New Jersey will participate in the Second Annual "Brickyard Mountain High School Music Festival" at Laconia, N.H. this spring.

Among those competing will be the Cohasset High School Concert Band under the direction of Anthony Hyde. Their way to the Festival has been paved with a series of fund-raising events throughout the Fall/Winter and Spring. These events included selling refreshments at the home football games, raffle sales, garage sales, etc.

However, their most recent and successful event was a joint concert given at the school which included the jazz ensemble and the drama theater. Members sold tickets to "Patrons of the Arts" who made a large and very responsive audience. The band played the program they will do at the festival and received long and enthusiastic applause for their fine performance. In all, more than $450 was realized including refreshments sold by the band parents during intermission.

The band now is setting it's sights on the performance aspects of the festival. Long and hard rehearsals should reap fine results in the competition, the first of it's kind for the concert band. However, excellent recreational and social activities will also be part of the trip. Trophies and awards totaling more than $7000 will be presented to this year's winner and runner-up bands in each category of competition. Cohasset will be entered in the concert band class "C". In all more than 40 students and chaperones will be making the trip. They will depart on May 8th and will return on the following night.

$55,000 Available For Restoration Project

Officialdom Weighs Sandy Beach Money

STRANGE SPECIES? Not really! It's a Killdeer, a variety of sandpiper. This one laid its nest in a rocky area behind the high school.
[Greg Derr photo]

By Judith Epstein

Cohasset has $55,000 in federal disaster assistance funds to use on a sand restoration project at Sandy Beach. That is, if the money is not returned and if it is ascertained that the beach is in need of the proposed work.

Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark expressed dismay at the Conservation Commission meeting this week that he may have to return the funds if they are not used by August.

Clark felt that cooperation between the Sandy Beach Association and the Conservation Commission was lacking in mobilizing the project before the summer and beach season arrived.

Clark explained that after the 1978 Blizzard, he and engineers from the Army Corps of Engineers and from the Division of Waterways examined the beach. An assessment of $55,000 was made in the application to the Federal disaster assistance administration for the restoration of Sandy Beach as a barrier beach in Cohasset.

It was at first denied. But an appeal was successful and the money became available last fall.

Clark then gathered samples of sand from Sandy Beach, pit sand and washed concrete sand from Marshfield Sand and Gravel and submitted them to the Conservation Commission and the Sandy Beach Association for approval.

Clark also tried to contact these groups to accompany him and an engineer from the State Department of Environmental Quality Engineers (DEQE) to observe the results of beach restoration at Rexhame Beach in Marshfield. Clark said he received little or no response to his overtures in initiating the project.

The winter was not the time to start the project, he said, because another devastating storm could have disrupted the beach's sand again. He claimed that time has now run out for the project to be completed — considering the amount of time it takes for filing of plans, hearings, advertising for bids and construction — before residents are using the beach.

Conservation Commission Chairman Jack Hubbard responded this week to Clark's concerns. Hubbard stood firm in his refusal to short-circuit the process of law that governs activities within 100 feet of the ocean. He explained that it was the place of the Conservation Commission to study an applicant's notice of intent, to hold a hearing and to issue an order of conditions as a result of the hearing.

Midge Control For Straits Pond

Midge control for Straits Pond is the concern of many Hull and Cohasset residents this week as the flies have hatched and are already creating a nuisance.

Hull Executive Secretary Bernard Duffy said spraying for midges will begin at the end of the week and will continue into next week.

Interdisciplinary Environmental Planning (IEP), the firm selected to conduct the joint Straits Pond eutrophication and aquatic vegetation control study between Hull and Cohasset, informed the towns that midge-killing chemicals, but not weed-killing ones, could be applied to the pond this year.

IEP, funded by equal appropriations from both towns, will make formal applications with Coastal Zone Management, the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering and the Metropolitan Area Planning Council for larger scale projects to solve the pond's problems.

Meet Frank England, Outspoken Advisor

Ask for leadership, management and teaching capabilities, and Frank England will show you how to get them while demonstrating them himself.

Frank England, second term School Committee member, can spot a wasted penny, an incompetence, laziness and just about any other shortcoming a mile off. That makes him the man people love to grouse about, but also the man people respect and listen to.

Be it the Army, insurance of the school department — the three career hats England wears with expertise — his motto 'Run a Tight Ship' holds true for all. It was through these three avenues England learned about the art of education, although he's never been a public school educator, himself.

He has been an outspoken School Committee member from the start. Each year he brings back to the Committee projects he has worked on single-handed, evaluation instruments, ways in which classes can be consolidated and methods by which teachers could improve efficiency by taking on more than one discipline. All of his suggestions point toward the necessity for good management.

"The people at the top set the rules," England said, "which should permeate down through the organization." Supervision is 10% telling people what to do and 90% seeing that they do it, England says when referring to any position of authority, and particularly the administration of the Cohasset school department.

"We (the School Committee) are only in an advisory position. You can never change anything. You can observe. You can set policy." The rest, he said, is up to the superintendent, principals, heads of departments and business manager.

According to England, teachers make the difference in the classroom. A recent HUD study, he said, relates that class size, from 13 to 34 children in a classroom, makes very little difference in the quality of education students receive. "It depends on the teachers," England said. "If there are more kids, teachers should extend themselves a little."

Garden Clubs 'Paint' Town Beautiful

By Judith Epstein

Just walking down a Cohasset street can take your breath away. Forsythias, cherry blossoms, manicured gardens and lawns; all make a lush picture-puzzle of the colors of springtime. And the people who help Cohasset retain this horticultural excellence can be found in the town's three garden clubs.

The largest garden club in Cohasset is the Community Garden Club, now boasting 255 members, some of whom also come from Scituate, Marshfield and Hingham. In the late 1950's the club originated with the Community Center but now it is an autonomous group.

President of the club, Mrs. Robert Sturdy, outlined membership responsibility. Members are admitted twice a year in September and April after being sponsored by two members. Although the club is at the limit for membership now, Mrs. Sturdy said, there is some turnover that leaves a few openings available each year. Meetings are held once a month at St.

More Study Needed On Beach Restoration Project

Allen Weisenfluh, president of the Sandy Beach Association, stated Tuesday morning that the trustees of the beach "will have to do more homework" concerning a sand restoration project slated for Sandy Beach.

The private association's annual meeting was held Monday night to discuss the matter. Selectman Arthur Clark was invited to the meeting to discuss the fate of the $55,000 disaster assistance money slated for new sand at the beach.

As a result, Weisenfluh said the association will request that Clark officially ask for a time waiver for the grant until the fall. The money would otherwise have to be returned if unused by August. This time delay would enable the association to file a notice of intent with the Conservation Commission, to advertise for construction and to receive whatever legal counsel is needed.

"The funds can only be used for sand," Weisenfluh said. "It's difficult to get homogeneous sand. We have to do more research with environmental experts."

He would like a legal opinion from town counsel, he said, and written permission from the federal agency dispensing the funds for the job to verify the association's right to use the money for the privately-run Cohasset beach.

"The town is growing, although modestly," Weisenfluh said. "On the best of days the beach is crowded." He emphasized that it was "of paramount interest to us" that the beach remain a town beach and expressed reluctance to use federal money if doing so meant the beach would become entirely public.

Clark procured money for Sandy Beach because it is a coastal barrier beach and necessary to the town for flood control and storm damage prevention. Clark said because the town refurbishes a barrier beach doesn't mean the town has to own the property.

Weisenfluh also questioned, as did the Conservation Commission, the necessity of the sand replacement, the reason he gave for not having moved on the project when funds were received last fall. "Last June the beach was beautiful. The sea brought back most of the sand," he said. More sand that had been pushed across Atlantic Avenue was simply redumped and leveled out on the beach, he said.

"In no way did we need a restoration project last year, so we waited until this winter was through." Weisenfluh concluded with a final query as to whether Sandy Beach needs federal money at all.

Mom, Nancy Kinchla, fills in for dad at community center as she watches their son John put finishing touches on snake he is painting.

Restoration

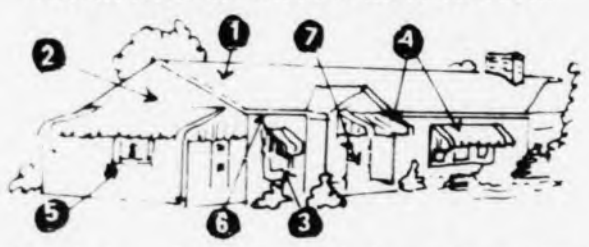
In Hubbard's opinion Clark, as the appointed agent for disaster assistance applications, should have submitted plans for the beach restoration himself or seen to it that the Sandy Beach Association, as trustees of the beach, assumed responsibility for filing a notice of intent when the town received the money.



Hubbard also expressed doubts about the restoration project in general. He questioned whether the beach needed new sand at all, and whether any damage done to the beach was necessarily done during the blizzard.

He explained that replacement of the wrong kind of sand could discolor the water, wash out to sea and be uncomfortable to sit on. Sand from a sand pit could interfere with normal marine activity, Hubbard added.

A point especially queried by the Conservation Commission as a whole was if it was within the legal jurisdiction of the Town to allow the Sandy Beach Association, a private organization, to use the Federal disaster assistance money procured by the town.

Clark reiterated his reasoning for applying for the grant by explaining that Sandy Beach is a barrier beach in the town of Cohasset and that the beach needn't be owned by the town to qualify for Federal funds.

Garden Clubs

Stephen's Church and members are obliged to attend, she said. In addition, every member has to work at least 10 hours a year on a community project sponsored by the club.

A member of the Federation of Garden Clubs, the Community Garden Club is rightfully named. Their projects are community based. One present project is the designing and landscaping of the grounds around the Lothrop House, the house on Summer Street presently undergoing conversion into a period museum by the Cohasset Historical Society. Gardens will be planted there by the club, as well, in keeping with the age of the house.

A continuing project is maintain the grounds with their old alliance, the Community Center — replacing shrubs, mowing and weeding.

Meeting programs cover a wide range of topics. Speakers are invited or members themselves conduct seminars on landscape design, planting and seeding, flower arranging, and plant identification. Informal house tours are sometimes included in activities. Fund raising activities are usually limited to one per year: some of those recent successes include the Christmas House Tour, the Antique Sale, and the publication of a cookbook written by members.

Contributions from the club's funds are made to the Society, Arnold Arboretum, Wildflower Society, and more locally to the Black Pond Reservation, World's End and Whitney Woods. This year the Community Garden Club didn't have a display at the New England Flower Show, another project made possible by fundraising proceeds, but in past years the club has made a fine showing in Boston.

The club sends a local girl to Girl Scout camp each summer, and also presents a scholarship to a high school student who plans to continue study in any area of horticulture, forestry or landscape design.

The Junior Garden Club is the younger appendage of the Community Garden Club. They are children of garden club members who are eager to garden. They contribute their gardening talents to club projects, as well as exhibits to meetings and shows.

"All you need is interest," Mrs. Sturdy said of garden club membership in general. "It doesn't mean you have to have a green thumb or be a flower arranger."

COHASSET GARDEN CLUB

Mrs. Eli Manchester, president of the Cohasset Garden Club which was founded in 1929, shares Mrs. Sturdy's philosophy about gardening. "You have to have a consuming interest in gardening," she said. "If you join a garden club, you basically like to get out and weed. You have to like it."

Mrs. Manchester also emphazied the club's preoccupation with conservation. Of the clubs 53 members, the cap on membership as set forth by their membership in the Garden Club of America, Mrs. Manchester said that all are required to participate in activities and that all are ardent gardeners, with an eye toward preservation and the environment. The club is also in the Federation of Garden Clubs.

Like the Community Garden Club, the Cohasset Garden Club is affiliated with the town's Historical Society, through maintenance of the gardens around the Society's three museums on Elm Street.

A two-year project has recently been completed by the club — a major landscaping job in the front of the Joseph Osgood School.

An annual fundraiser is their plant/food/container sale held in the lot between Curtis Compact and the Corner Market.

The club meets eight times a year, during the warm months of March through October. Topics discussed at the past year's meetings included landscaping, conservation, flower arranging and horticulture. There were also field trips to Wampatuck State Park and to the Flower Show in Boston.

Members hold in-club competitions, exhibiting what they've grown — be it vegetables or flowers — and they are judged by area judges. And this year the Cohasset Garden Club collectively received the Beacon Hill Garden Club Cup for their charming lily garden on display at the Flower Show.

Mrs. Manchester said the club has a project in the Boston show every three or four years; she feels that by submitting an exhibit, the club is also representing Cohasset and thereby doing the town a service.

"It's not all cocktails and luncheons, anymore," she said. "We try to remain service oriented. Members are more interested in conservation because the area is growing so fast and because of the general growing of conservation awareness nationwide."

Landscaping, for instance, Mrs. Manchester said, is regarded now as a type of insulation for homes. The club's workshops on woodstoves, pruning for better growth of vegetation, and interest in solar energy all point toward their ecology-mindedness.

Donations are made to many organizations, as well, including the Manomet Bird Observatory, the North and South River Watershed Association, the Wildflower Society, and the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, to name a few.

AMATEUR CLUB

The Amateur Garden Club, newly headed by Mrs. James Shea, although not a member of a garden is a small and venerated organization founded in 1939. Mrs. Shea emphaszied that the 30 member club is a "low-key" group.

"We just do what we want to do," she said, the only stipulation being that members must reside in Cohasset. The club's objective is to help each other become better gardeners.

The club meets once a month at members' homes where committees on membership (members are inducted once a year), programs, publicity, conservation and horticulture, and nursing homes, report on their activities and coming events. This year the club has numerous lectures on birds, florists, and beekeeping.

A particular interest of the Amateur Garden Club is in serving the Ripley Road Nursing home. This year the club made flower boxes for the home and sponsored teas for the residents there.

A fundraising plant sale every May helps to comprise their small budget, which is spent largely in donations to the same associations and organizations made by the other clubs.

Field trips to Gore Place in Waltham, a federal house, complete with herb garden and orchard and an outing to the Cape are on the agenda of activities for the upcoming summer season.

"Members are very active in their own yards," Mrs. Shea said. "They have a lot of experience and a lot to teach other members."

The Council of Garden Clubs is a liaison council designed to coordinate the activities of the three garden clubs. Meetings are comprised of the conservation chairmen and the presidents of each club, and chairmanship, currently held by Mrs. Sturdy for the Community Garden Club, rotates between clubs every few years. The Council is responsible for the upkeep and planting of the Veterans Memorial Park that overlooks the harbor. They are currently planning a Cohasset Litter Day program, but have not yet decided a definitive date for the cleanup project.

A town as lovely as Cohasset didn't get that way by accident. Although most of the club's activities mentioned here involved gardening around a publicly-viewed building, the grounds of private homes bespeak the silent, unapplauded, and devoted gardening of those who practice their expertise in their own backyards, and who contribute to the beauty of the town.

One Town's Police Car A Dilemma To Others

Commentary

By Bucky Yardume

Here are pertinent arguments on both sides of a current Norwell Police Department car issue evolving again from inflation which have overtones noteworthy for Cohasset or any area towns.

From where police sit, savings realized from going to smaller cars or even smaller engines will be lost, possibly even exceeded by increased maintenance expenses.

While it's gone unsaid, they probably also feel pursuit of fugitives in fast cars in anything but 'souper' cruisers would be like trying to catch a Formula I bomb with a two-wheeled tricycle.

From the viewpoint of town administrators, however, both the escalated cost of purchasing new cars and price of gas for thirsty monster cars — there's that spectre again — must be taken into consideration.

And ey p nt justifiably to other cc mur ies which have gone to smal r police cars. Some even ave gone to compact but t ugh European gas misers.

Norwell, like any small community, can't take advantage of saving money on buying the vehicles in quantity and is limited to only one or two bidders because it buys only one or at most two cars at a time.

The state has a Collective Purchasing Program which allows political subdivisions to make purchases together to reduce overall costs and save taxpayer bucks. But police cars aren't among the categories recently listed by MAPC (Metropolitan Area Planning Council). Maybe they'll get around to it yet.

In the meantime, it might come to the same thing if communities helped themselves by taking the regional approach in buying cruisers to benefit from a better deal.

The MDP did just that recently in qualifying along with Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham and Hull for a Federal grant for a unified police communication system.

Of course, with police cars, it isn't quite so simple to go regional.

Appropriations depend on Town Meeting vote, and Town Meetings in communities don't coincide.

Since, however, turnover in cruisers is a pretty routine procedure it would seem neighbor communities could work out something viable.

T.M. voters should be agreeable. After all, it's in their money.

Around Town Hall

INTERVIEWS HELD

Last week Selectmen interviewed Paul Rooney, Robert Jackson and Robert Williams for the position of patrolman with the Police Department.

Rooney, highest scorer on a Civil Service test, requested his interview be conducted in executive session. He is a patrolman in Yarmouth and has State Police training and a B.S. degree in sociology.

Jackson lives on Ash Street and received an 87 on the exam. He will graduate this spring from Northeastern University with a bachelor's degree in law enforcement. He already holds a B.A. in political science and has worked toward a master's degree in law enforcement. Jackson said he has completed EMT and police pistol courses. He works at Osco Drug in Dorchester.

The third candidate for the post, Robert Williams of North Main Street, is part-time director of an alcoholism program in Boston. Williams received an 86 on the test. He plans to finish work on a doctorate in humanistic behavior studies at Boston University. Williams has been an intermittent officer in Cohasset.

VAULTS OKAYED

State Public Records Analyst Michael Haire told Selectmen last week that upgrading the four existing vaults in Town Hall with the required specifications for safes and vaults would be acceptable.

"Such a course of action would be acceptable to this office provided that four vaults afforded adequate storage space for the town's records," Haire said.

Upgrading the existing vaults may be a temporary expedient, he explained, and urged careful consideration of the future generation of records by the town and the space necessary for their storage.

Furthermore, Haire noted that four-hour fire ratings for vault doors are quoted in the pamphlet proposing renovation for the Town Hall.

"We should like to point out that any enclosure which is upgraded must conform to the six-hour rating required. Should upgrading these vaults to six-hour ratings prove infeasible , then our initial requirement of a six-hour central repository must be fulfilled.

Haire noted that at least three doors must remain open during business hours for access and that this would curb the effectiveness of environmental control for records.

"For these reasons," he concluded, "in terms of cost-effectiveness, this office is of the opinion that a central vault facility constructed in accordance with the requirements would provide optimum in security and environment for the long-term storage of records."

Girls Sports Just As Important

Letters

To the Editor:

As a CHS student, I enjoy reading your newspaper because of its extensive local coverage. I think your photographs of athletic events are outstanding.

I am, however, dissatisfied with your coverage and subsequent articles on girls' athletic events. Case in point is this week's treatment of spring sports. You had an inside headline and a quarter-of-a-page article about the baseball team's first victory.

On the same page, you devoted only one paragraph to the softball team which is tied for first place in the league. I think girls' sports are just as important as boys' sports and should receive the same attention, especially when the girls' softball team is doing so very well.

Frank England

"We are trying to give kids a quality education at reasonable costs. Are we using personnel as cost-effectively as possible?" he asked. England suggested taking a closer look at middle management and doesn't see proper supervision in some areas. He further suggests teacher qualify themselves in two disciplines to have greater flexibility in their teaching assignments.

England reiterates these beliefs annually, he said, because he realizes it takes time to get things done.

His main gripe is that many high school classes have enrollments of 10 and under. "I don't want to abolish classes under 10," he said, "I just wanted them to get permission to hold them."

Although he agreed he "couldn't complain" about the 1.99 increase in the 1979-80 school budget, he said, "We could do a lot better. There's a myth in American education that if you throw in more money the better it will be. It needs money, true, but it needs more management."

He said he'd have liked to have been voted chairman of the school board. As it was, he broke the stalemate and cast his vote for Jack Langmaid as chairman at the reorganizational meeting. He was voted vice-chairman unanimously.

"It's hard to say why I voted for Jack," England commented. "I wanted to avoid a conflict. A lot of people think I'm hard-nosed and inflexible. I'm not. I'm objective, not subjective."

As for the matter of tie votes and reducing Committee size, England doesn't see a problem. He likes the idea of a two-thirds majority when votes are taken with a six member committee. "I'd hate to be on a board where everyone agrees," he said. He doesn't regard the amount of time spent on an issue as "time consuming." "If you're elected, you should make a commitment." To England, doing your job is doing whatever it takes to get it done well.

England's 'tight ship' philosophy was generated from his Army career during World War II and in the reserves. He learned a lifelong lesson — that training and education teaches responsibility and preparedness. "You learn responsibility very fast, you acquire leadership qualities very fast," England said of his infantry command as a captain in Africa, Sicily and Italy during the war.

Now retired, England reached the rank of Colonel in the reserves, in which he taught at Fort Benning, Fort Summers, Fort Leavenworth, Fort Knox and finally at the 1037th USAR School in Lowell.

Most of the time, he said, he trained people in combat units. His secondary military occupational specialty (MOS) was as a training officer in plans and operations.

"If you stay in the reserves, you learn how to train leadership, how to be a leader, and the psychology of leadership. They fit hand in hand," England attested.

His college days at Syracuse, sandwiched around the war, were spent majoring in insurance — his full-time occupation since 1947. His job as bond manager for the Boston branch office of Aetna Life and Casualty Company has served as a complement to his analytical and evaluative skills.

"We analyze financial statements of companies and decide if they can do the job. A bond guarantees that a contractor will do a job according to the plans and specifications, and pay his bills — it protects labor and materials," he explained.

What it really comes down to once again, he said, is spending a lot of time studying management ability and deciding whether people know how to do their jobs.

England will be 59 this week, yet looks 10 years younger. He has kept himself fit over the years refereeing lacrosse and soccer for high school and college games around Eastern Massachusetts. "Refereeing is good training for the School Committee," England said jovially, "you're 50 per cent wrong when you make a call."

He's also a member of the State Game Official Commission, the board of directors of the Massachusetts Association of Building Contractors and the New England Construction Education Commission.

England is a no-nonsense, hard-working man. He can seem omninous at times with his statistical expertise and the way he seems to dominate a room when he enters. Yet, he'd be as quick as the next guy to laugh over a joke or to take you out for a beer or to sit around at the Log and Line for a couple of cups of coffee.

The application of weed control chemicals will interfere with IEP's analysis results, they reported. However, the chemicals used to control the midge population will not interfere with the water analysis program. Therefore, IEP recommended the midge control chemical be used as usual.

The actual spraying of midges, however, is a separate matter paid for annually by the towns and conducted by South Shore Mosquito Control. The spraying will commence this week with applications by helicopter and truck atomizers, Duffy said.

Straits Pond problems were outlined at a meeting with concerned Cohasset residents and the Conservation Commission Monday night. Richard MacIntosh of Jerusalem Road said spraying for midges is most effective while chemicals hadn't yet been applied and that flies have hatched and are in the air.

MacIntosh, who was on a citizens advisory committee studying the pond for several years, said midges weren't a problem last year because the 1978 blizzard had brought enough salt water into the pond to effectively disrupt the life cycle of the fly.

He reiterated the belief of many for many years that introducing more salt water to the pond would cut down the midge population. He suggested a pathway to the ocean at Black Rock Beach or at Gun Rock via properly engineered pipelines would be one way of creating a better flow between the fresh water pond and the ocean.

Conservation Commission Chairman John Hubbard countered the suggestion by pointing to similar areas where good salt conditions still have vegetation and pollution problems. He commented that the IEP study should reveal some important data and urged the garnering of marine information on the pond.

Blood Pressure Screening May 19

May is High Blood Pressure Month and the Social Service League of Cohasset will hold a high blood pressure screening clinic saturday, May 19, from 9 to 11 a.m. at the League Office, 83 South Main St. This free clinic is open to residents of all ages.

When high blood pressure is not detected and treated it makes a person susceptible to stroke, heart disease, kidney disease or other disabilities. Treatment on a daily basis often with medication, and sometimes by diet is what is required for high blood pressure.

Some diseases have obvious symptoms, such as a rash or cough that can be treated. High blood pressure is not like that, it usually has no symptoms. The only way to determine if a person has high blood pressure is to have it checked. Take advantage of this clinic and have your blood pressure checked.

Pam Maynard, Olympic Gymnast In Bud

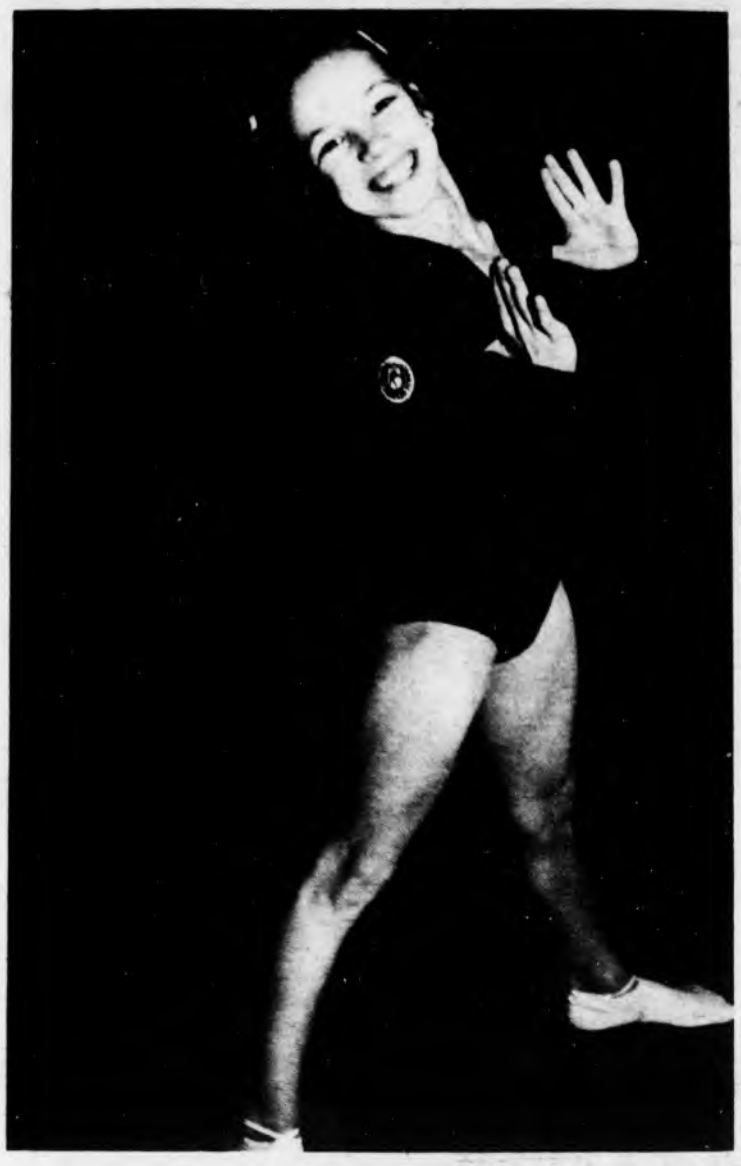
By Joanne Young

If you have ever wondered how a young person becomes an Olympic competitor, this story of one Cohasset ten-year-old tells the tale.

Pamela Maynard is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Maynard of Locust Road. When Pam was seven years old, her father decided that since her sister Peggy played piano, Pam should "do something" too. Because she was so interested in Gymnastics at the Meadowcraft Day Camp in Norwell, that "something" became for her a world class sport.

She was enrolled for three years in the Kathy Corrigan Gymnastic school in Rockland, and advanced so quickly, her parents realized she needed elite training. Mrs. Grossfeld, three times an Olympian and 18 times U.S. National Champion, was so impressed with Pam, she accepted her into the program, and Pam is now part of the cream of America's current young crop of Olympic hopefuls.

Only one out of 100 applicants to this school are accepted. The criteria, according to Mrs. Grossfeld, are a straight, strong back, well-proportioned limbs, flexibility, willingness to learn and accept criticism, and drive.



Each of the 14 girls boarding at the Milford school is an accomplished gymnast in the uppermost, or "elite" class, reserved for international competitors. To understand the awesome extent of Pamela Maynard's talent, you must realize that of the approximately half a million girls training in 10,000 schools and clubs in the United States, there are only about 120 elite gymnasts, and only three places where they can live and train. One is in Oregon, one in Lousiana and the third is Grossfeld's.

Pamela's day begins with a strictly controlled weight-watchers type breakfast. She is in fifth grade classes at St. Mary's School for a morning session, and from 1 to 6 p.m., she works out at the gym. Lunch and dinner are also well-planned meals. For five days a week, this is Pam's schedule. On the weekends she frequently takes part in competitions or exhibitions. Pam was not scheduled to compete when she first entered the Grossfeld school last July, but she needed to see immediate results of her work, and the awards and trophies motivated her.

Pamela qualified in the March 4th meet in New London, Conn.; on March 24th at the State meet in New Britian, Conn., and April 7th at the Regional meet held at Queens College in New York. To qualify, a gymnast must receive 64-68 points, depending on the meet. There are severe eliminating procedures and the number of gymnasts involved becomes very limited.

Pam competes in an event rated by ability and not age, so her sins are all the more spectacular. She is scoring the same points as her 13-year-old classmates. Her excellent scores gave her a chance to go to the Nationals in Penna., where she will compete against the top 40 gymnasts in the U.S. The deterrent to her competing in the 1980 Olympics is her age - she must be 13 years old to qualify.

Pam's home displays her many trophies: the gold medal for the Federation Regional Championships in vaulting, beam and floor exercises; a silver medal for the uneven bars; another gold for all-around winner in four events in the All-New England Regionals; the Anderson Artistic Gymnastic Trophy for the 6th Class Open, and winner of the Conn. State Championships. Her difficult routine includes back walkover layout, two consecutive front aerials, one-handed front and back walkovers, side aerial and handstands.

Pam is so young, she gets lonely for her parents and sisters, Peggy, 12, Martha, 5, Victoria, 2 and her brother John, who is 4. Her mother says: "I miss her so much, too." Pam will celebrate her 12th birthday while she is competing in Florida, so her mother sent her a bathing suit, and will have a party when Pam next comes home.

While in Florida, she will take part in an exhibition at Disney World. It is a poignant combination of loneliness and pride for this young daughter, who will one day make all the sacrifice and hard work into a dream fulfilled.

When Muriel Grossfeld decided to groom Pam, it involved great sacrifice for the Maynards. Every 14 weeks, the family spends a weekend as houseparents in the Milford, Conn. dormitory. Gymnastics is not a heavily-endowed sport in this country. By scoring so high (69.55 points out of a possible 68) in the Regional competition, Pam was awarded a check toward her travel to the sectional meet in Florida on May 4, 5 and 6. The top 40 scores in the Junior division (age 14 and under) will advance to the Nationals in Pennsylvania in June. Cohasset wishes Pam good luck in achieving this next goal.

The Olympic Creed states: The important thing in the Olympic Games is not to win, but to take part. The important thing in life is not the triumph, but the struggle. The essential thing is not to have conquered, but to have fought well. Pamela Maynard and her family embody the true value of this creed in their own lives.

'Ask Beth' At Jr. High

Beth will talk about topics of interest to this age group. She will also answer questions from boxes located in the high school library and the Cohasset Public Library.

the Barnside Tavern

To our friends & patrons

In autumn of 1972, we created an original Tavern at the Assinippi Crossroads to serve you and the community.

With no hint of how to do it and no idea of what would happen, we started. Two barns, a 1760 house, two hundred of the finest kitchen and service personnel, a bucket of tears, a barrel of laughs and six years later we still exist and are getting better by the day.

On the next few pages see what we are now offering and how far we have come in our efforts to serve you.

History of The Barnside Tavern

Early in the 17th Century, not long after the Plymouth Colony was settled by the Pilgrims, the new Americans branched out exploring their new land. They followed paths of the Indians, journeying north, south, and west. One of these paths, later known as Plymouth and Bay Path, is the oldest road in Massachusetts. At a crossroad on that path, known by the Indians as Hassenippi (Rocky Water), is where Thomas Simmons eventually built his house and barn in 1781. The area is now the junction of Routes 123 & 53 and is still referred to as Assinippi.

In the Autumn of 1972, George & Mary Williams, with the help of friends and neighbors built a Tavern. They converted The Simmons Barn, then, a year later moved his house and connected it to the Barn. Throughout the renovation they kept the original shape, using all the old wood and timber while adding many interesting items to make their Tavern much the way it would have been in the 18th Century. They recreated a place and time in 1700 where a Traveller, a days ride from Plymouth to Boston, might stop to enjoy a good healthy meal, learn the news of the day, meet friends, rest from the troubles of the time and enlighten himself with an Ale or Cup of Grog in the friendly surroundings.

The Williams' used glass in the doors that had been originally in the ladies room of the Old Quincy Railroad Dept. The leaded glass windows were salvaged from a Turkish Bath on Clarendon Street in Boston and the slate is from the Quincy Library. Jugs, mirrors, wheelbarrows and many hours of labor were donated by friends. The House & Barn floors are original, just sanded and spruced up. The ell of the old house was moved to the opposite side of the Barn to make a kitchen. Lighting fixtures are of tern — half pewter, half tin — the metal of the day. Handmade doors, tables and costumes, everything straight from the 18th Century.

Their Tavern was created for you, their friends and neighbors; most of whom they know, some they have yet to meet. Created so you can slip back in time and recapture the feeling of the Old World when friends were real, you enjoyed yourself, and were enjoyed by those who served you.

Help Us Improve

A recent 10,000 all telephone survey of my Tavern showed 93.2% of those surveyed rated Food, Service and Facilities 8, 9 or 10 on a scale of 1-10. Five hundred kind people thought enough to offer constructive criticism and suggestions for improvement.

Criticism: Cold food, slow service, unpaved parking lot, noisy cold building, too much food, too long of a wait for dinner on weekends.

To improve your dining pleasure we have already installed new food covers and plate warmers, service computer, ventilation improvements, new varied menu and parking lot pavement. I think the new Taverns and Restaurants, are trying to help with the last one.

If you have a complaint or suggestion for improvement write to me, tell me. You'll be surprised at what you'll get in return and how fast we will act on it.

Skippers Beat Middleboro To Turn Season Around

One win may not mean a winning season. But it sure has Cohasset thinking that baseball season has turned around. Ironically, though, in addition to the win, a loss may have been the real psychological turning point for Coach Ev Dorr's Skippers.

It started last week when Cohasset had South Shore League powerhouse Hull hanging on the ropes, ripe for a knockout. But the young Skippers weren't able to deliver the knockout punch, and the Pirates escaped via a six-run rally in the seventh inning to pull it out, 9-4.

"If it was anyone's fault it was mine," declared Coach Door. "I called to walk a Hull slugger to fill the bases, but the strategy backfired."

"But you'd never have known we lost after the game. The kids actually were the happiest they'd been all season coming so close to knocking off a club like Hull. I really think it may have been the turning point for us."

It was last Monday.

Cohasset's opposition was Middleboro, also right up there in contention for SSL honors and a team which had beaten the Skippers, 9-0, in their first encounter earlier in the season.

When the smoke cleared this time around, Cohasset had turned the tables on Middleboro, 4-0, for their second win of the season.

Winning pitcher was sophomore Billy Kurtz, who thus posted his first varsity victory as a moundsman.

Kurtz struck out three and walked only four in collecting the shutout.

Cohasset scored in the very first inning on an error.

But in the fourth, Tom Piperbrink singled knocking in two more runs to send the Skippers up by 3-0.

And in the fifth, Fred Espinosa slammed a triple, then trotted home when Catcher Jim Sullivan delivered in the clutch with a single.

"We left 11 men on base, so the hitting was there," related Dorr. "But it was a tremendous game for the kids who really showed their stuff coming back from the Hull loss. They could have been down after coming so close against Hull. But they didn't quit. Now I think we're ready to win some more games."

The Skippers already have equalled their record of two victories of a season ago so there's no place to go but up in Dorr's book.

So elated was Dorr he took his wife out to dinner at the Alewife Tavern in Norwell after Monday's victory.

If the Skippers live up to their Coach's expectations, Mrs. Dorr may enjoy quite a few more dinners out.

HIGH, HARD ONE — Mike Jones, relief pitcher for the Cohasset varsity baseball team, lets fly in warmup session as Catcher Mike MacDonald awaits the pitch.

Softballers Hard On Hanover, 9-4

Staging a five run rally, Cohasset softballers surmounted a 4-4 tie to defeat Hanover, 9-4 last week and up their record to 6-1 in the South Shore League.

Karen Froio sparked Cohasset's first rally to overhaul a 3-1 Hanover lead with a two-run single that tied the game at 3-all in the fourth.

Cohasset then took the lead on Lindsay Gilmore's sacrifice that scored Shelly Townsend in the fifth, only to see Hanover tie in the sixth.

But Froio came through again with a double scoring Andrea Featherston and Heather Fairchild in the sixth, and Jodi Sandblom singled in another run to sew it up.

Diane Maloney was the winning pitcher giving up seven hits.

Hanover Tough On Skippers

Hanover proved too tough for Cohasset's baseball team last week, whipping the Skippers, 11-0, as Indian pitcher Dave Duke pitched no-hit ball until the fourth inning when Paul Plante ended that at least with a sharp single.

Net Girls Hold On To 2nd Place

With a 5-0 conquest of Hull, Cohasset's girls tennis team held second place in the South Shore League last week and improved its record to 6-1.

Lauren O'Connnor, 6-1, 6-0; Kerry Salvado, 6-4, 6-2 and Sue Pottinger, 6-2, 6-0, gave the Skippers a sweep of the singles.

Sue Dalrymple and Karen Murphy won their doubles match, 6-4, 6-1.

Abington threw a scare into Cohasset's girls tennis team, but the Skippers survived, 3-2, over the still winless Green Wave. Down, 2-1, Karen Murphy and Sue Dalrymple and Leslie Carroll and Mia Graham won their doubles matches to overhaul the Wave.

Lauren O'Connor won her singles match, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, but Kerry Salvador and Liz Whelan both bowed, leaving it up to the doubles tandems to deliver which they did.

Murphy-Dalrymple won, 6-3, 6-5 and Caroll-Graham, 6-1, 6-2.

diamond merchant and jeweler since 1915

There's more to the cut of a diamond than the shape

The beauty of a diamond is how it handles light. A properly cut diamond will allow its 58 facets to act like tiny mirrors reflecting the light back through the top in a brilliant, rainbow blaze.

A shallow diamond appears larger, but less brilliant because much of the light has leaked out the bottom and is not reflected to your eye.

A diamond cut too deep is less brilliant and appears black in the middle because the light has leaked through the sides.

Reflection Of Community

Cemetery Art Reflects History

By Nancy Burns

Cemeteries are more than a place to bury the dead. In New England they are an expression of history, a glimpse into the attitude and character of the community, and an example of the varied art form of local citizenry.

Cohasset offers fine examples of the varied carving styles prevalent during the 18th century at Central Cemetery on Joy Place and Beechwood Cemetery on Beechwood Road.

Both cemeteries offer examples of skeletons, winged souls, idealized cherubim and many are decorated with symbols of mortality, symbols of fertility, vegetables, hearts, flowers, vines, sunbursts, sunflowers, skull and cross bones, and hourglasses.

The artistry of the carver varies from stone to stone. Many of the early stones are barely etched into the slate, done in rudimentary strokes with portraiture consisting of little more than an oval with eyes, nose and mouth.

Others have a richness of graphidesign and are superbly executed by a master craftsman in three dimensional form. The more expert the craftsman the more intricate and deeply etched the carved design.

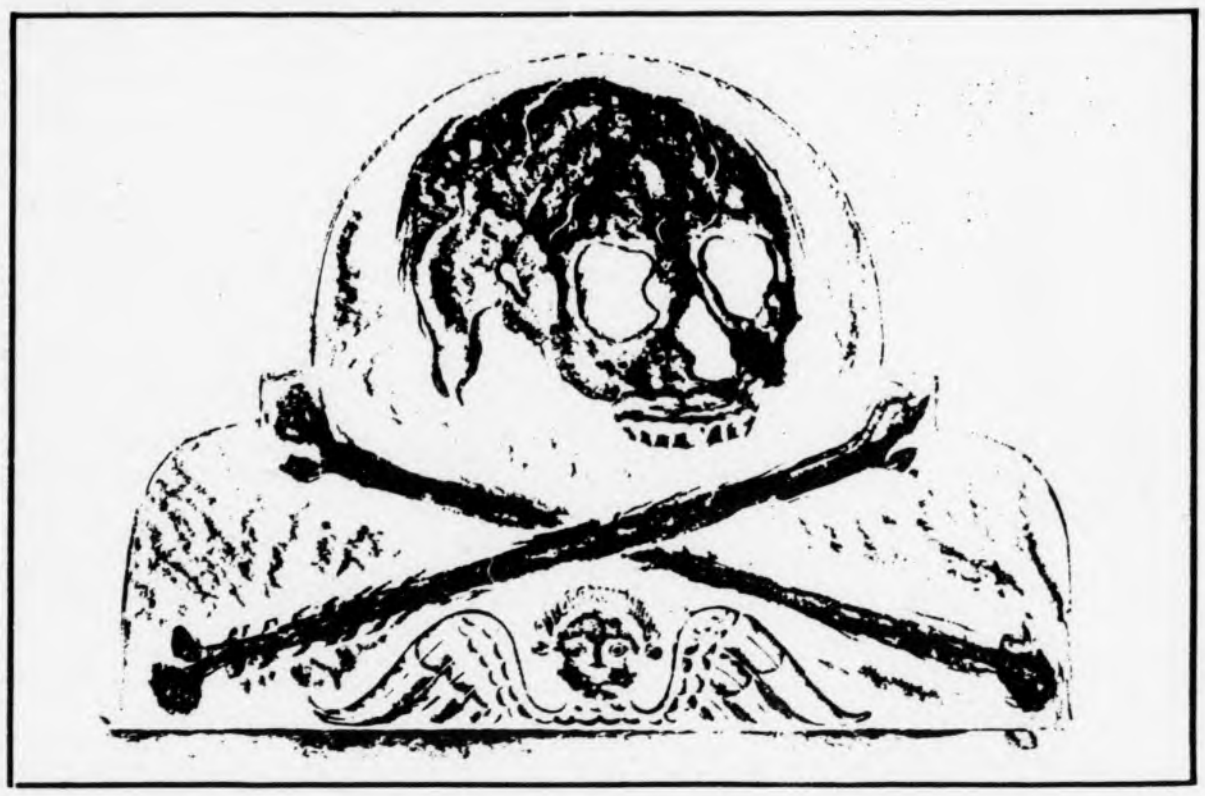
Best examples of New England carving styles occur in the 18th and 17th centuries. Around 1800 the carving styles changed dramatically and the stereotyped urn-and-willow design is suddenly found all over New England. Historians thought for some time that many of the stones were imported from England but Harriette Forbes, in her book, "Gravestones of Early New England and the Men Who Made Them, 1653-1800" discounts that theory.

A few of the stones may have come to the colonies as ballast in the early days but it wasn't long before rich supplies of natural materials were found. The Isle of Slate in Boston Harbor was mentioned in public records in 1650 as being free for any man to make use of slate.

Quarries at Squantam existed as early as 1724 and also in Cambridge. In Plymouth County green schist was used as well as red and brown sandstones from Connecticut.

Many of the men credited by Forbes for particular carving styles held other occupations such as slaters, masons, cordwainers who not only made and repaired shoes but did more ornamental kinds of leather work, woodcarving and other related crafts.

To the Puritan, death was an every day occurence. The stones were intended to honor the dead and serve as a reminder to the living. Since many could not read even English, let alone many of the Latin inscriptions, the carving and its symbolism provided a visual message for all.



Another source of joy to the avid gravestone seeker is the epitaph inscribed on the tombstone. On old tombstones can be found keys to the local or national history; bitter commentaries on life; speculations and affirmations of immortality; stories of ancient loves and shattered dreams; in short a hint of the joys and frustrations of mankind.

Inscriptions were taken not only from the Bible but also from books of devotional verse and many an aspiring poet or clergyman contributed to the epitaph.

Only a century or two ago ready-made verses could be selected from books available just as a greeting card is available. Use of book verses explains why many stones have the same epitaph.

It is apparent from the gravestones and engravings

Cemetery Art

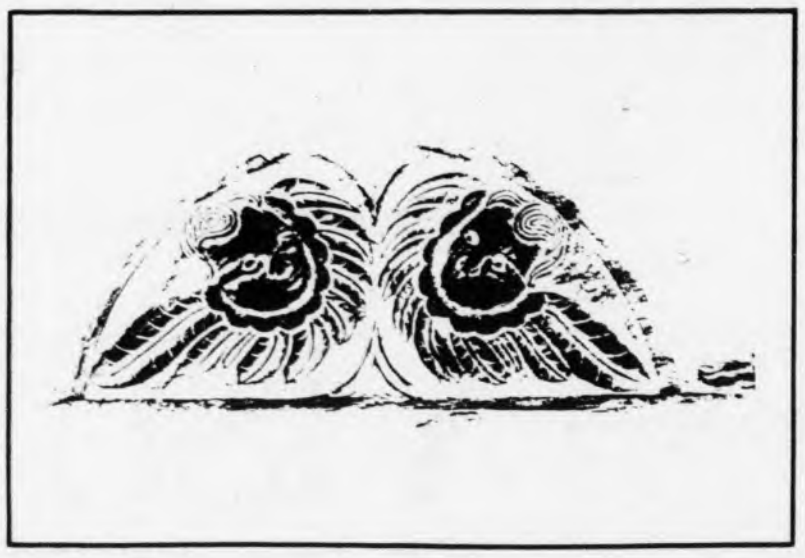
that Cohasset is a coastal community and its history intertwined with seafaring and its consequences. Off Jerusalem Road surrounded by woods and swampy brush is a raised cemetery where two seafarers were lost at sea; David Lincoln in Nov. 1879 and Capt. Cornelius Lincoln in Nov. 1883.



The Beechwood Cemetery offers examples of the winged skull and soul carvings but many of the stones are badly deteriorated or overgrown with lichen.

Life expectancy is now around 72 years for men and 80 years for women but such was not the case 200 years ago. Three stones for Whitcom children in the Beechwood Cemetery attest to this fact. Elizabeth Whitcom, aged three years, and Hannah Whitcom, aged eight years, children of Isreal and Hannah Whitcom, both died in March 1737. Three years earlier their brother, Job, aged six years, died on March 27, 1734.

Nearby are three small stones for the children of Stephen and Mary Stodder who died in Jan. 1748. Davied, aged eight years, and Sarah, aged ten years, both died on Jan. 24 and their sister, Ann, aged four years died on Jan. 21.

Because the children all died within a few days of each other it is safe to assume it was from some dread scourge such as smallpox or cholera.

A large white marble monument in the Central Cemetery for Francis L. Pratt, 1818-1897 and his wife, Sarah, 1823-1875, and their six children causes a moment of sad reflection.

Listed are the children, none of whom lived to adulthood, and three sons named Ezekiel. The first Ezekiel died July 7, 1851, aged one year; the second Sept. 4, 1852, ages six months; and the last some years later in 1865 at one year.

Nearby is another white marble sphere for Ezekiel Pratt, M.D. which says he was "born on the memorable dark day, May 20, 1880 and died Oct. 9. 1860 aged 80 years and five months." Exactly why his birth was on a memorable dark day is not known.

There is an interesting double stone in the center of the cemetery which merely has engraved "Two infants, 1790" but nearby is a double stone with the usual winged skull which attests to the death of twin boys born to Thomas and Betty Bourn. The undecorated stone is probably the footstone.

Born on September 3, 1970, one died the sixth and the other the ninth of the same month.

Multiple births seemed to run in the Bourn family for next to the twins' stone is one for triplets of another Thomas Bourn. It says, "Here lyes the body of three children born at abirth, sons of Mr. Thomas Bourn and Mrs. Susanna Bourn, who died Oct. 30, 1764."

Thomas Bourn, father of the triplets is buried nearby. He died Oct. 10, 1796 in his 67th year. His stone has an interesting epitaph, "This is the lot by heaven defind, to be the fate of all mankind, Death is a debth to nature due, which i body paid and so must you."

Although it does not say, the two Bourn men are probably father and son, which would account for the inherited tendency for multiple births.

Thomas Bourn, the son, appears to have been married twice, since there's a nearby stone "In memory of Mrs. Jane Bourn, consort of Mr. Thomas Bourn, died June 9th, 1787, aged 19 years." Her epitaph reads "Some hearty friends may drop a tear, On these dry bones & say, These limbs where active once like mine, but mine must be as they." Where is used instead of were, which could be due to a misspelling on the part of the engraver.

A white slab marble stone near the center entrance to the Central Cemetery chronicles the settling in America of the Pratt family. The stone was erected by the descendants of the original Pratt settlers sometime in the 1800s since white marble was rarely used before then.

It says, "Phinehas Pratt, came over from England with the Weston Colony in 1623, and first settled in Weymouth. The Indians threatening to destroy the colonies, he travelled in the then wilderness, with the Indians following to destroy him, after three days, he arrived at Plymouth and gave information to the Governor, and by the blessing of God the colony was saved."

He died at Charlestown April 19, 1680, aged 90 years and has a tombstone yet to be seen. One of his sons Aaron, settled in this place and died in 1735 aged 81 years. Aaron, 2nd, his son died aged 77 years. Thomas son of Aaron 2nd, died 1818, aged 85 years. Sarah, his wife died 1806, aged 62 years."

While the Pratt family in Cohasset may not have found the Phinehas Pratt stone, Harriette Forbes, in her book, "Gravestones of Early New England and the Men Who Made Them 1653-1800" mentions it and shows a picture of the stone.

Decorated with a winged skull, hourglass, pick and spade and a few words of Latin the stones says, "Here lies ye body of Phinehas Pratt aged about 90 yrs. Decd April 19, 1680 & was one of ye first English inhabitants of ye Massachusetts Colony."

Another interesting stone is one for Urian Oakes which has a finely carved skull and crossed bones with a winged soul underneath. It says, "Here lies buried the body of Mr. Urian Oakes, who died Febry 1st, 1776, aged 47 years & 2 months. Who mourn his loss suppress ye pious tears, ye wish him out of heaven to wish him here."

The skull and cross bones on the Oakes stone is representative of the kind of work done by Captain John Homer of Boston, a known associate of colonists working for liberty from England. From 1758 to 1797 Capt. Homer was paid for about forty stones, according to Forbes in her book.

A visit to the Central Cemetery wouldn't be complete without admiring the largest monument in it. A large marble cross, towering 20 to 30 feet in the air, was erected in 1914 to commemorate the final resting place of about 45 Irish emigrants from a total company of 99 who lost their lives on Crampus Ledge off Cohasset, Oct. 7, 1848 in the wreck of the Brig St. John from Galway Ireland.

Many of the epitaphs and carvings are difficult to read and have begun to deteriorate with age, but can be discerned if a gravestone rubbing is taken.

Rubbing is simply the process of producing on a sheet of paper a copy of the engraving on a stone by rubbing a piece of colored wax over the paper, which is held against the stone. There are several other methods of rubbing but this is the simplest and easiest.

To begin a collection of engravings or epitaphs one needs only basic tools. To begin a child's crayon may be used and white paper, but once enamored of the process special paper, such as rice paper, and wax crayons can be bought at art supply stores.

Finding an art supply store that stocks appropriate paper is not easy and the devotee may find it necessary to travel to Boston to find the necessary supplies. A carpenter's crayon can be found at most hardware stores and works quite well for rubbing.

A stiff, but not wire brush, should be used to clean the stone of loose moss or lichen before the paper is taped with masking tape to cover the design.

Many communities prohibit rubbing but Cohasset does not. It would be best, however, if interested persons checked with the police department before setting out to do some rubbing, instead of meeting up with police after some concerned citizen reported vandals in the graveyard.

Patrolman Feola Suspended

Cohasset Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr., was suspended with pay by Selectmen last week pending the court disposition of five charges brought against him by Hull Police.

Feola, son of Police Chief Randolph Feola, was charged with driving under the influence, speeding, failing to keep to the right, failing to carry a driver's license and carrying a dangerous weapon. Feola pleaded innocent to the charges at Hingham District Court Tuesday morning.

A pre-trial conference will be held on June 20 with Feola's lawyer, Melvin Lewison of Brockton, and the Hull prosecutor, Patrolman Feola said this week. "My lawyer will say everything for me when the time is right," he added.

Feola was suspended without pay for five days in December, a disciplinary measure handed down by his father for using "poor judgment" in an off-duty motor vehicle complaint by Scituate and Cohasset police. No charges in connection with that incident were brought against Feola.

Feola's current suspension will leave the Police Department short two patrolmen. Selectmen said Chief Feola indicated that he could reschedule his men.

An emergency Selectmen's meeting was held Thursday night so that Selectmen could discuss with Chief Feola the "apparent difficulty" his son is in. After an hour long executive session, Selectmen unanimously voted the suspension.

"There is very little we can do. He's innocent until proven guilty," Selectman Henry Ainslie said. "Even though there are several charges against him, he may be found guilty of some or none. The Selectmen will decide from there," Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark added.

Reporters at the meeting were denied access to a copy of the charges against Feola issued by the Hull Police Department as Selectmen claimed that the document wasn't public. Town Counsel Blake Thaxter confirmed the legality of their refusal later that week.

"This is the best we could for for him," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said, but speculated that a Civil Service ruling could override future action by the Board. Ainslie said that a possible Civil Service decision would not affect their say in the case.

School Committee Appoints Stockbridge By A 3-2 Vote

Charles Stockbridge, an untenured fourth grade teacher at the Deer Hill School, was reappointed for the 1979-1980 school year by the School Committee this week.

The reappointment was approved after motions passed to reconsider and rescind the tie vote of two weeks ago that failed to rehire Stockbridge. Three Committee members — Diana Kornet, Irene Brown and Jack Langmaid — approved the reappointment. Martha Gjesteby and Frank England opposed and Patricia Walsh abstained.

Resident Frederick Gamst read aloud a prepared statement supporting Stockbridge's reappointment and outlining customary procedural "due process" in the evaluation and rehiring of school staff.

"All of Mr. Stockbridge's many evaluations have been consistently uniform and on the highest level that is recommended," the statement said. It further noted that nothing existed in Stockbridge's personnel file to serve as a basis

Portuguese Tradition

By Roger Leonard

The Azores Archipelago lies in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean between Europe and North America, 7600 miles from Lisbon and 2110 miles from New York. It consists of nine islands — St. Miguel, St. Jorge, Faial, Flores, St. Maria, Graciosa, Terceira, Corvo and Pico.

The islands were discovered by the Portuguese navigator and explorer Frei Goncalo Velho Cabral in 1427. He was a seafarer of Prince Henry, the navigator. Owing to their geographical situation, the Azores were once of paramount importance as a port of call for ships bound for the new world as well as those returning from India. For this reason the islands were continually raided and looted by Moorish, French and English pirates, causing pillage and strife among its population. It wasn't until 1832 a prefecture was established. Soon afterwards, the islands were divided into three political districts annexed to Portugal's dominion. Today it's a province.

Upon Cabral's arrival at Santa Maria, the first island to be discovered, he noticed a profusion of goshawks as he approached the snug harbor. Goshawks swooped again and again near his sails. Thus these islands were named... acor pronounced (a-sohr) which means goshawk.

Unique and rather curious is the subject of Portuguese immigration to the Americas. They did not purchase tickets or crowd steerage quarters aboard passenger vessels. Nor did they have passports processed at Ellis Island, not undergo the human indignity of physical examination to determine whether they were carriers of social or communicable disease. Few were naturalized.

They worked their way across the vastness of the Atlantic Ocean as whaleship recruits or deck hands arriving principally at Gloucester, Nantucket, New Bedford, Provincetown, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and even Brazil. Most did not come from Portugal but the Azores or Western Isles.

Dogs (Owners) Best Friend Officer Barrett

By Judith Epstein

Why on earth would anyone want to be a dog officer? Cohasset Dog Officer Jack Barrett claims it's a labor of love derived from a love of dogs. And people!

It would have to be. According to Barrett, his three years as the town's part-time officer has been spent settling disagreements between people whose dogs have offended someone somehow. The dogs appear to be go-betweens Barrett explained, providing the tangible evidence needed in the way of canine misbehavior to get a full-fledged feud going between neighbors.

There is no bonafide leash law in Cohasset, which complicates matters, Barrett said. The town's bylaw says that no dogs are permitted to run upon public or private property without the express permission of the owner, occupant or custodian of that property. What this means in effect, Barrett said, is that dogs wind up having the run of the land until they disturb someone or until a complaint comes in.

Complaints go to Barrett usually when a dog bites, barks, howls, messes or in any other way disturbs the peace, safety and quiet of the neighborhood. "The calls come in spurts," Barrett said, attesting that there didn't seem to be a continuous stream of dog problems in Cohasset nor continuous streams of irate telephone complaints.

"Occasionally a call will come in at 2 a.m. about a dog barking," Barrett said, and explained that all he can do at that hour is to have the caller notify the dog's owners if they are home and discourage further late night phone calls.

An official complaint form is required to be filled out when Barrett checks on dog owners to ascertain the problem. If it is a nuisance situation, such as barking or getting into rubbish Barrett will contact the dog's owner to have him correct the dog's misconduct. A

Ainslie continued, "I hate to see these things happen. We have good reports on him while he's on duty as we've had on others who have been discharged."

Ainslie believes there is no bias on the part of the chief toward his son. "He (Feola Jr.) is being treated like anybody else," he remarked.

Clark reiterated Ainslie's report of Feola's work record. "When he's on duty, he's a good policeman," he said.

Chief Feola didn't feel that his son's position on the police force was in particular danger. He has often referred to his son as one of the best policemen on the South Shore. About the case's outcome, he stated, "I can't surmise anything. I can't make any prophesies until the case is adjudicated."

Concerning the charge that Feola, Jr. was carrying a knife, the Chief remarked that he sometimes carries a buck knife himself. "I've always got one in the car with me," he said, in case an accident victim needs to be cut away from seatbelts.

Chief Feola said he apprised his son of the suspension by telephone that evening.

Annual 'Pops' Concert

On Friday, May 18, the Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School Music Department will present their annual 'Pops' Concert in the high school auditorium at 7:30 p.m. featuring performances by the Junior High Concert Band, Senior Concert Band and prize-winning Jazz-Rock Ensemble.

Musical selections will run the spectrum from marches to light classics as well as some of the contemporary music from movies and Broadway. High school band members Lisa Kurtz and Chris Williams will be featured in concerto numbers.

Of special note will be the annual awards presentation honoring outstanding instrumentalists from all performing groups as well as graduating senior band members.

Refreshments will be available through the efforts of the CHS Band Parents and student volunteers.

Children's Television Impacts Film Topic

What's really happening on children's television? What impact are advertising and stereotypes having on our children?

"Kids for Sale", a new film produced by Action for Children's Television, will be shown, Wednesday, May 23rd at Cohasset High School at 8 p.m. The film is part of a program on children's broadcasting sponsored by the Joseph Osgood School Communications Council and open to the general public. A representative from ACT will be present to discuss creative guidelines for television viewing as well as possible alternatives.

ACT is a consumer action group based in Newtonville. The organization was started in 1968 and now has over 11,000 members.

Cohasset Penpals Exchange News

"I like it in Cohasset. Do you like it in Cohasset?"

That conversation did not take place in Cohasset, Mass. Actually, it's part of an exchange between two 8-year-old correspondents — one from Cohasset, Mass., the other from Cohasset, Minnesota.

Mrs. Marie Price, a second grade teacher at the Joseph Osgood School, was attracted by a story that read, "Zero degrees is a heat wave in Cohasset (Minn.)" Intrigued by the characteristics of another town with the same name, Mrs. Price shared it with her second grade class. The kids were interested, too, in this 'other' Cohasset, and it was decided they'd write to Minnesota. The real excitement began when they received answers to their letters from the second graders at Cohasset Elementary!

The Minnesota boys and girls thought it was great to hear from second graders in a second Cohasset. Their teacher, Miss Dahlberg, wrote back about their town.

"Cohasset, Minn. is a small community of about 470 people. Many live in rural areas. People farm, work for M.P. & L., Blandin Paper Co., log wood or land business jobs in Grand Rapids (nearby city of 8,000)." Thinking their own Cohasset small, Mrs. Price's class tried to imagine another Cohasset, slightly larger in population than theirs.

The children's letters — from both Cohassets — are treasures. They are spontaneous, proud, curious, wise — full of all that's important to eight year olds. They talk about their favorite things — people, pets and activities.

The Minnesota Cohasset has lots of farms, lakes and long, snowy winters. "I live on a lake and there are lots of fish . . . I live on a farm and we have baby rabbits and many other animals . . . I have some cows, a horse and other animals."

Two writers recall the same incident, "I live on a lake. Sue Riley got stuck in our lake . . . My lake is full of mud and once Sue Riley got stuck in our lake."

Some ride mini-bikes, go bob-sledding, deliver papers. Most have pets. They write of losing loved ones with disarming frankness. "I feel sorry for my Grandma because she died in her sleep . . . We used to have seven cats but three ran away and one died so now we only have three." They acclaim their teacher, "My teacher is nice to kids . . .I love my teacher!"

Interests and concerns among the Massachusetts kids are similar, "Are you learning the time tables? We are . . . Is your room clean or messy? My room is messy . . . I like to swim in the Summer . . . How many friends do you have?" Meet my teacher, "My teacher's name is Mrs. Price. Her first name is Marie. She is very nice to the class."

One boy writes about Minot's Light, "I have a boat. I have gone to an island in the harbor. I have gone to the lighthouse. It blinks at night. The light says, I love you." And on many an 8-year-old's mind, "In Boston there's a game called baseball. Our team is called the Red Sox."

Mrs. Price's class has already had experience in letter writing. They have been corresponding with students in England. That exchange of ideas and customs began through Mrs. Price's friendship with a former student teacher, Terry England, who works there now. In addition to being a good, creative writing lesson for the kids, they have gained new friends and some familiarity with English life and terminology. They delight in using new words like plimpsoles (sneakers), buggie (bird), potato crisps (potato chips), and rubber (eraser).

Many letters between these new Cohasset friends mentioned visiting each other and ended this way, "I enjoyed your letter. I would like to be your pen pal." Pen pals usually live so far away from one another that it's unlikely they'll ever meet. That fact is not a concern to these kids who think and write in the realm of the possible. To get "up" to Minnesota or "down" to Massachusetts for Cohasset pen pals is a real, potential journey.

Stockbridge

for dismissal and that such dismissal should be only for compelling reasons.

"A duly processed recommendation for reappointment based upon a wholly and highly satisfactory record, as in the present case, cannot be reversed by that which could be seen as innuendo carried outside of the legitimate process of evaluation," the statement continued.

"To do so would engender distrust in the evaluation process on the part of all of our teachers; this in turn would undermine our community quest for education excellence."

The statement concluded by enumerating Stockbridge's capabilities — his insistence on proper classroom discipline, traditional manners, and respect for the rights of others — as well as a strong recommendation for reappointment.

Committee member Walsh questioned Superintendent's John Maloney's basis for his recommendation to rehire Stockbridge. Maloney responded that the Committee had his previous evaluation in writing, and that he had followed the exact standard operating procedure in making the recommendation.

England noted, as a general purpose to the statement, that the School Committee is bound to operate under different laws when reappointing tenured and untenured teachers. The just cause process to which the statement referred, England said, applied to the reappointment of tenured teachers. The School Committee does have the right not to vote for an untenured teacher without stating a reason, he said.

The 30 residents, teachers and members of the administration loudly applauded the reappointment of Stockbridge.

Editorial

Reaffirmation

"We shall focus on what happens here — at the churches, in the schools, at town hall and around town... We aim to be constructive, cohesive and friendly."

In October, shortly before the first Cohasset Mariner rolled off the press, we wrote an introductory editorial outlining our reason for being. It included the excerpts above. Now, having been around for eight months and risen into orbit, we think it appropriate to reaffirm our purpose for entering so highly a competitive field that has grown more competitive since we began.

Stating our purpose is easy, because it hasn't changed in eight months and won't change in eight more months or in eight more years. As we said from the start, the Cohasset Mariner is a community newspaper bent on publishing Cohasset news for and about Cohasset people. It is nothing more and nothing less.

Community is the key word here. It underscores our goal to remain local, of course, but more than that, it requires a certain give and take be at work. It demands a close rapport that will allow readers to have an influence over what is published.

The word "community" also implies a degree of local boosterism that does not have a place in larger newspapers or in newspaper chains run from the outside. It should not suggest that we will ignore or avoid unpleasant news. Nothing of the sort. But it does mean that we won't accentuate the negative or subscribe to the old newspaper saw that bad news is good news. There are too many positive things to report.

In eight months, we have worked to become a community newspaper with all that the word "community" implies. Read the Mariner this week, compare it to a Mariner of six months ago and you'll see the thread uncut. It is Cohasset news — all Cohasset news — and if that be parochial, we plead guilty again. Trying to cover the world or even a chunk of the South Shore was never our purpose. We staked out the local route and we plan to stay on it.

Eight months is not a long time in the history of a newspaper, and it would be presumptious to say we have arrived in so short a time. But we are arriving. The response to a strictly Cohasset paper for Cohasset people has been strong and continues to grow. We are grateful for it.

Banging the local yokel drum should not be equated with a call for amatuerism. Though we would be the first to say the Mariner has shortcomings (well, maybe not the first), we can say with confidence that the paper is written, edited and produced by professionals who know their business. We are proud of our staff.

Finally, we can say without equivication that every effort is made here to present the news without bias. We have no axes to grind, no political corners to stake out. We believe that objectivity and fairness are cornerstones of all journalism — as important to the Mariner as they are to The New York Times.

Around Town Hall

EXTRA MONEY

Extra money from the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration (FDAA) was approved for two Cohasset 1978 storm-related projects, Selectman Arthur Clark reported last week. The $6300 partial contract that had been approved for seawall repairs between Hugo's parking lot and the boatyard will be buoyed at $9600, the amount of the low bid for the construction.

An additional $200 will also be allowed to pay for the transportation of ramps and floats for the harbor.

CZM APPLICATION

The towns of Cohasset and Hull are requesting $8000 in Coastal Zone Management (CZM) assistance for additional Straits Pond studies. The towns will commit matching funds of $2000 in order to fund the study.

The towns have both appropriated up to $10,000 for a technical engineering study which will serve to define problems of eutrophication in Straits Pond and to establish, through specific recommendation, a long term program of reclamation.

The CZM grant would enable appropriations to be expended on the implementation of the first phase of the actual reclamation program.

INSURANCE LAW

Whether or not a new federal law allowing both single and married women carrying individual insurance policies to add maternity benefits to their policy affects the Town of Cohasset has been referred to Town Counsel J. Blake Thaxter for a ruling.

Last week Selectmen received a report from a representative of Blue Cross/Blue Shield, the insurance company covering town employees. She advised the board and members of various town departments that the new mandatory maternity benefits must be made available to female employees with individual policies or the town may be held liable for maternity expenses not made available to them

Should Town Counsel find that Cohasset is a municipality covered by the law, then it would be up to Cohasset as employer to add the benefit premiums for the maternity coverage. Individual monthly rates would increase from $40.54 to $42.10; family premiums would increase from $107.02 to $107.10 if the individual policy maternity benefits were added.

DECOR WANTED

Theresa Williams asked Selectmen Wednesday night if she could decorate her family lots at Woodside Cemetery with low rose bush hedges, her departed husband's favorite flowers. She offered to plant the bushes and to manage upkeep herself.

Selectmen were concerned about the maintenance of the hedges should she be unable to and recommended that she discuss the matter with Tree and Park Superintendent Peter Laugelle.

Mrs. Williams vehemently objected to the barrenness of the lots, which are not allowed extensive planting. Selectmen claimed that she knew the cemetery rules and regulations when she bought the lots. Mrs. Williams said she knew nothing of the stipulations and was in receipt of the deed only.

CEMETERY STUDY

The Cemetery Study Committee is now completed with members John Rhodes, John Souther, and Robert Davenport. The Committee will examine ways in which space can be better used in town cemeteries.

APPOINTMENT MADE

David Wadsworth, Town Hall record archivist, has been appointed to the Historical Commission.

PERSONNEL COMMITTEE

The Personnel Committee is changing their meeting from the second Wednesday of the month to the second Monday. Meetings will not be held in July and August.

Selectmen will submit to the Personnel Committee the recommendation that the salary for James Litchfield, Building Inspector and Zoning Officer, be raised $1000, or reclassified to S12. Litchfield's current salary is approximately $14,500.

BYLAW CHANGES

Changes in the vacation bylaw per order of Town Meeting should read calendar and not fiscal year where applicable.

DECISION POSTPONED

Selectmen requested from Civil Service that their decision on the appointment of a new patrolman for the Police Department be delayed until their meeting Wednesday night this week. The decision was to have been made Monday.

MORE ON SANDY BEACH

The Sandy Beach Association will return the information they have garnered on the restoration needs of the beach to Selectman Arthur Clark within a month. Clark has been designated by the Association to officially request for an extension until the fall for use of the $55,000 in FDAA money intended for a sand restoration project at Sandy Beach.

Clark said last week that the Disaster Recovery Team indicated that extension of the funds would be possible.

HARBOR DREDGED

Julian Dredging Company performed a maintenance dredging project at Government Island Pier recently, and also removed 16 pilings in a few days that had prohibited use of that area by commercial and pleasure boats for a long, long time, according to Harbormaster Harry Ritter.

The problem that existed was that on a minus tide, Ritter explained, the commercial fishing boats were delayed three-quarters to an hour before they could take on bait, fuel, or lobster pots from the pier.

The dredging project consisted of removing 450 cubic yards of mud and silt to alleviate the problems so that fishermen can now get into the pier at any time without waiting, Ritter said. The new depth at Government Island Pier is now eight feet, whereas before it was four and a half to six feet.

There were 16 piles removed in front of the pier that were not taken out in the 1956 removal of the wooden structure attached to the pier. "That's how long it takes to get something done around here," Ritter remarked.

Tribute To Francis Downs

1883-1979

By Joanne Young

I met Frances Downs in the last months of her long and productive life, and am sorry I did not know her sooner. She never felt that living out her life in its last years was eventful or important, as she watched the passing parade from her flower-filled window in the Ripley Road Nursing Home.

She greatly missed her pretty home on James Lane, filled with loving memories of her family and friends. Fannie spoke of her gardens, her family pets and the good times spent there with her mother, father, and sisters. She was a loyal daughter and sister, a talented secretary, an excellent horsewoman and gardener, and a sharing friend.

It was most joyful to be in her company and share her memories of a serene and loving life lived quietly and with grace and good humor in the gentle world of her childhood and womanhood.

Fannie loved life and lived it well and with elan in her beloved Cohasset. With her twinkling eyes and soft smile, she would be the first to dispute this tribute, but she was confidently ready for this last new adventure.

Goodbye, Fan. It was my good fortune to know you for just a little while.

Dogs Best Friend Officer Barrett

second complaint, or if the owner refuses to comply with Barrett's request, may find its way to the Selectmen's office, the only body with the authority to issue a restraining order on a dog. If a restraining order is issued, the dog must be under control by its owner at all times.

"In 20% of cases, people will do something about the dog themselves, but 80% don't. People don't take care of their dogs," Barrett said.

"They buy a puppy, and it's cute. But then it grows into a dog. When I confront people about their dogs, they're immediately on the defensive, worse than they'd be with their kids. It's really bad."

However, when a dog bites or vicious behavior is reported, the animal must be restrained for 10 days, the incubation period for rabies, per order of the Board of Health. A permanent restraining order on such a dog would be issued by Selectmen.

"Usually when a dog is restrained, owners comply," Barrett said. "If they don't the dog will be ordered destroyed or removed from the town." Barrett doesn't think the latter option is just. "A bad dog in Cohasset would be a bad dog anywhere else, but that's not the way the law works." However, there is rarely a need for a official dog hearing, he said.

"A little effort would make any dog a good dog," Barrett believes. He advised owners to neuter all male and spay females not intended for breeding. The idea is to keep dogs at home, off other people's property and to avoid paternity suits, he said laughingly.

Some dog cases in Cohasset Barrett has witnessed and worked with have been classics in humor, pathos and human nature.

. . . Did somebody say "Dog Officer?"

Barrett related the tale of a German Shepard dog that had to be shot a few weeks ago. Apparently the dog had adopted a summer home as its own territory and viciously refused to let the resident who owned the property enter the house.

Barrett tried in vain to slip a noose around the dog's neck so he could remove it to Kreshingham Kennell in Hingham, Cohasset's dog pound. Finally, Barrett approved the decision to shoot the dog, as the safety of all concerned was in continuous jeopardy.

There was also the case of the two oldtimers who lived about 100 feet apart. One accused the other's dog of having killed his rabbits. But the dog's actual identity remained in question. Barrett went to investigate. He was walking around through a tall garden in the backyard of the accuser's home when he noticed both neighbors stalking the peripheries of their property with shotguns. Barrett said he hightailed it out of there, not stopping to ask questions lest he be mistaken for the marauding dog.

Another fine summer morning found Barrett in the middle of the road on a cul-de-sac in town, again trying to settle a dog dispute. It was Sunday, Barrett said, and church music was wafting from the open windows into the morning air. Intermingling with what otherwise would have been a state of peace and grace were the raging expletives flying past Barrett from the neighbor who had been kept up all night directed at his neighbor across the street, none other than the owner of the yipping nocturnal dog.

Many dog complaints end when residents move away or die.

"Sometimes it's a hate situation between people in a neighborhood," Barrett observed, and although he often gets dragged in, he's thankful when the repetitive problems resolve themselves.

Barrett's concluding remarks emphasized the needfor dog owners to assume more responsibility for their pets. He said there are 700 licensed dogs in Cohasset, probably 75% of all the dogs in town. Proper licensing would help in locating lost dogs, as well. If located in Cohasset a lost dog will be forwarded to the kennel in Hingham where ther is a 10 day holding period for the owner to claim the animal. If claimed the owner is required to pay the kennel fee and properly license and display the tag on the dog's collar.

If the animal isn't claimed after 10 days it may be euthanized. Barrett said he goes on an all-out campaign to find a home for a nice dog that doesn't appear to have a local owner. Sometimes, he said, he goes so far as to take the dog to work with him at Bay State Gas in Brockton, tie it to the handle of his car door and prop a sign on the windshield imploring passersby to take a pet home.

More often than not his efforts work, he said. It all goes to show that Jack Barrett is the best friend, and more than that, the peacemaker for Cohasset dogs.
